POLICE WERE TOO STRONG

Suffragettes Fail in Attack on House of Commons

MANY PERSONS INJURED

London, Nov. 22.—The suffragettes fared badly at the hands of the police last night. They had threatened to force their way into the House of Commons and make a protest on the floor of the House against the Prime Minister's refusal to pledge the Government to a bill giving equal suffrage to both sexes, but they failed even to reach the entrance to Parliament.

Thwarted by the police, who made upwards of 180 arrests, the suffragettes resorted to a campaign of window-smashing. Driven from Parliament square by the police, 1,800 of whom were on duty, the women, accompanied by sympathizers and gangs of rowdies, proceeded through Whitehall, armed with bags of stones concealed under their coats, and broke the windows in the public offices, the Liberal headquarters and the National Liberal Club. They even extended their operations to the Strand, where windows of the postoffice, bank and other private concerns suffered form the onslaughts.

Strong detachments of police, both on foot and mounted, guarded the streets from Caxton Hall to the House of Parliament. They broke up the deputation into units, which, when they reached the cordons surrounding the square, were thrown back, or if too persistent, were arrested and passed along to a receiving squad in the square, and thence through a double line of constables to the police station.

The greatest confusion prevailed. Several women were injured in the scramble, while others fainted or became hysterical and required the attention of the ambulance men. The battle was fierce but short.

An hour after the women emerged from the hall Parliament square had been cleared of the attacking forces, except half a dozen women who had chained themselves to the railings, and whose chains the police had to file or break.

The demonstration was not so large as those of last year. The damage to property was greater than ever, however, and the number of arrests establishes a record. Canon row station in Whitehall was crowded with prisoners and the police were occupied for hours in making charges against them. Among those arrested was Mrs. Lawrence, who is joint leader for "Votes for Women"; Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, and the Hon. Mrs. Evelina Hertield.

War Befriended Him.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 22.—Disappearing on the night that Noura was severely wounded, a year ago, James Jisi, returned here yesterday and was arrested, charged with stabbing. When the police found Noura had gone to Italy to join the army when the war broke out, Magistrate Fraser dismissed the case, there being no evidence.

New York Church Costs Million.

New York, Nov. 22.—The cornerstone of the new St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church, which is to rise at Fifth avenue and Fifty-Third street, on the site of the church burned four years ago, was laid by Bishop Greer late yesterday. The new church will cost more than $1,000,000, and will be one of the finest in America.

HAS LITTLE TO SAY

Government Silent Under Fire of the Opposition

CONTRACTS NOT AWARDED

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Parliament is sitting up and taking notice. It finds the benches to the left of Mr. Speaker people by an Opposition that is respected and feared; a company of experienced and resolute politicians, led by the master Parliamentary tactician and statesman. It seems the big battalions of Governmental strength are more than met by superiority in debating power and in vigor and confidence of attack.

There were no preliminaries. Stimulated and enthused by the inspiring generalship of the "Old Chief," the Opposition promptly renewed the attack when the House met yesterday, and kept the Government, manifestly embarrassed, ill at ease and on the defensive throughout.

Hon. J. D. Hazen made the important announcement that, of the nine tenders received for the construction of the four cruisers and destroyers contemplated by the late Government for the Canadian navy of which, though received five months before the election, they had not seen fit to make an award, the lowest, that of Camell, Laird & Co., was $11,280,000. That of Swan Hunter was $12,174,000, while another was $13,055,804.. This did not include armor plate armament or special supplies and under the terms of the contract the ships could not be completed till six years hence, when they would be obsolete. He would have been remis in his duty, he said, if he had signed a contract for any such wasteful expenditure.

F. B. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.), continued the debate on the speech from the throne.

"I wish to tell my hon. friend, the Minister of Trade and Commerce," he said, "that reciprocity is not dead as far as the Maritime Provinces are concerned. The admission of natural products into the United States would be the greatest boon that could be offered the Maritime Provinces in a generation.

"The Minister of Trade and Commerce says that we should sell in the home market. Why, we can't sell 1,000 feet of our lumber in the Maritime Provinces."

At least three-fourths of the exports in natural products, he declared, had gone to the American market and would continue to go there. No one could say that these people did not want reciprocity.

J. A. M. Aitkins (Brandon) expressed his surprise that the Opposition had begun by attempting to sow seeds of discord, east against west. The prairie provinces had prospered without the supposed benefits of reciprocity. So prosperous were they that thousands of American settlers were flocking in to share the benefits.

The farmers of Manitoba had said: "Home markets for us." They knew perfectly well that the United States exported fifteen times as much wheat as western Canada, and that reciprocity would not mean the opening of the markets of the U. S. to their natural products, but rather the reverse.

The West wished, he said, to conserve what the Liberal party had left them in natural products, whether of coal or timber, or what not. Settlers piloted by immigration agents, located by homestead agents, had prospered not by what the Liberals had done for them, but by what God Almighty and nature had done for them, somewhat naturally were influenced as regards the Government by these agents.

There was a real danger of divergence of sentiment between east and west. What had the Liberal Government done for the West? Was it the St. Andrew's locks which were fifteen years in building? Was it the National Transcontinental with its exorbitant cost of construction and the resultant effect on freight rates?

E. M. MacDonald (Pictou) took up the "unholy alliance." The Cabinet, he insisted, was not a Conservative Cabinet, it was a coalition Cabinet. Mr. Borden had capitulated to the Nationalists. The House had a right to know the terms of the capitulation, which party in the coalition had made the necessary sacrifice of principle. The Premier had not told them. He hoped the Minister of Public Works (Monk) would do so.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley referred to the denial to the Maritime Provinces of their natural market in the United States. In the able presentation of the transportation question by the last speaker, he saw confirmation of his own arguments during the campaign that, with the great St. Lawrence route, Canadian railways and boats would transport if reciprocity carried, not only the products of the Canadian, but of the American west as well.

That the United States would have under reciprocity thrown off $1,200,000 duty collected on Canadian lumber for $50 collected on American lumber, was an argument, he said, which appealed strongly to the people of New Brunswick.

Turning to the naval question, he declared it was absurd for the Government to frame a speech from the throne in which it was ignored, this, the question of which all Canadians were thinking. There was a strong ad potent force in the present administration which said we should have no navy and if we had one they should not be available to go to the assistance of the British navy.

Says Murderer Is Insane.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 22.—A declaration that Bertram G. Spencer, who is on trial for his life, charged with the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, was insane at the time the young school teacher was shot and killed was made late yesterday by Dr. E. S. Lane of Jamaica Plains, an alienist in the employ of the defence.

Another Aviator Badly Hurt.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Knid Belton, a former English army officer, studying aviation at the Pullman field here, fell 400 feet in an aeroplane yesterday. He suffered injuries which physicians say may be fatal.

FORCED GERMANY'S HAND.

Britain Threatened to Intervene In Morocco.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—The official report of the secret sitting of the budget committee of the Reichstag on Nov. 17, when Foreign Minister Von Kiderlin-Waechter made a report on Anglo-German relations as affected by the Moroccan dispute with France, was published yesterday.

The Foreign Minister's account of the interview between the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, and the German Ambassador at London, Count Wolff-Metternich and of the communications that passed between England and Germany show that the situation was most tense from July 21 to July 27 and the language used on both sides was so sharp that a peaceful outcome of the affair under the circumstances is considered most fortunate.

Great Britain, according to Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter, after receiving on July 1, an individual, as well as a general explanation of the objects of the despatch of the German warship Panther, to Agadir, remained silent until July 21. Sir Edward Grey then had a conversation with the German Ambassador, in which he declared that the time had come for Great Britain to intervene in the Franco-German negotiations, since those apparently were about to be broken off, owing to Germany's unacceptable proposals, which would raise the question of the future of Morocco, where by British interests would be affected. He requested an explanation of the German designs at Agadir.

The ambassador replied sharply that the Minister had no right to state that Germany had made unacceptable demands, nor had Great Britain had any right to intervene in the negotiations on the mere supposition that Germany eventually was aiming at a naval base at Agadir, for which there was no proof. He challenged the British Foreign Secretary to specify any British interests affected by the German action. He suggested that intervention had better be postponed until this could be done.

Germany then sent a formal reply giving assurance that she had never contemplated a naval base at Agadir nor the acquisition of Moroccan territory. She expressed regret that Great Britain had credited such hallucinations. Threats would not turn Germany from asserting her rights. It was pointed out again that Great Britain was at liberty to intervene whenever her interests were affected, and Sir Edward Grey was formally invited to end the tension by declaring to Parliament that these had not been touched in the current negotiations.

On July 27 an inspired statement was published that the British Government did not contemplate participation in the negotiations and that the fleet movements were not connected with the Moroccan situation. This brought an end to the crisis.

Revolt Means Reforms.

London, Ont., Nov. 22.—Dr. W. E. Taylor, son of Rural Dean Taylor, and associate general secretary of the Chinese Young Men's Christian Association in Shanghai, China, was in the city yesterday on his way home on a visit

The inevitable outcome of the revolt in China will be the establishment of an important reform movement, in the opinion of Dr. Taylor. He does not think the public need look for a bloody revolt decimating the empire.

"The rebel, or constitutional party, is committed to reforms within the bounds of law and order," he says.

Sarah Bernhardt to Marry.

New York, Nov. 22—The engagement of Sarah Bernhardt, the actress, to Lou Tellegen, a Flemish actor, who has played minor parts in her company, is announced in Paris, according to cable advices received here. Mme Bernhardt is sixty-six years old, while Tellegen is only twenty-six. She is the widow of Jacque Damala, a Greek actor, who died in 1899. The famous actress is already a great-grandmother.

MR. ROWELL AT LINDSAY

Leader of Opposition Makes Statement on Bilingual Question

A BIG RALLY

Lindsay, Nov. 22.—Bilingual schools and New Ontario were dealt with by N. W. Rowell, K.C., Liberal leader, last night in his first fighting speech of the campaign. Mr. Rowell challenged Sir James to answer some questions with regard to his acts in the past and his policy for the future.

"Our concern is that every child should learn and know English, not necessarily English alone, because a man who knows two languages may be a little better off than the man who knows only one, but every child should have a working knowledge of English." On our policy of teaching in those schools and policy of maintaining peace and harmony between French and English races, the Liberal party is prepared to stand or fall," he said.

With regard to the statement of Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, that the law did not authorize bilingual schools, Mr. Rowell said: "It is not the law, but the administration of the law which has created trouble."

"If Sir James is ignorant of present conditions with regard to bilingual schools, then there must be incompetency in management of our educational affairs, more than we had even expected," said Mr. Rowell.

On the temperance question, Mr. Rowell said that Sir James Whitney "could be almost insulting" to temperance people when they went to him, but the spoils faction wants to use the license system to further its interests.

The meeting was held in the opera house. C. E. Weeks of Woodville, local Liberal candidate, and Dr. J. A. White, chairman of the meeting and president of the Liberal Association, also spoke.

"It would be foolish to say that the Whitney Government is all bad," said Dr. White. "Intelligent people would not accept that statement." He admitted that the Hydro-electric policy and prison farm project were good works.

The failure of the Government to frankly states its position on the question of bilingual schools and its evident desire to run with the fox and hunt with the hounds is largely responsible for a widespread agitation which is disturbing the public mind to-day in this province, said Mr. Rowell. "Sir James evidently hoped to avoid a declaration of policy by bringing on the elections before the receipt of Dr. Merchant's report, but, like Banquo's ghost, it will not down.

First Conservative Caucus.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—The first Ministerial caucus was held yesterday morning. Joseph E. Armstrong of East Lambton, was appointed permanent chairman. The meeting was the first get together of the members since Sept. 21.

There was a general discussion on the proposed reduction in the numerical strength of the standing committees. The conclusion will be shown in the report of the striking committee, and will probably mean that the committee will be considerably reduced.

Premier Borden was given an ovation, and at the close cheers were given for the King and for the Prime Minister.

The Nationalists attended the caucus.

PROBING TRAGEDY.

Inquest at Montreal Into Marion Case Becomes Mysterious.

Montreal, Nov. 22.—Witness after witness was probed by Coroner McMahon at the inquest which was renewed yesterday in an effort to discover whether murder or suicide accounted for the recent death of Mary Louise Marion, whose body was found in a north end quarry.

The girl disappeared from home some five or six weeks ago, and some of her clothes were found on the quarry bank. The police dragged the quarry in vain. Later the mother appeared and insisted on another attempt, telling of a visit to a "clairvoyant," who had two visions, first the girl walking with two men, next her body lying in the quarry. The police then found the body in the position described by the clairvoyant. The police believe it a simple case of suicide, but the girl's relatives insist that she met with foul play.

New facts brought out indicated that the victim had been ill-treated by her stepmother some time ago. The only love affair brought to light, was that between Joseph Bourge, aged 17, and the girl, who was not 16 years old at the time of her death.

Screams from the direction of the quarry were plainly heard on the night of Oct. 16, when the girl disappeared, according to the testimony of Mrs. Joseph Prenovost, who lived near the quarry.

George Marion, the father of the victim, admitted that the little girl had complained before him and before Mrs. Gauvreau of having been ill-treated by his wife. He also admitted that on the night of Oct. 15 last, he had been put out of the house by his wife and his mother-in-law, because he was in liquor.

"We shall be obliged to adjourn this inquest again," said Coroner McMahon at the conclusion of Detective Lajoie's evidence. "We can safely say now that there is suspicion over this whole affair, and we shall give the police another delay of eight days to sift this matter to a finish."

EAT OLIVE OIL

The use of olive oil as a food is a growing and sane idea, and it is fast becoming one of the important foods of the world. Its value lies in the fact that it is all nutriment and leaves no harmful waste products in the system as meats do.

Instead, it helps to expel the harmful, waste matter that results from the use of other foods. Use all the Olive Oil you can, being only careful as to its quality.

McDermid and Jury, the leading druggists, tell us that it is surprising how the use of Olive Oil has increased during the past two years. In fact the sale has reached such proportions that they felt it necessary to make a special examination of the leading brands in the market so as to avoid any possibility of getting oil that was not pure and wholesome. The result is that after examining a number of samples, one was selected that was found to meet every requirement for either medicinal or table purposes. It is an absolutely pure oil with a pleasant nutty flavour and is undoubtedly one of the finest oils to be obtained anywhere.

Those who know a good quality of Olive Oil should give this special brand a trial, and they will never be satisfied with ordinary brands again.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Mr. Frank Waugh was found dead in the canal at Brantford.

The King and Queen were met yesterday at Port Said by Lord Kitchener.

The agreement for the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba was made at Ottawa.

For the first seven months of the current fiscal year 295,823 immigrants arrived in Canada.

The governors of the Wesleyan Theological College have decided to appeal the Workman judgment.

A delegation from northern Ontario complained to Premier Whitney that five thousand men in the new country were disfranchised.

Hay sold at $24 per ton and potatoes at $1.60 per bag on the Toronto market yesterday. These are new high price records for the present crop.

The housing problem has become so acute in Woodstock that a meeting of the Board of Trade has been called to see if something cannot be done to relieve the situation.

North Renfrew Liberals offered the nomination to Mr. Norman Reid, the late member, but illness compelled him to ask for time to consider. Dr. Russell accepted the Liberal nomination for West Hamilton.

By the collapse of a scaffold on which they were standing four workmen at Harriston, Ont., were precipitated 25 feet to the bottom of the tank of a water tower, and were all more or less injured, one of them, Thomas McDonald of Wingham, seriously.

Mrs. John Cummings, aged 19, of Montreal, was shot and instantly killed by her husband last evening. The murder was committed about fifty yards from the house in which the woman was living. John Cummings, the murderer, disappeared immediately after the shooting.

Montreal May Drop Horse Show.

Montreal, Nov. 22.—Mr. Edw. Sheppard asked for a statement regarding an announcement to the effect that there might not be a horse show in Montreal next spring, or that if there was a horse show this year, there might not be one again, said that whether or not there will be a horse show in Montreal, will not be decided until some time at the beginning of December. Mr. Sheppard is leaving for New York, where he will look things over. On his return the Horse Show Association will hold a meeting.

Stopped Kidnapping of Child.

Kingston, Nov. 22.—Police Constable Bateson arrived at the Grand Trunk station yesterday with a warrant and prevented the kidnapping of a nine-year-old son of a prominent resident.

It was a purely family affair. The boy's mother died when he was a year old and he was given over to his grandmother. The latter gave up house this week, and the boy's uncle, going west, wanted to take him with him against the father's consent and the father got out the warrant to prevent him kidnapping the lad.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"I believe—nothing," the lawyer answered. "It is not my business to believe. Mr. Morris Barnes was in receipt of an income of two thousand a year, which we might call dividend upon these securities. My client, through me, made Mr. Barnes a cash offer to buy them outright, and although I must admit that Mr. Barnes had not closed with us, yet I believe that he was on the point of doing so. He had doubtless had it brought home home to him that there was a certain amount of danger associated with his position generally. The night on which my client arrived in England was the night upon which Mr. Barnes was murdered. The inference to be drawn from this circumstance I can leave, I am sure, to the commonsense of you two gentlemen."

"First, then," Wrayson said, "it would appear that he was murdered by the people who were paying him two thousand a year, and who were acting in opposition to your client!"

Mr. Bentham shrugged his shoulder gently.

"It does not sound unreasonable," he admitted.

"And secondly," Wrayson continued, "if that was so, he was probably robbed of these securities at the same time."

"Now that, also," Mr. Bentham said smoothly, "sounds reasonable. But, as a matter of fact," he continued, looking down upon the table, "there are certain indications which go to disprove it. My personal opinion is that the assassin—granted that there was an assassin, and granted that he was acting on behalf of the parties we have referred to—met with a disappointment."

"In plain words," Wrayson interrupted, "you mean that the other side have not possessed themselves of the securities?"

"They certainly have not," Mr. Bentham declared. "They still remain—the property by inheritance of this young gentleman here—Mr. Sydney Barnes, I believe."

His tone was so even, so expressionless, that its slightest changes were noticeable. I seemed to Wrayson that a faint note of sarcasm had crept into these last few words. Mr. Barnes himself, however, was quite oblivious of it. His yellow-stained fingers were spread out upon the table. He leaned over towards the lawyer. His under-lip protruded, his deep-set eyes seemed closer than ever together. He was grimly, tragically in earnest.

"Look here," he said. "What can I do to get hold of 'em? I don't care what it is. I'm game! I'll deal with your man—the cash client. I'll give you a commission, see! Five per cent on all I get. How's that? I'll play fair. Now chuck away all this mystery. What were these securities? Where shall I start looking for them?"

Mr. Bentham regarded him with stony face.

"There are certain points," he said, "upon which I cannot enlighten you. My duty to my client forbids it. I cannot describe to you the nature of those securities. I cannot suggest where you should look for them. All that I can say is that they are still to be found, and that my client is still a buyer."

The young man turned to Wrayson. His face was twitching with some emotion, probably anger.

"Did you ever hear such bally rot!" he exclaimed. "He knows all about these securities all right. They belong to me. He ought to be made to tell."

Wrayson shrugged his shoulders.

"It does seem rather a wild goose chase, doesn't it?" he remarked. "Can't you tell him a little more, Mr. Bentham?"

Mr. Bentham sighed, as though his impotence were a matter of sincere regret to him.

"The only advice I can offer Mr. Barnes," he said, "is that he induces you to aid him in his search. Between you, I should never be surprised to hear of your success."

"And why," Wrayson asked, should you consider me such a useful ally?"

Mr. Bentham looked at him steadily for a moment.

"You apear to me," he said, "to be a young man of intelligence—and you know how to keep your own counsel. I should consider Mr. Barnes very fortunate if you could make up your mind to aid him in his search."

"It is not my affair,' Wrayson answered stiffly. "I could not possibly pledge myself to enter upon such a wild goose chase."

Mr. Bentham turned over some papers which lay upon the table before him. He had apparently had enough of the conversation.

"You must not call it exactly that, Mr. Wrayson," he said. "Mr. Barnes' success in his quest would probably result in an act of justice to society. To you personally, I should imagine it would be expressly interesting."

"What do you mean?" Wrayson asked, quickly.

The lawyer looked at him calmly.

"It should solve the mystery of Morris Barnes' murder!" he answered.

Wrayson touched his companion on the shoulder.

"I think that we might as well go," he said. "Mr. Bentham does not mean to tell us anything more."

Barnes moved slowly to the door, but with reluctance manifested in his sullen face and manner.

"I don't know how I'm going to set about this job," he said, turning once more towards the lawyer. "I shall do what I can, but you haven't sene the last of me yet, Mr. Bentham. If I fail, I shall come back to you."

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders. He was already absorbed in other work.

CHAPTER XVI.

Wrayson was conscious, from the moment they left Mr .Bntheam's office, of a change in the deportment of the young man who walked by his side. A variety of evil passions had developed one at least more tolerable—he las learning the lesson of self-restraint. He did not speak until they reached the corner of the street.

"Where can we get a drink?" he asked, almost abruptly. "I want some brandy."

Wrayson took him to a bar close by. They sat in a quiet corner.

"I want to ask you something," he said, leaning half way over the little table between them. "How much do you know about the lady who came into my brother's flat when we were there?"

The direct significance of the question startled Wrayson. This young man was beginning to think.

"How much do I know of her?" he repeated. "Very little."

"She is really a Baroness—not one of these faked-up ones?"

"She is undoubtedly the Baroness de Sturm," Wrayson answered, a little stiffly.

"And she has plenty of coin?"

"Certainly," Wrayson answred. "She is a great lady, I believe, in her own country."

Barnes struck the table softly with the flat of his hand. His eyes were searching for his answer in Wrayson's face ,almost before the words had left his lips.

"Do you believe then," he asked, "that a woman like that wrote love-letters to Morris? You knew Morris. He was what those sort of people call a bounder. Same as me! If he knew her at all it was a wonder. I can't believe in the love-letters."

Wrayson shrugged his shoulders.

"The whole affair," he declared, "everything connected with your brother, is so mysterious that I really don't know what to say."

"You knew Morris," the young man persisted. "You now the Baroness. Set 'em down side by side. They don't go, eh? You know that. Morris could tog himself up as much as he liked, and he was always a good 'un at that when he had the brass, but he'd never be able to make himself her sort. And if she's a real lady, and wasn't after the brass, hen I don't believe that she ever wrote him love-letters. What?"

Wrayson said nothing. The young man held out his empty glass to a waiter.

"More brandy," he ordered briefly. "Look here, Mr. Wrayson," he added, adopting once more his mysterious manner, "those love-letters don't go! What did the Baroness want in my brother's flat? She struck me dumb when I first saw her. I admit it. I'd have swallowed anything. More fool me! I tell you, though, I'm not having any more. Will you come along with me to her house now, and see if we can't make her tell us the truth"

Wrayson shook her head deliberately.

"Mr. Barnes," he said, "I am sorry to disappoint you, and I sympathize very much with your position, but you mustn't take it for granted that I am, shall we say, your ally in this matter? I haven't either the time or the patience to give to inevstigations of this sort. I have done what I could for you, and I will give you what advice I can, or help you in any way, if you care to come and see me. But you mustn't count on anything else."

Barnes' face dropped. eH was obviously disappointed.

"You won't come and see the Baroness with me even?" he asked.

"I think not," Wrayson answered. "To tell you the truth, I don't think that it would be any use. Even if your suspicions are correct, and you scarcely know what you suspect, do you, the Baroness is much too clever a woman to allow herself to be pumped by either you or me."

Wrayson felt himself subjected for several moments to the scrutinizing stare of those blinking, unpleasant eyes.

"You're not taking her side against me, are you?" Barnes asked distrustfully.

"Certainly not," Wrayson answered impatiently. "You must be reasonable, my young friend. I have done what I can to put you in the way of helping yourself, but I am a busy man. I have my own affairs to look after. and I can't afford to play the part of a twentieth century Don Quixote."

"I understand," the young man said slowly. "You are going to turn me up."

"You are putting a very foolish construction upon what I have said," Wrayson answered irritably. "I have gone out of my way to help you, but frankly, I think that yours is a wild goose chase."

Barnes rose to his feet and finished his brandy.

"I don't believe it," he declared. "I'm going to have that two thousand a year, if I have to take that man Bentham by the throat and strangle the truth out of him. If I can't find out without, I'll make him tell me the truth if I swing for it. By God, I will!"

They left the place together and walked towards the corner of the street.

"I shouldn't do anything rash, if I were you," Wrayson said. "I fancy you'd find Bentham a pretty tough sort to tackle. You must excuse me now. I am going into the club for a few minutes."

"How are you, Wrayson?" a quiet voice asked behind.

Wrayson turned round abruptly. It was Stephen Heneage who had greeted him—the one man whom, at that moment, he was least anxious to meet of any person in the world. Already he could see that Heneage was taking quiet but earnest note of his companion.

Wrayson nodded a little abruptly and ifet Barnes without any further farewell.

"Coming round to the club?" he asked.

Heneage assented, and glanced carelessly behind at Barnes, who was walking slowly in the opposite direction.

"Who's your friend?" he asked. "You shook him off a little suddenly, didn't you?"

"He is not a friend," Wrayson answered, "and I was trying to get rid of him when you came up. He is nobody of any account."

Heneage shook his head thoughtfully.

"It won't do, Wrayson," he said. "That young man possessed a cast of features which are positively unmistakable."

"What do you mean?' Wrayson demandde .

"I mean that he was a relation, and a near relation, too, I should imagine, of our deceased friend Morris Barnes," Heneage answered coolly. "I shall be obliged to make that young man's acquaintance."

"Damn you and your prying!" Wrayson exclaimed angrily. "I wish——"

He stopped abruptly. Heneage was already retracing his steps.

Wrayson, after a moment's indecision, went on to the club, and made his way at once to the billiard room. The Colonel was sitting in his usual corner chair, watching a game of pool, beaming upon everybody with his fatherly smile, encouraging the man who met with ill-luck, and applauding the successful shots. He was surrounded by his cronies, but he held out his hand to Wrayson, who leaned against the wall by his side, and waited for his opportunity.

"Colonel," he said at last in his ear, taking advantage of the applause which followed a successful shot, "I want half an hour's talk with you, quite by ourselves. Can you slip away and come and dine with me somewhere?"

The oClonel looked dubious.

"I'm afraid they won't like it," he answered. "Freddy and George are here, and Tempest's coming in later."

"I can't help it," Wrayson answered. "You can guess what it's about. It's a serious matter."

The Colonel sighed.

"We might find an opportunity later on," he suggested.

"It won't do," Wrayson answered. "I want to get right away from here.

The Feeble, Wasted Nerves Were Restored and Revitalized by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous prostration is a terrible disease to all who understand its symptoms. At times the sufferer feels comparatively well, but with slight exertion the dreadful helplessness returns and all strengeh and vitality seems to leave the system.

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible conditions in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayle's Cliff, Que., wriees: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicines."

GREY WHISKERS AND BALD HEADS

A Pathetic Answer to a Theatrical Advertisement in London—Real Life Dramas

Outside the Clavier Hall, Hanover Square, on Monday, were waiting in the pitiless, driving rain, long lines of aged men, most of them bearing visible marks of long and bitter struggles with fortune. They did not look like aspirants for dramatic honors, yet they were there in answer to an advertisement for "clean old gentlemen with grey beards or bald heads," for the wordless drama, "The Miracle," by Max Reinhardt, who is a believer in realism. He did not want young men who would have to make up to represent aged beggars, but the real article, hence the advertisement and the pitiful array of veterans which furnished the answer.

Glancing over the crowd the thing that struck the observer most was the pathetic attempt to hide the poverty that had impelled these aged folk to come, some of them, miles, in search of a brief engagement at $7.50 a week.

Frock coats that had long seen their best days, silk hats of patterns of a generation ago, and which no amount of brushing and rubbing would ever make glossy again; trousers which had been carefully pressed in hopes of hiding their shabbiness, boots worn and patched, but brightly polished—all these bore evidence that the wearers were not of the loafer class, but would be decent if they could.

Here were human documents if you like! Dramas of real life were here in dozens. See that bent old veteran of seventy or more. He should have had no need to be here. For years he worked hard in business, and amassed a comfortable competence, on which he retired thirty years ago. But he invested his money in a concern which failed, and here he is eager for the opportunity of earning $3.50 a week.

Look at that grey beard, still upright and alert despite his years. He was once an Army officer, and saw service all over the world. Another had never been in a theatre in his life, but misfortune had driven him to seek an engagement in one at a time when he should have been thinking of making his exit from Life's stage.

And so the tale might be continued. But the signal is given, and the pathetic procession passes slowly into the hall. For once in a way age had the advantage of youth. The more venerable a man looked the greater his chances of being engaged.

It was the younger men who suffered. One who was being rejected because he did not look sufficiently venerable begged for further consideration. "My beard is not much to-day, but I have just had it clipped. Give me a chance," he pleaded. He was told he would be taken, but bidden to leave his beard untrimmed and uncut. Another was walking away hopelessly when he suddenly turned and said desperately: "I'm an old professional. I've often sung in 'Faust,' and—I want a job." The management relented. But many others had to depart bitterly disappointed.

One applicant had written from a workhouse saying he was an old horsekeeper who had been driven out of work through the increasing number of motor-cars. The man said he was still capable, and begged for a chance of "getting off the rates." He will probably be engaged, for more old men are still wanted.

NOT A KINDRED SOUL

The young poet had just finished what he considered to be a work of real inspiration, and, rising from his table, he hastened upstairs to where his little wife, a bride of six weeks, was sitting assiduously darning his socks.

"Listen, sweetheart," he whispered tenderly. "I have just written this."

Ande he began to read. He put his whole soul into the reading. His gestures were graceful, his intonation perfect. The whole spirit of his beautiful poem breathed forth as he threaded his way from the beginning to the end of his theme; and when he had finished he looked at her, awaiting the verdict. For a time she was silent.

"Well, dear heart," he said, "tell me what you are thinking."

"I was wondering, dearest—"

"What?"

"Whether the butcher was not awfully late with that liver?" she replied

DEATH THE COST

Over 8,000 Persons Killed in Canada in Four Years.

The Monetary Times in an editorial on "What We Pay for Hustle" scores Canadians for the dangerous speed at which we are driving to-day.

"We take pride in the wealth of our natural resources, our general development, the enterprise of our people, and the extent of their prosperity. We boast of our time saving methods, rapidity of action and of our American hustle. We observe John Bull plodding along slowly, apparently doing business in double the time it takes us to do it. In short, we are speedier and we are proud to be first-class exponents of that North American art, hustle. What price to we pay for the boast? Here, at a glance is a section of the bill of cost.

"In four years killed by Steam railways, 2,049 persons; electric railways, 101; industrial accidents, 5,296; fires, 1,072: total, 8,718.

"Injured by steam railways, 7,844; electric railways, 8,296; industrial accidents, 10,444; fires, (estimated) 1,908; total, 27,992.

"In the past four years there have been killed and injured in Canada 45,128 persons on our railways, by industrial accidents, and by fires. This is at the rate of 11,857 per annum. In other words, every day during that period six persons have been killed and 19 injured, about one killed or injured every hour of the twenty-four. This appalling record, too, applies to only the few causes mentioned. If statistics could be obtained of all fatalities and injuries in the Dominion, the bill of cost would have a still more serious appearance.

"Many, if not the majority of these accidents, can be traced to carelessness or selfishness. The desire to achieve big results in the shortest possible time at the expense of efficiency is a national trait which the country may well take immediate steps to obliterate. The evil of dollar and dividend hunting, regardless of destruction in its wake is a menace to Canada's progress an dcredit.

"The writer heard an engineer admit that acertain structure which had been criticized might fall in three years' time, with possibly serious loss of life. Railroad contractors were laying new steel recently at a record-breaking pace, while a big crack in the concrete abutment of the bridge was allowed to wait, despite the fact that work trains used the bridge daily. Carelessness with live wires, reckless driving fo automobiles—in a thousand ways we violate the first principles of a civilized community.

"The reasons for the existence of such conditions are due largely to individual, corporate and legislative carelessness. We need better laws for the protection of life and property, and the strict enforcement of such laws. If the Imperial Board of Trade, for instance, had to deal with the question of our railroad fatalities, as they do in Great Britain, their action for reform would be drastic enough to startle us in no slight degree. We can therefore afford to emulate John Bull in his thoroughness of work and his regard for life. Ultimately his results are better, safer and more durable than ours. American hustle takes the vitality out of the nation and in more senses than one.'

MAYOR NATHAN'S ESCAPE

He Touched an Electric Discharger and Fell to the Ground.

Signor Nathan, the Mayor of Rome, while paying a visit of inspection to the great hydro-electric plant recently erected by the Municipality of Turin at Chiomonte in the valley of Susa, inadvertently touched a discharger, and was struck to the ground by the violence of the shock. Luckily his hand was partly gloved, otherwise, the consequences might have been fatal. Signor Nathan was assisted out by members of the Rome Town Council accompanying him. Medical aid was quickly on the spot, and the burns on the left arm bandaged. The mayor sufficiently recovered to put in an appearance subsequently at a banquet. Councillor Giovara, who was standing close to Signor Nathan at the moment of the shock, was slightly burned on the foot.

SECOND OPERATION ON GREAT PYTHON

Remarkable Story of How the Huge Reptile Was Held in Subjection.

A second operation has been performed on the great python at the Zoological Gardens which fractured his jaw while swallowing a goat.

After the jaw and head had been enveloped in a rigid casing for a couple of weeks he began to shed his skin. It was impossible for the patient to complete the shedding while the head was bound up, and the bandage was therefore removed. The bones of the jaw, it was found, had partly re-united.

With his head set free again, the python was evidently in the best of spirits, and celebrated the occasion by swallowing a duck. The skin of the head was then shed, including the transparent outer lenses of the eye. Afterwards it was decided to replace the plaster of Paris.

Awaiting a moment when the giant reptile was coiled in his tank, six heavy keepers crawled into his cage, each carrying a stout board. These swiftly slid over the top of the tank while the operator sought for the injured head through an opening between two of the boards. Once the neck was seized the heavy keepers sprang on the board and were ordered to "sit tight," thus forming a living roof. As the powerful coils heaved about inside the tank the heavy keepers were lifted up bodily, but their combined weight was too great for the python and the splint and bandages were rapidly replaced. It will be some weeks before the bandages the removd; and meantime the python will not be able to eat or see.

WRITES OF DEATH

Masterlink Thinks it Should Not be Prolonged in Agony.

M. Masterlink writes of Death, and in the course of it he enters an eloquent plea against efforts to extend life beyond its "natural term." "As science progresses," he says, "it prolongs the agony which is the most dreadful moment and the sharpest peak of human pain and horror, for the witnesses, at least—all the doctors consider it their first duty to protract as long as possible even the most excruciating convulsions. Who has not, at a bedside, twenty times wished to throw himself at their feet and implore them to show mercy?"

One day M. Masterlink believes this prejudice will strike us as barbarian, as a relic of the times when humanity was convinced that any known torture was preferable to those awaiting us in the unknown. Doctors defend it by pleading that there is scarcely ever a certainty that a case is hopeless. But in the majority of cases delay can "give but a few days, or at the utmost, a few months of a life that will not be the real life, but much rather 'an extended death.'"

On one point doctors are beginning to yield. "They are slowly consenting when, there is no hope left, if not to deaden, at least to dull the last agonies." But still many of them hesitate, "and, like misers, measure out drop by drop the clemency and peach which they ought to lavish." All our knowledge, therefore, "only helps us to die in greater pain than the animals that know nothing."

But a day will come, M. Masterlink predicts, when science will no longer hesitate to shorten our misfortunes, "when life, grown wiser, will depart silently, at its evening hour knowing that it has reached its term, knowing that its day's task is done.

BRITISH WAITERS' SOCIETY

The entente cordiale has spread to great fraternity of waiters, and French and British wielder of the napkin have enterer into an alliance which may have an important bearing on the future of what has for some time past been a dying industry in this country. Though the English man servant has long enjoyed the reputation of being the best in the world for one reason or another, the English waiter, apart from the comparatively few who are to be found in the West End clubs, is not generally esteemed. Last year the Loyal British Waiters' Society started a school of instruction which has had a considerable amount of success. Though only about 100 men have graduated the majority of them are doing well, and if there were a better supply of raw material more might be done to remove the reproach from which the British waiter suffers.

One of the great handicaps that have hitherto weighted the British restaurant or hotel waiter has been that as a rule, he can speak no language but his own. This drawback is now in a fair way to be removed. Recent negotiations, carried out by Mr. Manrice, official delegate of the English Hotel and Restaurant Employees resulted in the Syndicate National Francais des Employees d'Hotels making a treaty of alliance. A mass meeting in Paris has unanimously accepted the proposition to form a school for British volunteers.

St. Lawrence Ice Breakers

Professor H. T. Barnes, of McGill University, says that two or three, and possibly less, powerful ice-breakers of the Russian type, working occasionally, could keep the channel open between Montreal and Quebec. "At every point," he said, "we would find the river assisting in its struggle to free itself from the ice."

VARICOSE VEINS CURED
NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.
Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

TORTURED BY BILIOUSNESS

AND TERRIBLE SICK HEADACHES

Both Completely Cured by "Fruit-a-tives"

DRESDEN, Ont. July 17th, 1910

"I was a dreadful sufferer for many years from Sick Headaches and Biliousness, or Torpid Liver. I tried many remedies and physicians, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I finally used "Fruit-a-tives" and after the first box, I was so much better that I continued using these fruit tablets and they have entirely cured me.

"I certainly can recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone who suffers from Headaches, Biliousness or Stomach Trouble." MRS. ISAAC VANSICKLE.

Thousands of people have had the same experience as Mrs. VanSickle. They have tried doctors and taken all sorts of medicine, only to find that "Fruit-a-tives" is the one and only remedy that actually cures these troubles.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices, and is the greatest Liver Cure ever discovered. It acts directly on Liver, Kidneys and Skin—sweetens the stomach and purifies the blood.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE THIRD MAN

(Short Story)

BY ANNIE HINRICHSEN

The man kneeling at the river's edge, vigorously washing his hands, turned at a sound behind him.

A woman stood a few feet from him. In the dim light he could see that she was young and that her eyes were large and dark and full of wonder.

"What are you doing?" she asked.

"Washing my hand."

"To remove evidence of a crime?"

The man started. "How do you know?"

The girl sat down on a log near him. "A man does not wash his hands in the river at night unless he desires to remove from them proofs of a wicked deed. Was it a very great crime?"

The man raised his hands to his face, examined them carefully, sniffed at them and plunged them again into the water. "It was a dastardly deed," he averred.

"Tell me about it. You can trust me."

He dried his hands on his handkerchief, turned the collar of his long coat up around his ears, drew his soft hat over his eyes and sat down on the sand near her. "Lady," he said, "the details of my crime are unfit for gentle ears."

"Are you an habitual criminal?"

The man pondered. "If to-night's work may be called the result of my natural inclinations, I may say that I am an habitual criminal."

"I have always wished to know a social outlaw."

"Why?"

"Because I am an adventurer, a person who seeks new experiences. I came to the city a few months ago from a provincial little town. I cannot afford to travel and see foreign lands. I must find my adventures in the city among new types of people. To-night I came here to the river hoping to find something interesting, a despairing girl or a starving waif. I found the character I most desire to study, a criminal."

"Little country girl," said the man slowly, "you wish to see life's thousands of types and the environs of these types. How far would your adventuring spirit carry you?"

"Into every crack and corner of the world."

"Would you like to visit the haunts of criminals?"

"Yes, I should," she began impetuously.

He stopped her. "Would you really like to travel the paths that lead through habitations of lawbreakers, and the darker paths that lead through the minds of these malefactors? Do you wish to study a people who have no regard for human life or the rights of others, to whom ideals and honor of any sort are unknown?"

"I thought I did," said the girl uncertainly. "But I was mistaken. When you speak as you do, you make that sort of adventuring seem very dreadful."

The man laughed. "Good for you. I didn't think you would care to associate with thieves and sluggers." He threw open his coat, pushed back his hat and stood before her, tall, broad-shouldered, with wide forehead, steady laughing eyes, and a mouth and chin which held no lines of weakness or cruelty.

"You are not a criminal. But you said—"

"I said I had committed a dastardly deed. I had. Out there in the river is the yacht of a stubborn man, one of my best friends. He intended to sail to the West Indies in the morning, although three of us desire him to remain in New York for a bachelor's dinner to-morrow. We three made his yacht temporarily uninhabitable. We carried on it to-night while he was away several bushels of sliced onions and carefully strewed them where they would be most inconveniently odorous. He will not sail to-morrow. My house is up there on the drive. The others left me here. The perfume on my hands was so strong that I decided to remove it at once. You discovered me."

She rose from the log and without a word walked up the path which led to the street. He hurried after her.

"Don't be angry with me," he pleaded. "I am awfully sorry I have offended you. For both of us it was an adventure."

"An adventure!" she blazed. "It was a cruel joke. All the time you were laughing at my ignorance and silliness. You are worse than a criminal. A criminal would not have laughed at me."

"I have not laughed at you. Even if you do regard me as a malefactor I shall take you to your home. It is too late for you to be out alone."

In silence they walked the few blocks to her boarding house. At the steps she vouchsafed him a nod and closed the door before he could detain her.

A few days later she saw him in the subway. The next day he sat near her in the elevator. Several times he overtook her in the park.

"I have watched for you and followed you," he told her frankly one day. "Can't we be friends? Can't you be just a little kind to me?"

"I liked my criminal. You are another person. You are a young man with great wealth and nothing to do except to ridicule ignorant country girls. For the man who humiliates a woman there can be no forgiveness. If you could appear to me in a new light, as a different man, perhaps I could like you. But now you are to me only the man who ridiculed me."

In the Children's Court Florence Gately listened to the questions the judge was asking a small boy. The judge finished his examination and turned to a young man sitting near him. A few words passed between them, and the little prisoner left his chair and sat down beside the young man.

"Gordon Amherst has added another kid to his collection," said a lawyer sitting near Florence. "When he thinks a little unfortunate has decent stuff in him he asks for him, the judge paroles the child to him and he takes him to his place up in the country; it is half school, half home. He has made good citizens out of many little reprobates."

That afternoon Gordon Amherst overtook Florence in the park.

"Why didn't you tell me something about yourself?" she demanded. "Why didn't you tell me that you are doing a wonderful work for those poor little urchins? I did not know of it until this morning, when by chance I went into the Children's Court. I knew a criminal, then a cruel man who ridiculed and humiliated me. Now I know a—a new man, a third man, different from any other man I have ever known and—and better. If the third man wishes to ridicule me for being too silly and ignorant to understand him, I shall not be angry. I deserve his ridicule."

But in Amherst's laugh there was no ridicule, nothing but a perfect joy and a great tenderness.

Great Devotion

BUFFALO, NOV. 22.—"Beating" her way in men's clothing across the continent for love of the man she married four months ago, and barred from any friendship with her own sex, Mrs. Christine McWilliams, twenty years old, rode into Buffalo on Friday on the "blind baggage" of a Lake Shore express from Cleveland with her husband.

Then she was hauled from the bumper of the first car, where she had been sleeping in the arms of "Cass" McWilliams, who tried to keep his girl wife and himself out of sight when the railroad detectives came on them.

Coated with ice and exhausted, they were taken from their precarious position by the trainmen and carried to a flag shanty. After the pair had been thawed out, the trainman began to ask questions. Then it was that the identity of the smaller of the two tramps was revealed to the amazed railroaders. The husband, anxious as to the condition of his wife, asked that they be put in charge of the police to get proper care.

McWilliams and his girl wife were well cared for and then taken before Judge Judge and charged with vagrancy.

Married four months ago in Los Angeles to Christine Jamison, a pretty school teacher, McWilliams had a good job as a structural steel worker. Then came the laying off of workmen, among them McWilliams. He decided to strike for New York. But the small amount of money which stood between Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams and starvation was out of the question for transportation.

It was the girl who suggested a method of travel of which she had read, and she finally persuaded the reluctant husband to fit her out in some of his clothes, and together they started on the journey across the continent. From Los Angeles they went to Kansas City; from Kansas City to St. Louis; then, striking north for Chicago, where they stayed several days. Starting again they reached Cleveland. It was Tuesday that they left the Ohio city and jumped on the "blind baggage" of an express train from Cleveland to Buffalo on the Lake Shore.

They endured more on the last jump than on all the rest. The cold was biting, the snow, through which the train was tearing at a 60-mile gait, cut their faces, and their hands were frozen to the iron rods to which they clung for life. The suffering man and woman were soaked to the skin by water from the tender, and their clothes froze.

Judge Judge turned the girl over to the Salvation Army and suspended sentence on McWilliams, who took the advice of the court and started out to look for employment.

THE FAMILY BULLETIN BOARD

In a large family where the members go out a great deal a family bulletin board is a convenience. It may be of a sheet of celluloid, a small blackboard or a large slate with pencil attached, and should be hung in a part of the house where all the members of the family pass at some time of the day. The dining-room or the front hall would be a good place to hang it.

On the bulletin board the family post notices of regular interest which they have forgotten to impart at breakfast or dinner. One day's substance ran like this:

"Had a letter from Mary Smith—she wants Tom to send her the address of that antique dealer where he bought the blue pitcher.—Sue."

"Won't be home to dinner to-night. —Tom."

"Don't forget the church supper Friday. There'll be no supper at home.—Mother."

"Has anyone seen my tennis racquet?—Jean."

"Mrs. Henderson 'phoned; wants mother to call her up as soon as she comes in.—Jean."

And so it goes. Messages, callers, telephone calls, neighborhood news, engagements, lost and found articles are tabulated here for the benefit of all. The result is a surprising lessening of household friction. Occasionally someone pastes up a squib or joke or bit of verse which the rest of the family will enjoy. Even the cook and housemaid use the bulletin board and like the convenience of it. The board may be washed whenever necessary.

Will Make Hair Grow

Every up-to-date woman, should have radiant hair.

There are thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair, who do not try to improve it.

In England and Paris women take pride in having beautiful hair. Every Canadian woman can have lustrous and luxuriant hair by using SALVIA, the Great American Sage Hair Tonic. TRIAL COMMENCES

DENVER, NOV. 20.—A tragedy that brought a young and beautiful woman of more than unusual refinement and attraction before a jury in a fight for her life in the trial of Gertrude Gibson Patterson, accused of the murder of her husband, began here to-day.

In the course of the trial attorneys for the defence say there will be unfolded the story of a sixteen-year-old girl, whose beauty attracted the attention of a Chicago millionaire, who, declaring his intention to wed her, sent her to Paris to be educated, and five months later brought her back to Chicago, where, under renewed promise of marriage, he established relations which continued for five years, during which they were thought by the family and friends of both to be man and wife. How the millionaire, finally tiring of the girl, arranged with Charles A. Patterson, a young Chicago broker, that she should become Patterson's wife, for which, Mrs. Patterson declared, she afterwards learned that her husband had received $1,500, will be told the jury by the defendant, her attorneys say.

RADIAL RAILWAY BY-LAW WILL BE SUBMITTED

The North Monaghan Council met in the County Committee Rooms, Peterborough, on Nov, 17th, 1911. All the members of the Council were present; the Reeve presiding.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. F. Hurley was present on behalf of T. Hurley, to have a new street opened on Plan 37.

The new street is called Business street and runs east and west, across the property crossing Western Ave.

On motion of Mr. Morrow and Mr. May, Business street, as shown on Plan 37 and 50 feet in width, be accepted by the Township.—Carried.

Mr. W. H. Munro, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., was present at the meeting, and, in a letter from him, dated Oct. 21st, to the Municipal Council, he stated that his company desires a franchise agreement with the Township, to extend their line of railway from Charlotte street, south, on Monaghan Road, to the Otonabee River.

Mr. F. D. Kerr of Dennistoun, Peck and Kerr, solicitors for the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., and also solicitors for the municipality of North Monaghan, was present at the meeting with a by-law which he prepared, similar to the ones previously entered into between the Township and the Company.

The Council with the assistance of Mr. Kerr and Mr. Munro, took up the Street Railway by-law, and went into the matter in detail, considering the agreement clause by clause, and adding to any necessary particulars which they thought should be added to the agreement.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company agrees to pay the expenses in connection with submitting the by-law to the ratepayers at the January election.

The law being amended since the Street Railway Co. made their last extension, it is now necessary to submit the by-law to the people and receive a majority of the votes.

The Peterborough Railway Co's by-law, No. 644, was regularly read for the first time, and on motion of Messrs. Foster and Robson, passed its first reading.—Carried.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company's by-law, No. 644, was given its second reading, and on motion of Messrs May and Morrow, was regularly read, and passed its second reading.—Carried.

A resolution was moved by Mr. May, and seconded by Mr. Robson, instructing the Clerk to advertise in the Times newspaper the agreement now proposed to be entered into between the Peterborough Railway Co. and the Township of North Monaghan.

This by-law, No. 644, shall appear in the Times newspaper for four consecutive weeks and copies of the by-law shall be posted in six of the most conspicuous places in the municipality.—Carried.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company intend to extend the C. G. E. branch of their line from Chamberlain street to the C. P. R. track, at the present time, but to save delay and expense, in the future, are asking for the right of way from Chamberlain street, south to the river.

THE EMPTY CRADLE

The husband arrived home much later than usual "from the office." He took off his boots and stole into the bedroom; but, in vain precaution! His wife began to stir. Quickly the panic-stricken man went to the cradle of his first-born and began to rock it vigorously.

"What are you doing there, Robert?" queried his wife.

"I've been sitting here for nearly two hours trying to get this baby asleep," he growled.

"Why, Robert, I've got him here in bed with me," said his spouse.—Argonaut.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

DR. PIERCE'S GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

Thought It Was Whiskey

Through the finding of a bottle of liniment which they thought was whiskey two local men made themselves so ill that medical assistance had to be called in. On Saturday they discovered a large bottle in a lumber yard and on smelling the cork critically declared it could be nothing else than "seven-year-old," and refreshments were in order. Both drank liberally of the supposed whiskey before it was discovered that there were other ingredients in the bottle, and the result was both men became ill, and a doctor's assistance was needed to bring them around.

May Call On The Premier

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 21.—Ontario commercial travellers are talking of calling on Sir James Whitney and his cabinet in a body asking for an order reducing the rates for certain grades in hotels in the cities of the province. They say that since the Government imposed an extra tax on the bar receipts the hostelries have risen like magic and the tax imposed by the license department practically comes out of the pockets of the commercial travellers or their employers.

TO TEST DRINKING WATER

Fill a pint bottle three-fourths full of water. Dissolve half a teaspoonful of granulated sugar in the water and cork the bottle. Set it in a warm place for two days, and if at the end of that time it becomes cloudy it is unfit for use. If it remains clear it is safe.

It is Criminal to Neglect the Skin and Hair

THINK of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles — mental because of disfiguration, physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft, white hands, and good hair. These blessings, so essential to happiness and even success in life, are often only a matter of a little thoughtful care in the selection of effective remedial agents. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. 5M, Boston, U.S.A., will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on Skin and Scalp Treatment.

HER FATHER'S HEROINE

A Short Story

Major Clavering, retired, and living in a suburban village, had pains and aches and stiff joints, and therefore when there was business to be done in the city he delegated it to his daughter, Faith. Even after she had arrived at the age of 20, and had been making shopping and other trips for two years, the father would call her before him when she was ready to go again, and say:

"Now, firstly, look out for your purse. Secondly, if a strange man addresses you, appeal to the nearest policeman. Thirdly, beware of the policeman himself. Fourthly, if there is an accident on the train, keep cool. Fifthly, if anyone attempts to kidnap you, you bite and kick and scratch. Sixthly, don't miss the train coming back and keep us all in a stew."

Miss Faith could repeat the instructions forwards and backwards. She always listened in humility and always rejoined:

"Why, daddy, what can posibly happen?"

"A million things can happen, and you be on your guard against every single one of them. You are the daughter of Major Clavering. If the occasion ever arises when you can make a heroine of yourself and don't do it, I shal feel like disowning you. I guess that's all to-day, but you look out."

Two long years, and at least 50 trips to the city and back, and yet Miss Faith Clavering was no heroine. It was not her fault. She had always been ready.

On this occasion she started off prepared for collisions, pickpockets, mad dogs, Black Handers and all other sorts of folks and things, but at the same time she wasn't worrying. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon she had finished her errands and was ready to take the subway to the Grand Central Station. Of course, the train was crowded. Of course, an old bald head with a rubicund nose and a masher's smirk, rose up and waved Miss Faith to his seat, but after one glance at him she continued to be a strap-hanger. There was a jam as she got off, and another on the stairway, and someone twitched her purse out of her hand.

The supreme moment had come at last. The girl gave a gasp, braced up and turned to the man beside her and seized his arm and firmly said:

"You have my purse, sir, and if you don't restore it I will give you in charge!"

"You are mistaken, miss," was the reply.

"I am not. You just twitched it out of my hand."

"I beg you to believe on the contrary. My hands have been in my pockets to protect my own. I think it was a brat of a boy who crowded between us."

Miss Faith turned and looked at her prisoner. He was a young man of about 25, with a rather aristocratic face and a pleasant voice. He would have been picked out anywhere for a gentleman. The girl removed her hand and was on the point of making an apology when a special warning of her father's came in mind:

"And, Faith," he had said, "never take a man for what he looks like. The greater the villain the better his clothes. The rascal who got my watch five years ago claimed to be a member of the President's Cabinet, and looked the part."

"Will you give up the purse?" demanded the girl, as her face hardened.

"May I present my card and identify myself?" was asked in reply, and there was a smile on the young man's face instead of a look of worriment.

A policeman who scented trouble came strolling that way, and Miss Faith nodded to him and said:

"Officer, I give this person in charge! He has got my purse!"

"Sure, Miss?" asked the bluecoat after a glance at the prisoner.

"I am, sir."

"Because, if you are not exactly sure, you know——"

"But I am."

"Then I'll take him to the station, but you must come, too, and make complaint."

"I assure you that you are making a great mistake, miss," said the young man to his accuser, but he smiled as he said so.

"I'm sure I'm not."

The officer and his prisoner rode to the station in one taxi, and the complainant in another, and the three arrived together.

When they stood at the sergeant's desk it seemed to the girl as if some signal passed—some signal that made the sergeant grin—but she bravely went ahead and made her complaint, and was told to appear in court the next forenoon at 10 o'clock. She had her return ticket in her glove, where prudent girls always carry them, and as she took the train for home she realized that she was a heroine. Her father would praise her to the skies. He would call her the brave daughter of a brave man. He might even buy her a gold watch and have it suitably inscribed.

In the station house behind her there was chuckling and laughing and saying:

"Well, well, but it is funny!" But of course she couldn't know that. Instead of being cracked on the head and jammed into a cell, the prisoner was permitted to sit in the captain's room and smoke, and finally to wander away.

Miss Faith reached her station and home an hour late. The Major had become nervous, as was always the case, and was at the gate to meet her and to ask:

"Haven't I told you what to do in all emergencies?"

"Yes, daddy."

"And in this emergency——"

"I had him arrested and locked up. He tried hard to bluff me, but I went through with it. He was a pickpocket, you know."

"Great Scots! Mother, hear what Faith is saying! A pickpocket got her purse, and she had him arrested."

"Dear me!"

"Brave girl! Noble girl!" said the father, as he patted the daughter on the shoulder. "So you had him locked up, eh?"

"Yes, and I went to the station and made the complaint against him.'

"Hear that, mother? Our little heroine goes to the police station to see that the fellow is properly booked! Oh, Ive always said she had the courage of her father— Was the thief a boy or a man?"

"A young man."

"Had a tough look, I suppose?"

"Well, no. He looked to be a thorough gentleman. He stood up so straight that the thought came to me he was a soldier."

"But he couldn't have been, of course. You got his name, didn't you?"

"Yes. He gave it to the police as Captain Bryn Merrit."

"W-h-a-t!" yelled the Major, as he fairly jumped clear of the floor.

"Why, what ails you, daddy?"

"Captain Bryn Merrit! You—you charged him with pocket-picking! You had him arrested. You had him locked up? You—you——"

"And why not?"

"Because I know him. Because, he's now the captain in my old company. Because he's a gentleman. Because he's one of the nicest young chaps in the world. You are no heroine. You are almost an idiot."

"Daddy!"

"And I had invited him to come down and see us some day next week! No use of your crying. You've got us all in a bad scrape, and if the captain falls in love with you, you've got to marry him to get us out."

The captain is in the Philippines now. When he comes home there may be a wedding. At least the correspondence covers four and five pages at a time on both sides.—Lawrence Alfred Clay, in St. Louis Globe Democrat.

WILKIE IS SENTENCED.

Man Who Beat Wife to Death Is Given Ten Years.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—Edward Wilkie, convicted of manslaughter at the criminal assize court yesterday afternoon, was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. It will be remembered that Wilkie beat his wife to death at their home on Claremont street on August 14 last.

In sentencing Wilkie, his lordship said:

"Edward Wilkie, you have been convicted by twelve of your countrymen, and upon perfectly satisfactory evidence, of the crime of manslaughter. The jury would have been quite justified in finding you guilty of murder, but I am glad that they have seen their way to acquit you of the graver offence and find you guilty only of the lower, but still heinous crime. It remains now for me to award your punishment.

"This is another added to the long and hideous list of victories of which King Alcohol can boast — a woman dead by her husband's hand, a man behind prison bars, children motherless and worse than fatherless. Such cases as yours might almost cause those who see no harm in the sale and use of intoxicating liquors to be willing to be themselves deprived of what they consider a legitimate pleasure derived from the use of these liquors in moderation, if only the use—which becomes the abuse—might be forbidden those who cannot—or will not—use them without excess.

"The jury, although almost invited to do so, declined to recommend you to mercy, and I see no reason why great mercy should be shown you. Still I shall not inflict the maximum punishment, hoping that you may reclaim a position among your fellowmen, and knowing that you must go through life with the blood of the wife of your bosom, the mother of your children, upon your hands and upon your soul, in itself no light punishment.

"The sentence of the court is that you be imprisoned in the Kingston Penitentiary for the term of ten years, and that you be then discharged."

THEY DO NOT EXIST.

Sir James Whitney Denies Existence of Bilingual Schools.

Fergus, Nov. 22.—"Abominable and absolute falsehood" is the way Sir James Whitney last night described the newspaper articles being published on the bilingual school question. A large crowd filled the opera house and several speakers also addressed the meeting.

"In this land of peace and where good feeling should be fostered and encouraged owing to the racial differences of the people, we see newspapers filled with abominable and absolute falsehoods about this bilingual question," he declared.

Sir James calmly reiterated his statement again last night, that there is no such thing in Ontario as a bilingual school. "Let's get the idea of teaching the French language out of our heads. It's only a question of teaching young French-Canadian children the public school subjects in French until they can understand the English language."

Sir James said he was especially pleased with Col. Craig's record and attitude in the Legislature. There was a great big streak of independence in J. J. Craig and he was the better for it. He was not a hide-bound party candidate unattentive to the interests of all his constituents. Sir James was glad to see this spirit of independence both in the Legislature and out of it.

"We have now a sympathetic Government at Ottawa, who will not attempt as the Laurier administration did to block the progress of Hydro-electric extension in Central and Eastern Ontario. Hon. Frank Cochrane, the new Minister of Railways and Canals, worked with Hon Adam Beck in aiding the project in Ontario, when Mr. Cochrane was a member of my Government," he said.

Manitoba Wins Boundary Dispute.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Hon. R. P. Roblin and Hon. Colin Campbell of Manitoba go back to Winnipeg, having settled the vexed question of the provincial boundaries.

Premier Roblin announced yesterday that the agreement arrived at with the Federal Government provided for territorial extension north and east as laid down in the proposal of the late Government.

The financial settlement which the Laurier Government refused to make has been conceded by the Borden Ministry. Manitoba, in respect to the added territory, being placed on exactly the same financial footing as the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Section Hands Going to War.

London, Ont., Nov. 22.—Large numbers of Italians from all over the district are purchasing tickets during the last few days for their homes in Italy, and it is expected that there will be about 50 from the district surrounding London leave Thursday for New York, where they will embark on the steamer Duca d'Aosta for Naples Saturday morning.

Many of the Italians are section hands on the C.P.R. and some of them a from the G.T.R., who are reservists in the Italian army and are going home to see if they are needed to guard their homes while the main army is in Tripoli.

Cholera Is Waning.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Nov. 22.—According to the report of the Italian Government there were 113 cases of cholera and 55 deaths in Italy from Nov. 5 to Nov. 11 inclusive. There were no cases in Rome. The epidemic is diminishing.

ECCENTRIC BETTING.

Curious Wagers Recorded at White's Club in London.

The betting book of White's club in London contains the record of some extraordinary wagers. The idle gentlemen of 100 years ago could give their successors of today sundry hints on eccentric betting. Here are facsimiles of some of the records. One reads:

"Mr. Methuen bets Colonel Stanhope 10 guineas to 1 that a worthy baronet—understood between them—does not from necessity part with his gold ice pails before this day twelvemonth. The ice pails being found at a pawnbroker's will not entitle Colonel Stanhope to receive his 10 guineas."

This peculiar wager was made in 1813, and another one, recorded the same year at White's, may have reference to the same hard up personage. It reads:

"Lord Alvanley bets Sir Joseph Copley 5 guineas that a certain baronet—understood between them—is very much embarrassed in circumstances. In three years from the date hereof, if one of his bills is dishonored or he is observed to borrow small change of the chairmen or waiters, Sir Joseph is to be reckoned to lose."

Here is an odd one: "Mr. Butler bets Sir George Talbot 20 guineas to 1 that he is not in the room at White's with Napoleon in the course of the next two years—April 24, 1815." History shows that Mr. Butler won that guinea.—Christian Science Monitor.

AN OLD SPANISH CUSTOM.

Police Still Call Out the Hours of the Night at Los Arenas.

Most of the ancient Spanish customs have long since died out, but one is still maintained here, in the village of Los Arenas, near Bilbao, and all light sleepers will, I think, be with me in saying that this could be very well done without, says the British consul at Bilbao.

The custom consists of the "serenos" (night policemen) calling out the hours and state of the weather every night, commencing at midnight and finishing at 5 o'clock a. m. I said "calling," but shouting would really be more correct. One is roused by one of these loud voiced policemen singing out beneath the bedroom window, "Las doce, sereno!" ("Twelve o'clock, fine weather.")

By 4 o'clock the weather has probably changed, and it may be raining and blowing a regular hurricane, a state of things in itself enough to wake any man up. Yet you are cheerfully informed of the fact by the policeman shouting, "Las cuatro, lloviendo!" ("Four o'clock, raining.")

Many inhabitants have tried in vain to get this stopped, for no useful purpose whatever is served by the custom, except, perhaps, to the Spanish Bill Sikes, who considers it a very useful guide to the whereabouts of the police.

Called His Bluff.

An irascible guest had been sitting at the hotel table about three minutes and no waiter had come to him, and when he caught the eye of the head waiter he called him up. "Here," he said ill naturedly, "I've been waiting for half an hour for somebody to take my order, and nobody has come near! Am I going to be waited on?"

"Certainly, sir."

"Then I want to know why I have been kept waiting a half hour!"

"Well, sir," explained the waiter, "the man who was on duty when you came in, half an hour ago, has left and won't be back until tomorrow, and I only came on duty ten minutes ago, so I don't know the reason."

The guest knew he was being made fun of, but he also knew that he had been telling a falsehood, so he said no more.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

NAMES AND FACES.

Douglas Marked the Man He Wanted to Know Again.

"Stephen A. Douglas had the most remarkable memory for faces of any man in public life," declares a correspondent. "Upon the occasion of a visit to Washington on election day in 1860 the late Colonel John W. Forney was discussing the election of Garfield over Hancock with Colonel Harmon of Detroit. Colonel Harmon had been mayor of Detroit and prominent in national politics. Harmon and Forney got to talking about earlier politics, and Harmon related the story of a meeting with Douglas in New York. Douglas had been nominated in Baltimore by one faction of the Democratic party. Breckinridge was chosen by the other faction in Charleston. When he heard of his nomination Douglas was in New York. He entered the Astor House, then the headquarters for all politicians and the principal hotel in New York, and immediately was surrounded by his political admirers. Among them was Colonel Harmon. The latter, according to the story he told me, put forth his hand and congratulated Douglas on his nomination.

"'Thank you, Colonel Harmon,' replied Douglas.

"Harmon was amazed that Douglas should have remembered his name, for he had met the 'little giant' but once, fifteen years before, and then for but a brief period. After a time he returned and asked Douglas how he was able to call him by name.

"'My dear colonel,' said Douglas, 'whenever I meet a man I want to know again I put a mark on him and I never forget.'"—Washington Post.

THE BRITISH CABINET.

How Its Secret Documents Are Protected and Printed.

Each member of the cabinet is supplied with a key which fits the lock of a certain dispatch box retained by the prime minister. At any particular crisis, when important papers reach Downing street, the premier, after perusing them, places them in the dispatch box and hands the box to a special messenger, who takes it round to each member of the cabinet in succession. Each member opens it with his key and relocks it after he has read the documents it contains. In this way the papers are prevented from falling into the hands of strangers or members of parliament who are not in the cabinet.

Now and again it is found necessary to print copies of a "secret" which comes up for discussion at a meeting of the cabinet. The document is cut up into many small pieces and distributed among a goodly number of compositors in the government printing works, each of whom sets up his little piece, and the little piece may represent only a dozen lines of type. When all the fragments are in type a highly trusted official collects both the copy and the type and puts the latter together. The printing of the document is then done in secret under the eyes of this official, and the men who work the printing machine are forbidden to handle any of the paper after it is printed upon.—National Magazine.

Reverse Methods in India.

Lady Wilson, the wife of an eminent Anglo-Indian official and long resident in India, in her book, "Letters From India," says: "It amuses me to notice the way the Indians reverse the order in which we do things. For instance, at home men take off their hats when they come into a house; Indians keep on their turbans, but take off their shoes. We beckon with the palms of our hands turned inward; they beckon with them turned out. My ayah lays my slippers in a row with the toes pointing toward me. The cook begins to read his Hindustani book of recipes from the last page backward and writes his accounts from right to left. When the native carpenter uses native screws he screws them in from right to left and saws inward, which makes one nervous."

Four Lost With Schooner.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 22.—News of the total loss of the schooner Heroine of Burgeo, Nfld., at Fox Roost, Nfld., reached here yesterday when Robert Moulton received a telegram advising him of the loss of the Heroine, with all on board.

The wreck took place Monday during a heavy storm. The Heroine was bound from Sydney to Burgeo with coal for Moulton. Fox Roost is a point of land a mile east of Port Aux Basques.

Those on board were Capt. John Rose, who was also owner of the schooner, and three sailors, all belonging to Burgeo. The captain and one or two of the crew leave large families.

Can't Avoid Car Shortage.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—The car shortage that prevails on all Canadian railways this year came in for considerable attention at yesterday's sitting of the Railway Commission.

"It is impossible for any railroad to supply all the equipment desired during three or four months of the year when the crops are moving," said Mr. W. J. Brownlee, transportation manager of the Grand Trunk Railway. "Not in 15 months have we had enough car."

In consequence of the railroads' explanations, however, the board deemed an order unnecessary.

PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 22 1911

THE EMPLOYERS SHOULD PROTECT WORKINGMAN

Mr. Hall at Meeting in Selwyn Last Night Says That it is in the Interests of the Employer to Guard His Employees Against Injury---Whitney Government Does Nothing for the Workingman.

A well-attended meeting, in the interests of Mr. R. R. Hall, was held in the Temperance Hall, Selwyn, last night, and the candidate received a hearty welcome, while his platform was apparently much to the liking of the gathering, judging by the hearty applause which punctuated his remarks. Mr. Lebister made a very efficient chairman.

Mr. Hall, in dealing with the Educational policy of the Whitney Government, stated that he never knew of an election in which from the Prime Minister, down to his humble supporter, there has been so much special pleading, so much quibbling, so much apologizing, so much unmitigated lying, and so much soft soap evasion, as there has been over bilingual schools.

Premier Whitney in his letter of the 13th instant, to Mr. W. K. McNaught, says "there is no such thing "in the Province as a bi-lingual school," but the fact is that there are no less than 300 bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario, and they have been in full blast for this last seven years, under the Whitney Government.

Attorney-General Foy, in addressing his constituents at Toronto, on the 20th inst., says: "that there can- "not lawfully be any bi-lingual "schools in the Province of Ontario, "and if any are found they must "cease to exist and care should be "taken to make all schools conform "to the law."

Attorney-General Foy must be very blind, or exceedingly obtuse, continued Mr. Hall, if he does not also know that there are no less than 300 bilingual schools, and that in many of these schools not a single word has been spoken in the English tongue for upwards of seven years.

Mr. Peck, in his election address says: "I state here that I consider "the children in the Province are en- "titled to receive such an education "that they will think and speak in "English, and have a thorough com- "mand of that language."

Mr. Peck could not have used words more apt, said Mr. Hall, to describe the positive neglect and condemnation of the Whitney Government on this educational policy than it has done. From Premier Whitney down to his candidate, in this riding, not one word has been uttered by them in which there is a suggestion of any remedy to meet the unusual conditions that prevail in this Province. Neither Premier Whitney, nor Mr. Peck make the faintest suggestion as to how they are going to effectually see that every child in the Province shall have a thorough knowledge of the English Language. Both Premier Whitney and Mr. Peck are as dumb as oysters, as to what remedy should be applied.

The fact is, declared Mr. Hall that under the Whitney administration there is being added to our population every year for this last seven years, no less than 2,000 people, who cannot speak a word of English; and who, moreover, are deprived of the advantage of acquiring any knowledge of English.

This is an alarming state of affairs, and it convicts the Whitney Government of positive neglect, or incompetence. In any event, they are unworthy of public confidence.

Mr. Hall said that the abolition of the Model Schools, by the Whitney Government, was a short-sighted policy. It had the effect of depriving hundreds and hundreds of school sections in the Province of the advantage of having qualified teachers. There are over sixty per cent. of unqualified teachers in many of the districts, which are inhabited by French speaking people. These people have not the means to pay regularly qualified teachers and hence their children are handicapped in acquiring any knowledge of English, because the teachers are not qualified to teach them.

This state of affairs, continued Mr. Hall, is due to the short sightedness neglect, and incompetence of the Whitney Government.

A remedy must be found. Neither Premier Whitney nor Mr. Peck suggest a remedy.

Mr. Hall said that in his address to the electors he indicates the true remedy, namely:

To give every child in the Province a thorough elementary education, and a thorough knowledge of the English language, necessary laws and regulations should be passed, and enforced, and liberal aid should be given to provide further adequate training schools and a sufficient supply of competent and qualified teachers for every school in every part of the Province.

It is in the interests of the whole Province of Ontario that every one of its citizens should have a thorough and sufficient knowledge of the English language. It is in the interests of those who do not now speak the English language that they should have an opportunity of learning the English language. It is, therefore, the bounden duty of the Province of Ontario to train up a body of teachers who will have the necessary knowledge and skill and qualifications to teach the English language to those who cannot now speak it. The Province should give liberal aid to the salaries of teachers to acquire these special qualifications and these teachers should be further rewarded for the success they achieve in teaching pupils the English language along with their elementary education.

Mr. Rowell.

"I do not believe," said Mr. Hall, "that the Liberal party could have selected, among the younger generation of men, or old men, for that matter, a man with higher ideals and more noble aspirations, than those of our new leader, Mr. Rowell. He has all his life been prominently identified with every social and moral movement that tends to the uplifting and elevation of his fellow men.

The stand which he has taken in his address to the electors of the Province of Ontario, upon social and industrial betterment, will commend itself to all right-thinking men who have the welfare of our fellow-citizens at heart. He says in his address:

"The betterment of the social and "industrial condition of the masses "of the people shall be one of our "supreme concerns.

"The evils of intemperance constitute a grave social peril. During the "ensuing Parliamentary term we will "consider the best form of legisla- "tion to deal effectively with these "evils, and the electors will have an "opportunity of passing upon our "proposals at the following general "election.

"We will immediately abolish the "three-fifths' vote in local option "contests, and substitute a simple "majority.

"During the continuance of the license system we will secure the removal of its administration from political influence.

"I sincerely hope," said Mr. Hall, "that I shall be a member of the Parliamentary Committee of which Mr. Rowell will be at the head, that will be able to formulate a platform on this great social question, that will more effectually deal with the evils of the liquor traffic."

Mr. George A. Gillespie was the last speaker, and briefly addressed the meeting, endorsing Mr. Hall as a candidate, who would make a most capable, faithful and energetic representative for Peterborough.

TRAVELERS COMPLAIN OF THE HOTEL RATES

(Toronto Star.)

Commercial travelers in Ontario are grumbling at the recent rise in hotel rates, and they talk of making an application to the Government for an order fixing a maximum of rates for certain grades of hotels.

Note.—The Whitney government might help the travelers out by adopting the homeopathic remedy—like cures like—by putting a tax on dining room receipts. The tax on bar receipts was used by hotel keepers as a justification for raising them, and according to the homeopathic idea, a tax on grub would probably justify them in lowering them.

MRS. GODFREY WELL AGAIN

Vineland, N. J.—Mrs. Allen T. Godfrey who has been in bad health for some time, has just written the following letter telling of her recovery:

"Everyone who is in broken health ought to know that Vinol will build them up and make them strong. It restored my strength and vigour after I had been in a badly run-down condition for several months, and I never fail to give Vinol a good word now."

This is one more proof that our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol, which is free from cod liver oil, is a remarkably strengthening and vitalizing medicine.

Men and women who are weak and in poor health, unable to sleep or eat well, and who have given up hope of ever being strong again should certainly take Vinol, without waiting another day, for it is exactly what they need.

There is no risk at all, for it is so sure to do good that we guarantee it absolutely and will refund the money if you are not satisfied. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

JOHN WEST COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Charged With Non-payment of a Promissory Conditional Note to James A. Watt, of Elora

COUNSEL'S EVIDENCE

John L. West was arrested last night at his home near Crawford's Grove, by High County Constable Cochrane and Constable A. Moore, charged with the non-payment of a promissory conditional note for $1650.00 due 15th Nov. to James A. Watt, of Elora, Ont. West was arraigned in the county police court this morning at 11 o'clock, but did not plead nor elect. After evidence of the plaintiff and his counsel, Magistrate Edmison sent the accused up for trial.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the plaintiff, gave evidence to the effect that he and his client called at West's home yesterday and he asked the defendant if he had signed the note, and the latter replied in the affirmative. Mr. Gordon explained the conditions set forth in the note, which were to the effect that the $1650.00 fell due on the 15th of November, and that unless it was redeemed on that date, the property for which it was given, was to pass back into the hands of the former owner. Mr. Gordon then explained that the defendant had not redeemed the note, and yet had sold the property for which it was given, namely, one mare $500, one mare and colt $400, one cow $300, and another cow for $250.

Watt, the plaintiff was put in the box and stated that he had furnished the defendant with the pedigrees of the cows, but had withheld the pedigrees of the horses until the money was paid.

West had been living on a little farm of 20 acres, said to belong to the Crawford farm. The note was signed "Crawford's Grove farm." Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defendant.

CONDEMNS SOCIALISM

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, NOV. 22.— Bird S. Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., NOV. 22.—Under the leadership of Bonar Law, the Canadian, the Unionists to-day made a notable gain in South Somerset, when Hon. A. Herbert was elected in the constituency, which had voted Liberal for centuries. The bye-election was caused by the elevation of Edward Strachey, the late Liberal member to the Peerage, this turnover is regarded as a protest against home rule for Ireland.

A MURDER CHARGE

Montreal Man is Accused of Having Shot and Killed His Wife on the Street Last Night

WEAPON FOUND

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, NOV. 22.—John Cummings, the man who is alleged to have coolly shot down his wife on the street last evening, was this morning arrested in the Jack quick lunch, where he was acting as a waiter. Last evening Mrs. Cummings, who was separated from her husband, was walking home from her work in the Canada Paint Company's works, when a man, said to have been Cummings, pulled out a revolver and shot her down. He escaped in the crowd which gathered and walked coolly down a side street.

Taken before Chief Carpenter ten minutes after his apprehension, however, Cummings absolutely denied his guilt. Upon being searched by the detectives a 38 calibre revolver was discovered in his pocket. All the chambers, with the exception of two, which contained empty cases, were loaded with ball ammunition.

HUNDREDS OF WOMEN GO TO PRISON

Suffragettes Arrested for Disorderly Conduct Proudly Plead Guilty to Charge

"DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT"

Special Wire to the Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., NOV. 22. — Two hundred and twenty-three women arrested during the suffrage disorders of yesterday, were arraigned in the Bow St. police court this morning and one and all proudly pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct and were sentenced to prison. The majority chose prison and were taken by scores in the prison vans to the various places of detention. The crown prosecutors and magistrates said the prisoners were guilty of conduct disgraceful and discreditable to English womanhood. The order has been given that the treatment of the prisoners should be the same as that of common prisoners.

A WONDERFUL CASE

Three Months in Hospital And Came Out Uncured.

Zam-Buk Cured Him In Few Weeks.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N.B., says:—

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. When the knee got warm it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk, I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger, and at a time when my finger was in such a terrible condition that I feared it would have to be amputated.

For eczema, blood poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.

THIS COULD NOT HAPPEN UNDER A JUST LAW

Nov. 22, 1911.

Mr. R. R. Hall,
Peterborough,

Dear Sir,—Allow me to say a word in praise of your stand for a better Workingman's Compensation Act. It's not every day you meet a lawyer who is willing to criticise his own sources of profit. Most of them are only too ready to take big fees for fighting for or against the poor man in court—it's all their money in the long run—and the workingman can go hang. A lawyer who puts principle before money should make a good member of the Legislature, where it needs good lawyers to make good, honest laws that will give the workingman a fighting chance.

I am talking about something I know. I suppose it's no use crying over spilt milk, but if there had been a fair and square Workingman's Compensation Act twenty years ago, I might be better off now. Mine is a hard luck story, but I offer it for what it is worth. I am 55 years old and I run a boarding house. If I had the usual outfit of a man I would be doing something different, but I have one eye and one thumb less than most people. I lost my eye in the old country from a piece of steel and I got nothing for it. I came to this country, and about twenty years ago I lost a thumb in the Bridge Works. I couldn't see as well with one eye as I could with two, where my thumb was going. And at that I didn't put my thumb in the machinery on purpose. I have yet to see the working man that wants to lose a thumb for any amount of money. A hand without a thumb isn't much good. Besides, men don't want to incur great physical pain, any more than they want to commit suicide for the insurance money. I leave it to the Review editor. Would he stick his thumb in the press for a thousand dollars. For ten thousand dollars? Yes, make it a hundred thousand dollars. Take it from me, no man deliberately gets himself ground up—no, not even for money.

I got no compensation money for my thumb lost in the Bridge Works, any more than I did for the eye I lost in the old country. When I got my thumb taken off what happened? Well, the Bridge Works sent me their doctor, but did not pay my doctor's bill. Kindness of that sort didn't cost as much as paying damages, but I didn't see through the game at that time. I am wiser now. If a lawyer puts in an appearance after an accident has happened they call him an ambulance chaser. I suppose they call him that because he is on the workingman's side. But what would you call the doctor, the employer's doctor, who visits the injured man and butters him with soft words and sends in reports all the time to the employer about the sick man's frame of mind—whether he is going to stand on his rights and collect full damages or whether he can be bull-conned into settling for his doctor's bill and a hundred dollars, or perhaps less? ?

I am with you, Mr. Hall, in your efforts to get a better Workingman's Compensation Act. What we want is a Compensation Act that will cut the lawyer and the courts out and hand over to the workingman or his widow and children, the full face value of every dollar that his shed blood calls for.

Yours truly,
WM. FORSTER,
Engineer.

ANOTHER DEPUTATION MAY GO TO OTTAWA

Chairman of Board of Works May Take a Delegation to Go With the County Council in Regard to the Pigeon Creek Bridge---Council Holds a Special Meeting.

There was a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council held last night, when some important business was brought up. A letter from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., suggesting that the Council join with the County Council in a deputation to go to Ottawa in connection with the building of a bridge across Pigeon Creek, better known as Bald Lake Narrows, was dealt with. He also mentioned the deepening of the Trent Canal to 6 ft. 4 in. Mr. Burnham further stated in his communication that he had asked ten members of the House of Commons to be present at the proposed interview with the Minister of Railways and Canals, when the deputation brings up the Canal matter.

In connection with the Pigeon Creek bridge matter, the Council, as yet, has not received any request from the County Council to join them in a deputation to Ottawa, which is proposed Thursday. In consideration of this fact, the Council took no action in the matter last night. Some time ago, however, a resolution was put through the Council, authorizing Ald. Metheral, Chairman of the Board of Works, to take a deputation and go to Ottawa, in connection with this matter, with the understanding that if they went down the same time as the deputation from the County Council, they would act jointly with them, providing both parties should be directly interested in the same project.

Regarding the present Pigeon Creek floating bridge, the City and Counties of Victoria and Peterborough are all interested, the city paying half of what the County Council contributes for its maintenance. It was realized by the Council that there is great need for a permanent and substantial structure, where the floating bridge is, and in consideration of this, they considered it advisable for the three municipalities to go in a body as a deputation to Ottawa, thereby assuring the recognition of their claim.

M. H. O. Report.

Dr. McPherson reported on the condition of the water, as tested at six points down the river. It was in an infectious state in four out of six places, tested. At Rye's boathouse, it is dangerously infected. At Crawford's Grove and the T.A.S. Park it is suspicious, and also about the same at Stewart's, while at a point about seven miles down, it is clear. The report was somewhat complicated for the Council, and the M. H. O., will be present at the next meeting to explain the report.

Other Business.

The building of a shed or little house, in which to store the small-pox tent and its belongings, for the winter, came up, and it was moved by Ald. Duncan, and seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the City Trust Commissioners be requested to purchase another acre of land for the purpose of erecting a small-pox cottage next year, and for the purpose of erecting the temporary shed on, as present.

Mr. Fuller, a South End resident, waited on the Council, and requested that some gravel be put on Chamberlain street, near the boundary, where there is a bad hole, and where the water lies to some depth. The matter was referred to the Board of Works. Mayor Morrow stated that the repairs had been recommended among other such repairs, the time the Council inspected the city streets, but some how this particular one had been neglected.

Kendry for Senator.

Ald. Bradburn drew attention to the fact that there was a portion of Mr. Burnham's letter suggesting that the Council put through a resolution to send to Ottawa, recommending that Mr. Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., be appointed to the Senate. As a result Mr. Kendry's name will be introduced at the next session of the Council.

As regards deepening the Trent Canal, Mayor Morrow thought that all the constituencies along the Canal should be represented in the deputation suggested, but he thought the Canal should be completed before taking up the question of deepening. The sections now completed are 6 feet deep. Mr. Armstrong, City Clerk, was authorized to confer with Mr. Burnham, regarding the arrangement for a deputation, at a later date, the date suggested being too early.

Mayor Morrow presided at the meeting, and the following members of the Council were present: Aldermen. Bradburn, Brown, Graham, Metheral, Morgan, Kerneghan, Duncan, Edgar, Buller and Anderson.

MAY BAR THE REPORTERS FROM COMMITTEE MEETINGS

"I hear you reporters are going to be barred from the meetings of the city council committees," was the salutation that greeted one of the Examiner staff this morning. "One of the aldermen told me that he is going to make a motion to that effect at the next meeting,' said the informant. "He thought you could see the minutes after the meeting."

Naturally, the reporter flagged the first alderman he saw and asked him what was in the statement.

"Yes ,there has been some talk of it," admitted Mr. Alderman. "I really think you fellows get a chance to say things that would be better left unsaid. You have always acted squarely with us, but I would be in favour of having the press barred. It used to be that way, and I think it was better," he concluded.

For the last four or five years the reporters of the local papers have been permitted to attend the meetings of the different council meetings. Before that time, only the regular meetings of the council were accessible to the press.

A WORKING MAN'S NIGHT AT PARK ST. CHURCH

Next Sunday evening, in the Park Street Baptist Church, there will be held a special meeting to consider the workingmen's rights and privileges in connection with the various phases of life in this work-a-day world.

We live in a day when the Church and the working-man need to stand shoulder to shoulder, in a united effort to try and solve the innumerable socialistic and economic problems which confront the toilers of earth. In order to encourage this feeling, and to demonstrate that so so far as it lies in her power, the Park Street Church stands ready to keep all men, in all ways that are right, a special meeting has been arranged for next Sunday evening.

The special addresses will be given by workingmen, of ten minutes duration, upon the following subjects: "The Church and the Workingman", "The Workingman and the Church", and "How to get the Workingmen into the Church.

There will be a male choir, composed of workingmen, who can sing, and work, too, and all who come will go away cheered and blest. Come, brother, come. Remember, next Sunday evening, at 7 p.m.

CASES HAVE COLLAPSED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, NOV. 22.—At the Assizes in Toronto to-day the Provisional Directors of the Farmers' Bank, John Watson, of Listowel, Dr. John Ferguson of Toronto, Alexander Fraser, of Toronto, and Alexander S. Lown were charged with conspiracy and theft. When the evidence of the Crown was submitted, Mr. Justice Riddell took the case from the Jury and a verdict of not guilty was delivered. Mr. Travers stated the Directors acted in good faith, and the Judge said the cases were for the Civil Courts only. No crime had been committed.

This ends the criminal proceedings which it, apparently, was a crime to commence. It shows what harm and injury can be done men acting in good faith, but who were deceived by those having the responsibility of promoting the Bank.

3 Men Drowned

WEBBWOOD, ALGOMA, NOV. 22. —John Wolf, Peter Katsonbos and Tim Maddocks, three mining prospectors from somewhere in old Ontario, were drowned in the upsetting of their canoe in Big Lake last week. The finding of their canoe and other indications told the fatal story.

FINISH IT FIRST.

It is all very well for Mr. Burnham—and shows a very commendable if not, practical, spirit—to advocate the deepening of the Trent Canal; but wouldn't it be more to the point to complete the building of the Canal first? The Laurier Government have brought the Canal to the last stage of completion, and if the Borden Government will keep up the pace they will satisfy the public. The Canal is being constructed with a view of deepening, but the best thing would be to get it finished and open for use.

PAYING THE PRICE.

The spoils system machine, works splendidly under the Borden government. Hon. Mr. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, carries back from Ottawa with him a promise of an extension of its boundaries, such as Sir Wilfrid Laurier offered. But that is not a draft on the Dominion treasury. Manitoba must be rewarded for standing by the Borden government. Sir Wilfrid gave Manitoba an equivalent in lands of a financial grant, but it must have the money, too, and Mr. Borden is willing to pay the price of political support. There won't be much surplus left if, on the same grounds British Columbia is given better terms and the public funds are otherwise used to reward party fealty.

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS.

Conservative and other journals are giving considerable prominence to the opinions of Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, on bilingual schools. The public does not care very much what Mr. Foy's opinions, or those of others, are. They want to hear something definite on the subject from Sir James Whitney, and Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, who have responsibility in the matter. Mr. Foy, Mr. Peck and Mr. Hall may have their opinions on the subject, but their opinions, or even the opinions of many Conservatives members of the next Legislature," who, according to the Toronto News, "will not be contented with evasive measures," will not avail an iota. If Sir James Whitney is backed in his defiant attitude of public opinion by a big majority, with his present attitude the subject of bilingual schools, he will only be strengthened by the return of supporters, even if they express the most beautiful sentiments regarding bilingual schools. He will soon whip them into line, if they dare to express an opinion of their own, contrary to what he holds. The way to get even-handed justice in the matter of bilingual schools, and many other matters, is to greatly reduce, or, better, wipe out altogether, Sir James Whitney's big and slavish majority, that enables him to play the tyrant.

MR. BORDEN'S BACK-DOWN.

Hon. R. L. Borden, head of the Dominion government, formed upon the highest imperialistic warrant and ideals, has abjectly surrendered to the anti-imperialistic elements he has incorporated in his cabinet. We can now well believe that Hon. Mr. Pelletier, one of the Nationalist-anti-British members of the Borden cabinet was right when he said that Mr. Borden would meet the Nationalist demand, and knock the Canadian navy into a cocked hat and kill, or to the same effect, indefinitely delay Canadian participation in the burdens of imperial defence. In reply to the challenge of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House on Monday, Hon. Mr. Borden declared the adoption by his government of the naval or, rather, no-naval policy of the Quebec Nationalists. So deeply concerned was Mr. Borden in making his surrender plain and unmistakable that, eloquent and fluent as he is, he had committed to writing, and read to the House, his pronouncement upon the navy — his decision to adopt the Nationalist policy of a referendum on the naval question. The Nationalists are good business heads. In an important bargain, involving the sale of a British dominion, they must have the written document. They could not trust to mere words so momentous a matter as the surrender of the Borden government and of the Dominion, to the demand of the anti-British, anti-imperial Nationalist element of his cabinet. "Woe is me," says the flag.

"A CHEEKY APPEAL"

The Review, with a good deal of assurance, advises the "British Born" to vote for the Whitney Government. Why should they do so? A large number of the "British Born" in Peterborough are employed in factories, and subject to the dangers which their occupation involves, and without adequate protection in the present state of the law. Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, at the recent assizes, told a girl who lost her right hand in a factory that she could get nothing, "under the present condition of the law"; but he felt so strongly in regard to her right to compensation, and the responsibility of her employers, that he urged the manager of the Company, in whose service she was injured, to make the girl some liberal compensation which the present law denied her. Five years ago, in 1906, the British Parliament passed a Workmen's Compensation Act, which compensates—is of benefit to workmen. The Liberal Government passed a Compensation Act, which is good so far as it goes, but does not go far enough. It was considered advanced legislation at the time, but conditions have changed. Factories and workmen, and the dangers to which they are exposed, have greatly increased of late years. Workmen demand that the law be amended to make it of use to them, if maimed at the post of duty, or to their families, if they are killed. What is the answer of the head of the Tory Government of Ontario, Sir James Whitney? With the excellent British Compensation Act, as a model, he resorts to delay, and refers the matter to a commission, instead of acting. The Conservative Government of Ontario has been in power seven years, and left the workingmen to the mercy of a law under which Chief Justice Sir William Mulock says, compensation, though righteously deserved, cannot be got. So unsympathetic and indifferent has Sir James Whitnep been towards improvement of the Workmen's Compensation Act, that the District Labour Council of Toronto, through a member, says that "Premier Whitney for months did nothing but insult the Council," and should "be turned out for his past negligence, and insolence to this Council." Labour cannot expect much sympathy with practical legislation in its interests from such a source. Workingmen and labour owe our Compensation Act and all the labour legislation we have in Ontario, and the British Act in Great Britain, to Liberal governments. Why should the "British Born" vote Tory—for a party that never has, or has had any use for them, except at election times?

REAPING THE HARVEST.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking in the House, in the debate in reply to the speech from the Throne, referring to the consequences of the rejection by the people of the reciprocity agreement, under the delusion that they were doing themselves a service, pointed out the mistake they made. He said:

"It seems to me quite clear that opening the avenues of trade we would make it possible to deal with mergers, combines, and trusts in the United States, as well as in Canada, and, indeed, the policy which was adopted at the polls is already bearing fruit. I believe it is a fact that at the present time the meat packers are making arrangements, whereby, freed from competition, they can calculate how much can be deducted from the price paid to the producer, and how much can be added to the consumers' price.

"Within this short space of time the Canadian people are already commencing to suffer for having listened on September 21 to the voice of passion and not to the voice of reason. (Cheers).

Sir Wilfrid pointed out the hollowness of the claim that reciprocity would have injured British connection, or tended to annexation. Its rejection had been an injury to the Empire.

He expressed the belief that already there was a feeling of resentment among the grain growers and the cattle men of the West, and that there was the grave danger of sentiment growing up that western interests were being sacrificed to Eastern interests. "There is in this a danger far greater, far more to be apprehended, than the vain illusory idea of annexation. There is nothing more detrimental to our national life than that there should be cultivated between the East and the West this feeling."

The people have already realized that in other respects their votes were secured in the late election on false pretences. They were led to oppose reciprocity on patriotic grounds. They voted, or thought they were, voting, for the flag and Imperial unity—for British ideals. They find, instead, that they voted for cabinet recognition, they voted for cobinet domination of the only anti-British, anti-Imperial element in Canada — the men who despise "the" flag, and acclaim the tri-colours, and now hold the most important portforios in the Borden Government.

SOMETHING REALLY WORTH WHILE.

Under the following heading—"Mr. Burnham makes some splendid suggestions," the Times, Mr. Burnham's organ, prints the following letter addressed by Mr. Burnham, to his Worship Mayor Morlow:

To the Mayor and Council of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—On Friday, Nov. 24th, at 11 a.m., the County Council of Peterborough appears before the Minister of Railways and Canals regarding several county matters. The Minister is extremely busy getting ready for Parliament, and this will likely be the last opportunity, at any rate at an early date, for the City of Peterborough to press upon the Minister's notice the absolute necessity of providing a grant towards the building of Bald Lake Narrows' floating bridge. If you will allow me to suggest, you might get Mr. Peck to interview the Whitney people, and then armed with their promise you could press the matter here with some success, I am sure. Then the County will be on hand to say what they can do in the matter, and thus we ought to be able to launch a scheme that can be of great benefit to Peterborough City and County.

The easterly projection of Pigeon Lake, known as Bald Lake and Little Bald Lake, cuts off the trade of the north one-third of the west riding completely from the city clear through to Buckhorn. This cut-off acts also like a destroyer of circulation. It prevents the commercial life-blood of that part of the world from circulating. All that part of the north country has become tributary to Lindsay, and we in Peterbrough have done very little to help ourselves, and now is our time.

Then ,we must all unite in a request for an eight-foot 4 inch T.V.C., and the necessary conservation accompanying it of the full capacity of the Trent watershed.

Then your honourable body might think it well for us to have a senator and I think Mr. Kendry would meet with the general approval of the people. I merely suggest this.

Now, let me propose that your honourable body send down as large a deputation as possible to co-operate with the County Council. There is nothing like a big deputation in business matters.

Pardon me for addressing you at such length, but there really should be a move in the direction referred to.

Yours truly,
J. H. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham may think that the "commercial life blood of Peterborough" is now being diverted elsewhere, but this will be news to the people of Harvey. Mr. Burnham says:

The easterly projection of Pigeon Lake, known as Bald Lake and Little Bald Lake, cuts off the trade of the north (one third of the west riding) completely from the city, clear through to Buckhorn. This cut-off also acts a destroyer of circulation. It prevents the commercial life-blood of that part of the world from circulating. All that part of the north country has become tributary to Lindsay, and we in Peterborough, have done very little to help ourselves, and now is our time."

The facts are not exactly as Mr. Burnham puts them. They are these:

A deputation of the County Council, two or three sessions ago, waited upon the Minister of Public Works, and the Minister of Railways and Canals, asking that a grant be made by the Dominion Government to build a floating bridge at Bald Lake, which bridge would be 2,200 feet long, which ,when completed, would give closer connection between North Harvey and South Harvey, and would enable the people in the vicinity of Lakehurst and South Harvey to obtain closer railway connection, at Bobcaygeon, than South Harvey has at the present time, whose railway connection is Lakefield or Peterborough. Bobcaygeon would then become the railway connection for the people of South Harvey, it being ten miles shorter than it is at present to Lakefield or Peterborough, and the hogs and cheese from Lakehurst and vicinity would be delivered at Bobcaygeon, instead of Lakefield, or Peterborough, as is done at the present time, and it would have the effect of diverting the trade from Peterborough, rather than to Peterborough, and, consequently, it would have a contrary effect to what Mr. Burnham is advocating.

Then, very few people in the vicinity of Ventress' school house would avail themseves of this bridge to come to Peterborough, as the distance would be no shorter and not as good a road as they have by either Buckhorn or Bobcaygeon at the present time.

If Mr. Burnham will take a trip over the road from Buckhorn to Ventress' school house, and take a trip over the road from Lakehurst, and by boat, across Bald Lake, to Ventress' school house, he will see the conditions existing would not be as favourable for transportation as they are at present. We are not objecting to the construction of the Bald Lake bridge, and we will be glad to see South and North Harvey connected by a bridge, but if Mr. Burnham and the representatives of the county, both Local and Dominion, and if the City Council will co-operate, and if they wish to do a really good thing for the Township of Harvey and the city, they will unite to obtain a permanent bridge across Gannon's Narrows. There has been expended upon this floating structure, including approaches, perhaps, $4,000. The County expended $1,000, the Dominion Government, $1,000, and the Ontario Government, at different times, about $2,000. The bridge is now approaching a condition that demands speedy repairs, or re-construction, and if a conference of all those concerned was held, it would be seen that the "commercial life blood" of Peterborough and Harvey would not be obstructed, but quickened by putting this bridge in permanent condition.

Then, when this bridge is completed, the rural mail service can be extended, so that from Ennismore to Lakehurst, a distance of about twelve miles, there can be had rural mail delivery, which this district could not, under present conditions, be assured of regularly. If we remember correctly, there are but three rural mail delivery boxes between Buckhorn and Lakehurst; whereas, with a permanent bridge—one that could be depended upon—there would at least be twenty boxes between Ennismore and Lakehurst. The Examiner will be glad to help on any enterprise that has for its object the provision of good roads and other desirable conveniences for the rural portions of the country; and we hope to see Bald Lake Narrows bridge and Gannon's Barrows birdge built and repaired. The Gennon's Narrows bridge, when constructed, helped Peterborough. It took, and continues to divert, a large trade from Lakefield to the city.

HOW PREMIER WHITNEY RECEIVES A DEPUTATION

Tells Temiskaming Representatives Who Wait Upon Him "You Can Go Back to the North and Blow Your Trumpets About Disfranchisement"—Some Heated Passages

(Toronto Star.)

What the deputation asked:

That, in the towns of Cobalt, Haileybury, and Latchford, and in the townships of Coleman, the municipal voters' lists of 1911 be used in the Provincial elections, although their compilation was delayed. Estimated number of men disfranchised 4,994.

Those in the deputation.

A. W. Roebuck, Liberal candidate in Temiskaming.

Mayor Greene, Haileybury.

Reeve Furland, of Coleman Township.

Ex-Mayor Lang, Cobalt.

What They Presented.

A petition 40 feet long.

What Whitney Said.

Declared that it was a case of negligence and carelessness on the part of municipal officers. No remedy.

The Real Excitement.

Passage between Premier and Socialist candidate.

The Dialogue.

Maguire: I would like to speak about three minutes, and I don't want to be interrupted.

Sir James: That all depends on what you say.

Maguire: I represent the discontented miners of the Cobalt district. We think this case is a deliberate attempt to disfranchise.

Sir James: Stop right there. I dont' wonder you told me you didn't want to be interrupted. If you are going to talk at all, you must be civil. I won't allow you to come here and insult me to my face, and the Government, too.

Maguire: Look here, Mr. Whitney.

Spread the Petition.

At this point Maguire, with a flourish, threw out the 40 foot petition. It ran all over the floor, and Sir James had to call in Charles Chase to clean up the mess.

Maguire: Mr. Whitney, as a Christian premier in a Christian country, if you want to use the laws for the protection instead of oppression of the people you will put these names on the list.

Sir James Whitney: You are responsible only to yourself and to your sense of self respect. Young fellow, my friend, you ought to be more warm blooded. You are too cold towards the world.

When Change Comes.

Maguire: Nothing is certain, Mr. Whitney, but change. Some day you will not be premier of this Province. If then you ever have occasion to come here, I hope you will get a more cordial reception than we have today.

Sir James: Well, apparently, your peculiarities have to come out.

A Meeting Sent Them There.

Some of the other conversation was as follows:

Reeve Furland: "A large meeting in Cobalt on Sunday night asked us to come down here and try to get satisfaction.

Sir James: "It is entirely a matter of law. Have you consulted legal advice?"

Mr. Furland: "Two lawyers were there. They rather thought nothing could be done. They were not sure, however."

Sir James: "Do any of you infer that the lawyer's decision was for political purposes?"

A. W. Roebuck: "No, but such a thing could be."

Sir James: "What remedy do you suggest?"

Mr .Roebuck: "We want to put it up to you."

Sir James: "That is exactly it. That is what you are here for. You want a large number of men to be put on the voters' list by hook or crook. Well, I will settle it myself."

C. A. Foster: "The reference to putting it up to you was not meant in an unfriendly way. We simply want to leave it in your hands. We think, and the people in these places think, that an injustice is being done them. We want a remedy, if possible."

Sir James: "It is the same old story of municipal laxness."

Don't Want Delay.

Mr. Roebuck: "I have had legal advice to the effect that the whole election is illegal, coming at this time. I don't want to say this, however, nor to ask that the polling be deferred."

Sir James: "It can't be deferred—and it is perfectly legal."

Roebuck—"We understand that the powers of the Government are very wide. Can't something be done?"

Sir James: "There is no remedy. We postponed twice the issuing of the writs for this very purpose of giving more time for compiling the lists. A few places have failed. It was ever thus."

Roebuck: "No help, then?"

Sir James: "The way you people have dealt with this is hardly up to the average of consideration of public questions. You can go back to the north and blow your trumpets about disfranchisement."

Foster: "This is not a political deputation. We are here in the interests of men and not of politicians."

Hon. Mr. Hearst, who introduced the delegation, was practically a silent listener.

PROFITABLE SHOPPING

In connection with this very interesting subject "Profitable Shopping" we would emphasize QUALITY, this is the key-note of successful buying. Never spare a few cents or even dollars if the higher price gives you quality. Buying quality gives you satisfaction, duration of wear and it also means economy. The same amount of money spent in fewer and better goods always means less money spent during the year and a greater return for the money spent.

For instance, take stockings, and the same principal holds good throughout. Take a pair of stockings at 25c per pair, the making would cost 12½c and the yarn would cost 12½c total 25c, but if you were to buy a fifty cent pair the making would still be 12½c but you would get 37½c worth of yarn, thus for only twice the price you get three times the value and in this case three times the value of yarn means much more than three times the duration of wear, also the added comfort of wearing a finer quality of goods.

Together with the very moderately priced goods, we also carry a very extensive range of qualities that will stand every test of comparison, of wear, quality, and value from every point of view. To-day we are going to talk about the higher qualities, the qualities you like to use, the kind that will give you good service long after they have given you good return for their price.

Ladies' Underwear

We pride ourselves upon the quality and wide choice of our ladies' underwear. We have them from 15c up, but it is the good qualities we want to tell you about to-day.

As you know the Australian Botany wool is the finest grade of wool that can be produced. We have vests made from this wool with low neck and short sleeves for evening wear, also in the same quality with high neck and long sleeves. It is necessary to see these beautiful vests to appreciate their unusual quality. They are $1.50 each, for a suit (vest & drawers) $3.00.
Soft cape wool vests and drawers each $1.25 In natural wool vests and drawers $1.25 & $1 00
White cashmere vests and drawers each 75c White Merino vests and drawers each 50c, also cheaper lines.

Boys' & Girls' Underwear

Our natural wool underwear will live up to every reasonable demand you can make upon them. They do not shrink, are warm and comfortable. The great test of value you will find in their wearing quality. We always have all sizes, 25c to $1.00.

Besides the natural wool we have great qualities in fine Scotch wool, cashmere and other materials, 27 different qualities of them.

Men's Underwear

Our men's underwear section is well supplied with qualities that are well worthy to be placed in this list of sterling values.

Our English natural all wool shirts and drawers at $4.50 per suit or $2.25 each are always trustworthy, warm, comfortable and durable, they have double knees, elbows and double breasts.

They give a feeling of warmth and luxury and yet are not bulky or clumsy.

We have Penman's natural underwear at $1.25 & $1. Scotch wool and many other makes.

Boys' Stockings

Boy's double Saxony wool stockings, this is a stocking that has stood the test of all the time we have been in business (31 years) and it is still the great stand-by. We can find no other stocking to equal it for wear, comfort and value. Sizes 8½, 9, 9½, per pair 50c. Size 10, 75c

Three pairs of these stockings will easily last a dozen of the ordinary kind, not only do they wear well but the cold will hardly go through them.

Something New in Little Hose

We have a new hose for little people, combination silk and wool, sizes 4, 4½, 5, 5½, 6, 6½. These hose are made with a pure silk thread outside and inside, with a soft wool thread between, thus giving weight, warmth and wear and the soft lustre of the silk thread, delicate shades as well as black and white.

Boots

Our boot business is steadily growing. We have boots at all prices. But let us recommend the best qualities to you to-day they are certainly the cheapest in the end. Of course we have ladies boots at $1.25 & $1.50, while we know that they are the very best possible qualities that can be obtained for these prices, yet the wise shopper in this as in all departments will find her greatest profit when she turns to the higher qualities, for $3.00, $3 50, $4.00 per pair, we have boots that will wear with any boots no matter what you may pay for them. They are made from the best solid leather throughout. They are smartly designed and as you wear them they prove their value in their wear, and nice appearance.

Of course we know that for a special purpose a cheap boot is needed, but some ladies will say "I just want a cheap boot to-day, for I'm just going to put them on and wear them every day".

Now don't you think that when any article is intended to stand the strain of continual wear, that it would be wise to select the strong boot? We can give you a strong boot that is also dainty in appearance.

ELLIOT'S

The Scotch Curlers To Visit Here On January 22

MONTREAL, NOVEMBER 22. — Starting on January the second, at Halifax and finishing with the Winnipeg Bonspiel, for which they will arrive in the Western metropolis on February the eighth, the Scottish curlers, who will visit the Dominion this year are going to put in six weeks of sightseeing and curling, which will surely beat anything of its kind which has ever been attempted previously.

The itinerary of the trip has at last been adopted, and passed. It provided for visits to thirteen cities in all, eleven Canadian and two in the United States, and arranges for stays of one week in Montreal and Toronto, and for a practically unlimited visit to Winnipeg to finish with, which will take in the big Winnipeg bonspiel when curlers from all over the West from both sides of the border will compete.

The trip planned brings the visiting besom experts to this city between January tenth and sixteenth. This means that the visitors will be here while the Gordon Medal play is going on. The Gordon Medal matches are to be played in Montreal this year, and rinks from Boston, Schenectady, Utica and other curling centres in New York and Massachusetts will be on hand. The object is to provide as varied entertainment for the visitors as is possible.

The full programme of the tour, as announced by Dr. J. T. Finnie, president of the local branch, is as follows

January 2nd, at Halifax.
January 5 to 6, St. John.
January 7 to 9, Quebec.
January 10 to 16, Montreal.
January 17 to 19, Ottawa.
January 20 to 21, Kingston.
January 22, Peterborough.
January 23 to 29, Toronto.
January 29 to 31, Hamilton.
February 1 and 2, London.
February 3 and 4, Detroit.
February 5 and 6, Chicago.
Arive in Winnipeg for Bonspiel on February 8th. Final arrangements to be made later.

HOCKEY

Lawson Whitehead, the well-known hockey referee, may coach the Trenton hockey team this winter. The lively little Eastern town is keen to get to the top of the intermediate O.H.A. heap, and Secretary Sangster is negotiating with Whitehead. Whitehead is an old "pro." hockey player, and has coached Swartmore College lacrosse team for several years. —Toronto Star.

Jack Spratt, the rover of the St. Michael's College team, will attend Ottawa College this season. Millan of Kingston Frontenacs, Heffernan of Peterborough, and O'Leary, another well-known player, will also wear the garnet and grey.—Toronto Star.

Lindsay may yet have two teams in the O.H.A., junior and intermediate. The junior team is already an assured fact, as they have been putting in some extra good training of late, and will be in good condition to dig in and win their spurs when the season opens. There are several good players in town for the intermediate ranks, and the fans will be pleased to know that there will be lots doing in hockey circles in Lindsay this year.—Lindsay Post.

The junior O.H.A. team had a work out last night, about sixteen were in attendance. The boys had a nice evening's practice, and it looks as if there will be something doing when they start to mix up with other teams this winter.—Lindsay Post.

"It is a pleasure to tell you that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best cough medicine I have ever used," writes Mrs. Hugh Campbell, of Lavonia, Ga. "I have used it with all my children and the results have been highly satisfactory." For sale by all druggists.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Two games were played in the Intermediate basketball league last night. The first game brought the Shamrocks and Hustlers together. The Hustlers were true to their name and hustled off with the game score 27 to 2. The second game was a very fast and close one, as both teams checked very closely. At half time the Burglars had the Dimes tucked away in their loot bag, but after a most strenuous period, in the second half, the Dimes recovered, and succeeded in fighting off the Burglars, until time was called. Score, Dimes 9, Burglars, 8.

The First Aid to the Injured class will meet to-night at 9.00 p.m., under Dr. Spicer.

The Senior Leaders' Corps will meet to-night for floor work at 6.15 after which tea will be served.

Senior gymnasium class to-night at 8.00.

Business Men's Gymnasium Class to-morrow evening at 5.45 p.m.

The members who are to make the trip to Lakefield on Friday evening, where they are putting on an entertainment in the Town Hall, are very busy putting on the finishing touches and the people of Lakefield will be treated to a first-class entertainment.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Now-a-days, milk is milk, especially in the matter of price, and we housekeepers should see that we get our proper measure. It seems to me that mine is not quite up to the mark sometimes. We should all buy a measure and measure our milk a few times and see that we get full value for our seven cents.

Yours truly.

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir.—I cannot understand Sir James Whitney's assumed attitude towards bilingual schools in Ontario. In his Hagersville speech he is reported to have said that there are no real bilingual schools in Ontario and the only place where any French is used is in a few schools in Northern Ontario.

Now, any person who has given attention to this question knows that bilingual schools are firmly established in different parts of the province, and that their number is rapidly increasing. It is a well known fact, too, that in the majority of these schools English is neglected and they are, for all practical purposes, French schools, and are fostering the spirit of French domination in Ontario. This spirit of domination is becoming so strong in the eastern part of the province that further demands are being made. Having secured bilingual Public schools, they are now asserting their right to bilingual High schools and a bilingual Normal school.

The reports of the Minister of Education will show the growth of these schools. The report for 1907 shows that one inspector, T. Rochon, at that time gave his full time to the inspection of these schools, and another, D. Chenay, gave part of his time to the same work. Together, they inspected 332 rooms in which the teaching was bilingual.

In the latest published report, that of 1910 ,there are four inspectors, who give their full time to the inspection of bilingual schools. These inspectors are T. Robson, D. Chenay, V. H. Gaboury and A. Belanger.

The number of rooms has increased in the three years from 332 to 415 according to the minister's report.

The government has not only appointed inspectors for these schools but has further recognized their claims by establishing training schools for the training of teachers for these schools. In 1910 English-French training schools were established at Sturgeon Falls and Ottawa and 32 teachers graduated from these in that year.

The report for 1910 further shows that these English-French Roman Catholic schools are now firmly established in the counties of Essex, Kent, Prescott, Renfrew, Stormont, Carleton and Russell, and in the districts of Nipissing, Algoma and Parry Sound.

These, Mr. Editor, are the simple facts as set forth in the reports of the Minister of Education, and it is beyond comprehension how any one can assert that there are no real bilingual schools in Ontario. The question is too serious to juggle with.

Chemical Engine For Peterboro'

In an interview with Chief Howard this morning, he said that the Department had been exceptionally lucky in handling fires similar to the one which they had last night, with the use of chemicals alone. "The real need of a chemical engine is more apparent every day," declared the Chief. The matter has been brought to the attention of the Council in the annual reports of the Department on different occasions, but the members of the Fire, Water and Light committee have never yet felt as though they were warranted in recommending, through the Council, such a large expenditure of money.

Last week, while the City Council was in Ottawa, Ald. Morgan introduced Fire Chief Graham of that city to the members of the committee. The Fire Chief gave the members of the Fire, Water and Light committee a ride in one of the new chemical engines, which the Ottawa Fire Department received last month. The Council were unanimous in seeing the need of a similar machine for Peterborough. Chief Graham also gave a demonstration, showing the operation of the engine, for the benefit of the visitors.

The question of purchasing a chemical engine for this city is under discussion at the present time, and will probably come before the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light committee on Thursday night.

COLD IN THE WEST

The many friends of Mr. Wm. A. Sucee, son of Mr. Jos. Sucee, 169 Hunter street, east, will be pleased to learn that he has returned home from Regina to spend the winter with his parents here. Mr. Sucee is an old Collegiate boy, and has been employed in Regina for the last two years in the City Treasurer's office. Mr. Sucee stated that when he left Regina, a few days ago, it was very cold, the mercury dropping 35 degrees below zero. Very little snow had fallen in the district where he was, but they had heavy snow storms further north.

GAVE POISONED CIGAR

JOHANNESBURG, NOV. 18. — For attempting to murder Johannes de Beer by means of a poisoned cigar, Charles Maher has been found guilty at the Criminal Sessions at Ladybrand (Orange River Colony) and sentence of a year's imprisonment and a fine of $1,250 were inflicted.

The complainant stated he was sitting in the yard of his house with members of his family and was about to smoke a cigar, when the prisoner entered and said: "Johnnie, try this cigar and I will try one of yours."

De Beer accepted the offer, but found that the cigar tasted very bitter.

He cut off half an inch, but again found it very bitter, and did not smoke it any more.

After having tea with the accused, he returned to his own house, and there noticed something white and glittering in the remainder of the cigar. On analysis it proved to be strychnine.

The prisoner admitted buying strychnine to use for vermin, but could not explain how it got into the cigar. He said there was no reason why he should wish to get rid of Mr. de Beer. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, but with a strong recommendation to mercy.

A SMALL BLAZE

The residence of Mr. Henry Baker, 576 Charlotte street, was threatened with destruction by fire last night. Mr. Baker has fitted up an improvised work shop in the top storey of the building, which is two and a half storeys high, and it was in this portion of the building that the fire was located. The fire broke out shortly after 9 o'clock and was first noticed by some of the neighbours. Chief of Police Thompson, who resides in the vicinity sent in a telephone alarm to the Fire Department. When they arrived, smoke was issuing from the windows of the upper storey. The firemen managed, however, to control the flames, without turning the water on the building, by the use of chemicals. The damage will run into the neighbourhood of $50.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY
"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested, and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

Are you going to see Aunt Mary grow young at the Opera House to-night. Lots of laughs. Don't miss it.

To Operate Both Slide And Rink

In conversation with Mr. W. H. Munro, Manager of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, the Examiner was informed this afternoon, that the Company will operate the toboggan slide and skating rink at Jackson Park this winter again. The slide will be opened as soon as weather conditions will permit, presumably about the first week in December. Extensive repairs are being made to the slide preparatory to its opening, and although no additional slides will be erected, the present ones will be lengthened. Mr Munro stated that the Company had been in communication with parties regarding the opening up of a restaurant at the Park for the season, but no definite arrangements have, as yet, been made. The restaurant, if secured, will be operated by a separate company, altogether, but will be run in connection with the skating rink and slide.

A Splendid Lecture

Rev. Harper Gray, of Toronto, Addressed Ministerial Association

A literary treat was given the members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association and their wives in the Y. M.C.A. parlours last night when Rev. Harper Gray, of Old St. Andrew's church, Toronto, delivered an address on "Method of Art," particularly referring to literary art as exemplified in Shakespeares' "King Lear." The lecture was scholarly and brilliant and proved highly interesting to the gathering. Rev. J. R. Webb, president of the Ministerial Association, occupied the chair. At the conclusion of the lecture, refreshments were served and a half hour was pleasantly spent in social intercourse.

Had Boils On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But, Got No Relief Until He Used
Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Batten, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

Varsity Team Favourites, In Saturday's Games For Canadian Title

TORONTO, NOV. 21.—The final for the Canadian Rugby championship on Saturday at Varsity Stadium, between Varsity and Argonauts, will attract the largest crowd of this or any other season. The fact that two Toronto teams are finalists has aroused the greatest interest imaginable.

The announcement to-day that Dr. Smirlie Lawson would play for Argonauts was good news to everybody. Varsity, as well as Argonauts, wanted Lawson to play, so that the Oarsmen would be at their full strength in the most important game of the season.

The condition of the field will cut considerable in the play. A dry turf will be a benefit to the Collegians, while a "heavy track" will be to the advantage of the Oarsmen.

The Varsity team expect to win on their quick starting and passing plays but do not underrate Argonauts, whom they consider to be a very dangerous team. The Oarsmen consider their chances very good, and there are many who think that they have a royal chance to win.

The betting should be even money, and take your choice, but in view of the previous successes of the Varsity team, they are likely to be made favourites at from 7 to 5, to 8 to 5.

The College team, as a whole, are better tacklers and superior at following up, while the Argonauts have the size and strength. The line-backing of the Argos has been a big factor in the defensive play in the Inter-Provincial, and it will be interesting to note how it will succeed against low and hard tackling.

Much has been said of the punting of Mallett and Binkley, but they have nothing on Greene and Ramsay, and neither of the Argos can run and buck like the two Varsity players. Lawson is a great plunging runner, while Maynard is a speed-merchant, with a tantalising side step that may completely fool the big fellows. The students will stand the gaff—so will the Oarsmen, so that it will be a battle royal to the finish.

Phil. McKenzie, the Montreal football official, has consented to referee on Saturday. Frank Robbins of Hamilton, will umpire, and Mr. McKenzie will select his own other officials, as did Dr. Hendry in the semi-final last Saturday. The line-up will be as follows:

MEETING POSTPONED

The meeting of the Church Hockey League, called for last evening, at the Y. M. C. The meeting was postponed until next Tuesday, when it is hoped that the Methodists of the city will be represented and preparations made for the opening of the season.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Yesterday we had the long promised ultimatum of my letter-friends' opinions on the kind of a woman a man likes best, and the opinions expressed were so interesting that I had to let them spill over into to-day's space.

Here is a description of an ideal of womanhood that sends me to my Stevenson to hunt up his description of the ideal married life—"for the faults of married people continually spur up each of them, hour by hour, to do better, to meet and love upon a higher ground. And ever, between the failures, there will come glimpses of kind virtues to cheer and encourage.

"My wife," says this idealist, "should be thoroughly domesticated, intensely fond of children and allied to the real home life; musical, interested in the best literature, very affectionate and ready to forgive; neat in dress and very exact as to boots and gloves; unselfish, broadly religious, with charity towards other creeds; fond of and willing to entertain genial society, with a knife and fork always ready for 'strangers unawares.' She must be a true life's partner who would tell me of my weaknesses and failures and help me daily with her woman's intuition and prayers to overcome my faults; who would make our lives happier, holier and better for our unity."

"A married woman" yesterday declared that men did not like a girl who held herself cheaply and declared that men would bear her out. Here is one who does.

"My ideal woman must be neat, plain, sincere, cordial, generous, large hearted, with a kind, pleasing personality. She must be one who converses on what she has seen, not what she has heard or read. One whose life and character is unquestioned, one who has travelled and with sufficient vocabulary to express herself intelligently; an independent girl and not a flirt or a jollier, and last but not least, a good plain cook who would try to please her husband."

I think this next man ought to get the exceedingly reasonable order that he puts in, filled. Don't you?

"Much depends on a man's nature as to what kind of a girl he likes. I have observed that intellectual men usually admire girls who possess good solid common sense, but not overburdened with knowledge; girls who can appreciate a serious conversation and still not be serious enough to lack the sense of humor. Furthermore, a sympathetic girl always appeals to a man, especially if her sympathy leans towards himself. Not too much spirit but some. Some self-control and not too eternally sweet; just a little capricious—that keeps him on the alert. Also one who can keep her spirit sweet and avoid all manner of petty anger. That is an ideal girl and an observant man can find her I am sure."

I asked especially for leaves from personal experience. Here is a rather sad one:

"Up to twenty-five or thirty years of age the vivacious and the chic dresser attracts a man, although not always without his having some feeling of fear. Men of this age ignore or are unconscious of the good and enduring qualities which make the woman estimable, companionable and lovable and also the qualities which produce the opposite effect.

"After that age, especially if they have been married, a man looks for and likes the woman who is not entirely selfish, who desires to see him happy, whose ideas are to help him and not simply to have him produce substance for her to devour. Then men want a perceptive mind and a woman loyal and not wholly self-sympathetic. As this is a leaf from my experience you will pardon me for not signing my whole name."

Here is an infinitely sadder and yet at the same time infinitely happier experience:

"Judging by my experience, I like what I had—a woman who was gentle, affectionate (not effusive), considerate of everybody, respected during thirteen years of married life and revered now eight years after her death. She was a woman that everybody, relatives, acquaintances and servants, loved for her considerateness towards others, a woman whom all children held out their arms to with smiles on their faces, a woman who loved every child she saw in spite of having seven of her own, a woman who went through the terrible ordeals of motherhood with a smile on her face and without a whimper—a woman who was always at the door to greet me with a smile, no matter how trying her day had been—a woman for whom my first love turned into a holy love such as one generally gives one's mother."

I trust my own sex have noticed that beauty has not once been mentioned as a necessary quality, that a sweet temper is generally demanded and that health, love of children, and domesticity are a premium.

THE REGIMENTAL CONCERT WAS ENJOYABLE EVENT

The first of a series of concerts under the auspices of the 57th Regiment was held in the Concert Hall of the Armouries last evening.

Prior to the rendering of the programme, Quarter Master Sergt. Edwards addressed the assembly and impressed upon them the advantage of having such a hall at their disposal and hoped that they would make good use of it, and thus contribute towards the success of the concerts. It was decided that a concert should take place every Tuesday night. "Two weeks from to-night," said the officer, an open night will be held: that is to say if any of the young men present have any lady friends, bring them along. If not, bring your sister or mothers. The use of the recreation room and bowling alley was also urged upon the young men, who would find wholesome pastimes therein, both educational and physical.

Last night's attendance was most encouraging as the hall was filled to overflowing and a pleasant evening was spent. Following was the programme:

Piano—Mr. Renshaw.
Song—Mr. Renshaw.
Song—Mr. M. Palmer.
Reading—Mr. John.
Song—Mr. Palmer.
Recitation— Quarter Master Sergt. Edwards.
Song—Mr. M. Palmer.
Recitation—Col. Miller.
Song— Quarter Master Sergt. Edwards.
Piano Solo—Mr. Renshawe.
God Save the King.

LAZY LIVER, BILIOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE COATED TONGUE OR SOUR, GASSY STOMACH

You men and women who somehow can't get feeling right—who have an almost daily headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decom posed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

TAR AND FEATHER TRIAL

LINCOLN CENTRE, KAS., NOV. 21.—While spectators who crowded the court room almost to suffocation craned their necks in an endeavour not to miss a syllable of her testimony regarding the perpetration of a "tar and feather" outrage by three of the most prominent citizens of the community, Miss Mary Chamberlain, young and pretty, took the stand in Judge Glover's court to-day and related the events of the night of Aug. 7.

"Why didn't you call for help?" was asked.

"I did call. I screamed. But Ricord, the man who was acting as my escort, had hidden in the bushes nearby and did not appear until it was all over."

Miss Chamberlain related in detail the events of the summer night. She told of her "date" with Ed. Ricord, the village Beau Brummel, of his insistence that she accompany him; of his strange manner as they neared the rendezvous, of the sudden appearance of the masked men, who pointed a gun, afterward discovered to be a toy pistol, at the buggy, of her appeal to Ricord, and his hasty retreat into the bushes; of being dragged to a huge bonfire, where three men partly stripped her, and held her prostrate while the sticky mass was applied from a bucket.

"When it was all over the men left me," continued the witness. "Ricord came out from his hiding place, and with the tar still dripping from me, we drove to my home."

The day's session opened with the examination of Ed. Ricord, who had previously confessed to having lured the girl to the place where she was to be tarred. Ricord took the stand yesterday, telling how he had been hired to bring the girl out on the night of the "tar party."

Shook Her Head.—A little girl was paying her first visit to a museum, and her mother was anxious to explain everything to her, so as to make the visit of educational value. Room after room they passed through, and at length they stood before a knight in shining armour. "This, Nellie," said her mother, "is a suit of armour which used to be worn by the knights of old. What do you think of it, dear?" Nellie looked at it thoughtfully, then shook her head. "Perhaps it was all right," she said doubtfully. "But don't you think, mother, it must have scratched the furniture?"

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community, only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

Two Crowns

LONDON, NOV. 18.—Two crowns, to be worn by the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress in the ceremonial of the Delhi Durbar, are included among the state jewels which were taken to India in the custody of a special official, the Keeper of the Jewels, who has a cabin set aside for his use in H.M.S. Medina.

The King's crown will be one specially made—a crown of India. The Queen will wear her coronation crowns of diamonds, the magnificent specimen of the jeweller's art which was prepared for her crowning at Westminster Abbey. In the forefront of the diadem the Koh-i-noor diamond blazes, so that the use of the crown at the Durbar will be particularly happy.

The robes which the Queen intends to wear in the Durbar ceremonial are those she wore at her coronation, slightly altered and made lighter in consideration of the heat which will have to be borne at Delhi.

The Queen's private jewels and the many priceless jewelled orders to be worn by Their Majesties upon occasions of state, will also form part of the immensely valuable collection in the care of the Keeper of the Jewels on the Medina.

One particularly noted ornament to be worn by the Queen at the Durbar will be a lotus flower of diamonds, and another will be a magnificent pearl necklace.

Twenty-four silver trumpets, to be used by the state trumpeters — who will, with their fanfares, herald the Durbar proclamation of the King-Emperor—have been made. The banners for them are being manufactured in India, and after the trumpets have been used they will be kept as souvenirs of the great day. The King will have one, and so will the Viceroy, and others will be given to other distinguished persons.

RETURN OF WASP WAIST

LONDON, NOV. 18.—Signs are not wanting that the wasp waist, so popular four years ago, is to return to favour—presently. A few fair Parisiennes are endeavouring to disturb the comfortable reign of the "no change" fashions by adopting the wasp waist and making it once again popular. And, of course, a fashion popular in Paris always ends by becoming popular here.

Sensational waist sizes quoted in the heyday of the infatuation for the wasp waist are 15, 16 and 17 inches. "The smallest size corset we have been selling for some time is for a 19-inch waist," said a representative of a large firm of corsetieres.

Already there is a tendency to show the waistline more distinctly, and belts are being worn again in narrow leather form of about an inch in depth.

Live On Six Cents A Day

LONDON, NOV. 18.—Within half a dozen miles of the wealthiest city in the world there has dwelt during the last two months a man who lived the simple life on six cents a day. His home was on the Essex marshes, half a mile to the east of Custom House station. He pitched a tent, or, rather, a hut, of the most primitive description—it was constructed of hoops and sacks and rags—beside a stream which meanders through the pasturage of a tolerant dairy farmer. A few yards from this hut was another of even more primitive construction. It was about four feet high, four feet broad, and six feet long. In it four children lived, sleeping at night with nothing between them and mother earth, save old sacks.

The man himself lived in comparative luxury, revelling in the warm glow of fires of coke gathered by the children from refuse heaps on the marshes.

Rentless and taxproof, this man of the marshes found life much less of a burden than the millionaire, his method being to live on the simplest of fare. This was supplied to him mainly by the children. These children piled up the revenues of the family from coke picked up and sold.

Out of the return for the work of their busy little hands on the rubbish heaps the man was able to buy the following daily list of delicacies:

Bread	One cent.
Milk	One cent.
Butter	One cent.
Oatmeal	One cent.
Sugar	One cent.
Tea dust, salt	One cent.
Total	Six cents.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Only nine more days to complete that list of 189 new members for the Y.M.C.A. There has to be some hustling, too. There are still over 100 to get.

Looks like a big proposition doesn't it? But it should be easy. Did all the present members do their share of the work? Many more than 189 should be secured by Nov. 30.

Here is the secret: Every member get just one of his friends to join! That should be easy enough. It would be good for the friend, the old member, and the "Y".

The reasons that are advanced by a few active canvassers as to why Peterborough young men should join the "Y," are too numerous for enumeration. Here is how one young man put it:

"Most of the young fellows around town live 24 hours a day. I do not know of many who sleep more than eight out of that twenty-four. Few of us work more than 10 hours, and many of us only 8 hours. What are we going to do with the other six to eight hours?

"The way we spend our spare time determines our success in the business world. I hear that many of us waste the most of it.

"Here's where the "Y" comes in. They have a gymnasium, baths, and swiming tank that are invaluable. They have a reading-room with all the latest magazines, such as would cost us a hundred dollars, or more, did we take them privately. And then they have a pleasant parlour to sit in, and above all, a dandy fine lot of fellows to associate with, and make life worth living."

And we get all these privileges for only a $5 membership.

BECOMES DICTATOR OF CHINA

Special to The Examiner:

London, England, Nov. 21.—China will retain the Manchu dynasty as a limited monarchy. "That will be eventually the outcome of the present revolution," says Premier Yuan Shi Kai in an interview with British correspondents to-day, although he expects the country will be steeped in bloodshed to accomplish this end. While the Premier thinks a republic might be the ideal form of government, he says this is not possible. It is better to have a reigning dynasty deprived of the power of misgovernment than a republic followed by internal dissentions, anarchy and the probable partitioning of the Empire among other nations. Thus Yuan Shi Kai assumes the role of dictator of China and will probably effect his country's salvation thereby.

The London Chronicle says Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese revolutionary leader in the United States, has spent the last week quietly in London and is now on his way to China to take part in the new government of China

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

New Scale Williams Piano

Oshawa, Ontario.

Gentlemen:—

As Rubenstein once said when asked to designate the three most important qualities in a piano, 'The first' he replied, 'is tone', 'The second, is tone, and the third, is tone', and in the New Scale Williams you have given the public a piano that fulfills its ideals.

After using your instrument at all my recitals in Canada on my farewell tour, and giving them a thorough trial, I do not hesitate to pronounce the New Scale Williams a beautiful piano.

Sincerely yours,

Gasoline Explodes

Mrs. R. H. Doughty, Formerly of Peterborough, Injured in Rochester

Word was received last evening of a terrible accident which befel Mrs. R. H. Doughty of Rochester, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Glass, of 478 Parnell street, city ,on Monday morning.

Mrs. Doughty was engaged in putting gasoline in a stove, when the oil exploded. The unfortunate lady was very badly burned about the head and body, and lies in a critical condition.

A HYPNOTIC POISON

BERLIN, NOV. 18.—Is there such a thing as a "hypnotic poison?"

This problem was discussed at length during the trial here of a Russian swindler named Gorenstein, who was sentenced to ten years' penal servitude for a series of remarkable robberies.

Gorenstein's plan was to make the acquaintance of rich women in trains, treat them to "doped" wine, and bring them as prisoners to his Berlin house, where he robbed them and afterwards turned them adrift.

He used a mysterious drug or poison which, it was said, at first deprived his victims of consciousness, and, after the recovery of consciousness, left them for a time deprived of will power.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood .Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.

Of Interest To Duck Shooters

The decision, re the duck shooting case heard before Magistrate Moore last week was given yesterday. Messrs. J. Carnegie and Charlie Bowerman of Port Perry, and Mrs. H. Hodgson, of Toronto, were charged with placing decoys for duck shooting more than two hundred yards from the shore, or a natural rice bed. The information was laid by Game and Fishery Inspector Parkin.

The Magistrate, in giving his decision, said that the decoys were undoubtedly placed more than 200 yards from the shore, but that they were only 30 yards from the bed of rushes and rice. No mention was made as to whether the bed of rushes and rice would conceal a boat, so the Magistrate took it for granted that it would conceal a boat. The clause under which the prosecution was being made ,reads "natural bed of rushes," Magistrate Moore said that the word "natural" changed the meaning of the clause altogether. To his mind, the word, "natural," meant any place where rushes or such plants were likely to be found growing, therefore, as the decoys in question were within 70 yards of such a place where rushes and rice were growing ,the Magistrate dismissed the case, the only costs levied being the costs of the imprisonment, which amounted to $3.60. IN MEMORIAM

Following are lines inscribed to the memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Westlake, who departed this life on September 25th, 1911, aged 90 years and six months:

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, the summons obey,
I would not withhold thee, so hasten away,
Thy trials are over, thy work it is done,
Behold there awaits thee the crown thou has won.

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, His banner is love;
Its folds are around the, though planted above;
A harp is prepared where praises are sung,
Its sweet chords are for thee eternally strung.

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, swift angels of light
Have hurried from heaven with vestments of white;
Oh, haste to enrobe thee, awake for the sky,
The voice of the ransomed will greet thee on high.

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, and yet let me mourn,
Though upward to glory thy spirit is borne.
For, oh, I remember what fervour there hung,
On the words of salvation that fell from thy tongue.

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, and still let me weep,
Though sweetly the Saviour, His chosen will keep;
For fond ties are breaking long cherished within,
While each is renewing the burden of sin.

'Tis Jesus that calls thee, oh, let me prepare,
Ere long to meet thee, by faith and by prayer.
There with Thee, O Father, thy Spirit and Son,
The fold and its Shepherd forever are one.

—Annie and Lizzie.

CHURCHWARDEN'S HOSPITALITY

A large number of the men of St. John's congregation were gracefully and warmly entertained by Mr. A. H. Stratton at his residence, Park street, on Monday night. The occasion was taken advantage of for discussing matters relating to the welfare, and promotion of church work. The Laymen's Missionary matter and the organization of a Young People's Association were considered. In connection with the latter a committee was appointed, which holds its first meeting to-night.

OBITUARY

MR. WILLIAM JAMES MARTIN.

Another old and well known resident of Peterborough passed away suddenly last night in the person of Mr. William James Martin of 253 Dalhousie street. The deceased had only been ill for a few days and the announcement of his death will come as a distinct shock to his large circle of friends and acquaintances. A few days ago Mr. Martin became ill while at work, although he had been in his usual good health in the morning and returned to his home. He was able to walk to his residence, but shortly after his arrival was attacked by an internal hemorrhage from which he never rallied, the end coming very suddenly and unexpectedly.

The late Mr. Martin was seventy-two years of age and was born in Peterborough, where he spent all his life. He was a quiet, law-abiding citizen, who earned the respect and liking of all who became acquainted with him and he will be sincerely mourned. Forty-eight years ago he was married to Miss Eliza Steele Jeffrey of Peterborough, who survives him, together with seven children, Agnes at home, George H. of Los Angeles, Clara T. at home, Robert J. of Peterborough, Albert of Toronto, and Eliza, Ida and William J. at home.

The deceased was one of the oldest members of Peterborough Lodge, A. F. and A. M. and will be greatly missed by the Masonic fraternity.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, 253 Dalhousie St., to Little Lake cemetery. There will be service at the house at 2 o'clock.

Got A Pain In Your Back?

IF YOU HAVE HEED THE WARNING.

You get a pain in your back, and you wonder what is the matter. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Heed the warning; cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise, and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease; the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

On the first sign of a pain in the back, Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken

They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the backache and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. Stewart Johnston, Richardson Mines, N.S., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my back, and I had to give up work. I tried Dr. after Dr., and was getting no better. I had almost given up hope when I began to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I took three boxes of them, and found I was completely cured. I feel I owe my life to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

MONK IN COMMAND

He Leads the House in the Absence of the Premier

CONFERS WITH BOURASSA

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—It was an illuminative day in the House of Commons. The opening of the sitting found Hon. Mr. Monk, Minister of Public Works, instead of Hon. Mr. Foster, acting as leader of the Government in the absence of Premier Borden, who was closeted for an hour in his office with Mr. Henri Bourassa. It found the Opposition jubilant and cheering, after a rarely brilliant and convincing expose of an impracticable and mock Tory Imperialism, in which selfishness and not sentiment predominated, and of a naval policy which started with an agitation for the speedy conclusion of a Canadian navy, and was now winding up with a timorous and inglorious policy of delay.

D. D. McKenzie (Cape Breton) resumed the debate on the address, declaring that Sir John Macdonald and the Conservative party had always believed in reciprocity.

The Maritime Provinces, having been deprived of the natural market across the border for their coal and fisheries, he hoped that some measure of compensation would be found for the former in the improvement of the canal system to the upper lakes and for the latter in better railway communication for the fishing villages of the Atlantic coast.

A. De W. Foster (Kings, N.S.), the man who beat Sir Frederick Bordon, pitched into Mr. McKenzie and charged him with swallowing his principles.

Dr. Clarke (Red Deer), the uncompromising western apostle of free trade, treated the House to a witty dissertation on the composition of the Borden Cabinet, and the reasons for the result of the late elections. He pictured Mr. Borden as regaling himself in the Quebec campaign with the wines of Old France, while in Ontario he flavored his liquor with more than a touch of Orange bitters.

"Who taught the doctrine of east versus west?" he asked. "Not the western men."

"You did," came from the Government benches.

"The highest thought of the world," declared Dr. Clarke, "is not national, it is not Imperial, it is international."

International protection, he said, was a contradiction in terms. It was anti-social, the very quintessence of selfishness.

He called on the Government to reduce the tariff on British woollens; else all the talk about the British preference was a gold brick.

The progress of the naval policy of the Government he displayed as a four-act drama.

First act—German scare — speedy construction of navy.

Second act—German scare still on—money contribution added.

Third act—The capture of the omnibus by the member from Jacques Cartier (Monk), and the determination to have a plebiscite.

Last act—Let slip by the Minister of Marine in his speech last night, that they intended to go, not to the people, but to the British Admiralty.

"And I hope," added Dr. Clarke, "that when he goes over, he will take with him Mr. Monk and Mr. Bourassa.

Hon. F. D. Monk replied to Dr. Clarke by referring to him as a hide-bound free trader, who seemed to take a singular satisfaction in the fact that for fifteen years he had supported "a protectionist" Government.

What was the purport of the amendment to the address? he asked. It was a representation to the crown of a supposed division in the Cabinet. There was no precedent in English constitutional history in the last 300 years for such a representation. In modern times the complexion of the Cabinet was in the control of the House of Commons.

Passing quickly to the question of reciprocity, Mr. Monk declared that it was not only sentiment, but a careful weighing of all the conditions and facts that had led the people of Canada to determine to keep their entity, to remain in the Empire, and to develop their resources regardless of all foreign influence.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his campaign in the Province of Quebec had endeavored to instill the idea that he and he alone was capable of protecting his compatriots against the encroachments of the Conservative party. He owed his loss of influence in that province, said Mr Monk, to the falsity of that charge and the refuge he took under it so long.

"That loss of confidence," he continued, "he will never regain in our province."

In connection with the Manitoba schools and again in the constitution of the new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, Sir Wilfrid had chances to show his care for the French-Canadians, but he deceived the confidence that was placed in him.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—The Senate beat the Commons to the finish in the debate address by winding it up yesterday afternoon. Five Senators spoke, four of them being Liberals, and all had a little to say about the recent election. The only man who expressed satisfaction with the result was Senator Poirier.

Senator William Ross of Halifax regretted that there was neither Presbyterian nor Scotchman in the present Government.

The absence of a portfolio holding Minister from the Senate was regretted by Senator Choquette, who thought there should be two portfolios in the Senate, one held by an Englishman and the other by a Frenchman.

Strict Milk Regulations.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—An order of great interest to farmers has been issued by the Railway Commission as a result of an application made on June 22, by the Montreal Milk Shippers' Association.

This provides that every can shipped must have the owner's name stencilled on it, and cover firmly attached. They must all be loaded on the cars by shippers and the empty ones will be returned by the railway companies without extra charges.

If there are under 30 empty cans the railway will unload these; if there are under 40 the shipper must supply one man to aid; if there are over 40, the shipper must supply two. If any train is delayed over 30 minutes, the trainmen must load the milk. After Sept. 1 next year the railway companies will not be forced to take any can less than eight gallons. The commission took no action in the matter of rates, as they have already been scheduled.

Stand on Navy Approved.

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Daily Telegraph's naval correspondent says Mr. Borden's decision anent a naval policy will be received here with satisfaction. The old scheme was as economically as it was strategically unsound.

"From the first it seemed Sir Wilfrid Laurier had accepted the necessity of some action with evident reluctance. The Imperial navy needs ships, not men, and the overseas have the natural surplus for a naval service, whereas we have an oversabundance of men.

The Morning Post says: "Mr. Borden's announcement is entirely consistent with his attitude when in Opposition."

BILINGUALS DISCUSSED

In Meeting at Napanee—Civil Service Must be Reformed

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION

Napanee, Nov. 23.—Civil service reform, bilingual schools and the temperance question were handled by N. W. Rowell, K.C., the Liberal leader, in his address here yesterday afternoon. He dealt fully with the civil service question for the first time during the campaign and threw new light with regard to his views on the other two questions.

On temperance, he said that when the Liberal party got together they would formulate a policy on that question.

"It may not please everybody, but it will please the best judgment and the best sentiment of the majority of the people of this province, the people who are in favor of good Government, progress and moral reform," said Mr. Rowell.

His remarks on civil service reform are summed up as follows:

"The spoils and patronage system tend to degrade the civil service. The only remedy is the appointment of a permanent civil service commission, the establishment of competitive examinations and the opening of the service to all who can qualify by examination.

"Men should be selected for merit rather than for any services done to a political party.

"It's present condition has an indirect influence on the whole tone of public life. There is no more degrading influence in public life than the spoils and patronage system."

Mr. Rowell made some more charges, stating that the present Government, when coming into power, dismissed a great number of officials and appointed their own friends to the number of thousands to fill their places."

The meeting, which commenced at two o'clock, was held in the opera house. There were about 400 present. H. B. Sherwood, president of the Lennox Reform Association, was chairman. M. S. Madole, the local Liberal candidate, also spoke. Mr. Madole waxed warm on the school question. With respect to bilinguals he asserted that if no other man on the floor of the House would introduce a bill to force the teaching of English in all the schools he would be greatly honored to do it himself.

The public school question in this county was a burning one. He had been told, he said, that out of 136 teachers in Lennox and Addington, 100 were teaching on permits only, and were not qualified teachers.

Scholar Fought Teacher.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—When a teacher in one of the public schools was about to use a strap on the lad for impertinence the youngster attacked her, pulled a gold chain off her neck and tore her clothes. She eventually used the strap on him. It created a big scene in the school, and the Board of Education will likely investigate.

Members of the public school teaching staff threaten to resign if the board refuses to give them a salary increase. The matter is now in the hands of the management committee, and it is expected they will recommend the board that the teachers get the increase.

AFRAID OF POWERS.

Chinese Government Promises to Pay Nation's Debts.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Determined to avoid giving any pretext for foreign intervention for financial reasons, the Chinese Government has ordered all receipts from maritime customs, including the 1901 Boxer indemnities, to be deposited with the foreign banks, to the credit of China's foreign debtors.

It is intimated at the U. S. State Department that it will be for the Council of Foreign Ministers in Pekin to determine whether troops are needed at all, and if so when and in what proportion they shall be furnished by the Powers interested in China. It is understood as to this latter point that some such agreement—removing one threatened cause of friction—has been reached as the result of the State Department's enquiry into the various foreign offices about two weeks ago.

Both the Chinese Government and the revolutionary leaders are desperately alarmed at the possibility of foreign intervention in their struggle. Probably it is owing to the appeals reaching the Ministers from these sources, to keep foreign troops out of China to avoid precipitating a possible massacre of all foreigners at unprotected points, that the foreign ministers are hesitating to give the word for the landing of their troops

Advances of the rebel forces, both naval and land, toward Nanking, where, it is expected the decisive battle of the present rebellion will be fought, were reported to the Navy Department yesterday by Rear Admiral Murdock, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, which is looking after foreign interests in Chinese territory.

SIR WILFRID BANQUETED.

Liberals Extend Token of Loyalty to Their Leader.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Liberal members of the House of Commons and Senators to the number of nearly one hundred and fifty last night tendered a banquet to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the Commons restaurant, at which Mr. Hugh Guthrie presided. The guests at the head table included several of the ex-Cabinet Ministers, who now occupy seats on the front row of the Opposition, and Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. George P. Graham and Hon. Sydney Fisher. Mr Guthrie felicitated the ex-Premier on having reached his 70th birthday in better health and strength than he possessed ten years ago.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was greeted with much enthusiasm, said that he was ready to give his services to the Liberal party either as leader or in the ranks as long as they were required.

Touching on the defeat of his administration on the reciprocity issue, he declared: "I would rather be right than be Premier."

The declaration by Sir Wilfrid that he proposed to remain at the head of the party was greeted with prolonged cheers.

Other speakers included Messrs Fielding, Graham and Fisher, ex-Speaker Marcil and Senator Dandurand. They all agreed in saying that it was the duty of the Liberals not to be downcast by the defeat of Sept. 21, but to put up a strong fight both in the Parliament and the country to gain the ground which had been lost.

Sir Wilfrid was deeply touched by the many expressions of loyalty to himself and to his leadership.

Lloyd-George Pledges Himself to Women's Suffrage

200 GO TO GAOL

London, Eng., Nov. 23.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd-George, has addressed a message to the National Union of Woman's Suffrage Societies, in which he says:

"The Premier's pronouncement on the attitude which the Government is adopting towards the question seems to me to make the carrying of a woman's suffrage amendment, on broad democratic lines, to next year's franchise bill a certainty. I am willing to do all in my power to help those laboring to reach a successful issue in the coming session next year, which provides a supreme opportunity and nothing but unwise handling of that chance can compass failure."

May Be Called Home.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23.—"The action of the London police courts in sending suffragettes to prison yesterday morning is the enemy's declaration of war," declared Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, a leader of the militant suffragettes in England, in this city yesterday. "It means that the truce which has been on for a year is ended and a more desperate struggle than ever before is to begin."

Mrs. Pankhurst, mother of Sylvia and Chrystobel Pankhurst, the latter one of those imprisoned yesterday, is touring this country in the interest of woman suffrage. She addressed two meetings yesterday and left later for Cincinnati.

"Another 18 hours' developments may show the situation grave enough to call me home," Mrs. Pankhurst said. "The putting of my lieutenants in jail may make it necessary for me to go straight to the front without collecting any more supplies.

"It is the Government's latest bill, automatically enfranchising everything in trousers, which has precipitated the latest developments. A year ago we accepted the conciliation bill and granted a truce. It was the best we could get at the time.

"Then came the treacherous action. The Government presented its manhood suffrage bill, enfranchising 10,000,000 of the lowest types of men who live off their wives, who prey on other women and have so little political self-respect that they would not even register as voters. Government officials will seek them out and put them on the register."

Mrs. Pankhurst eagerly welcomed a number of interviews during her afternoon here, and anxiously sought news from London.

All Go to Jail.

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Unrepentant suffragettes to the number of 223, many of them apparently still in their teens, appeared at Bow street police court yesterday morning and were sentenced to fines or alternative terms of imprisonment varying from a fortnight to a month. The women invariably chose prison instead of a fine.

Many of the women are prominent in society as well as being leaders in the women's suffrage movement. Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, has been in jail on several occasions since 1909, and caused considerable sensation during one of her sentences by refusing to eat the prison food. Mrs. Evelyn Haverfield, a daughter of Lord Abinger, has also been in jail before for resisting the police during a suffragette demonstration, while Mar. Pethick Lawrence, editor of "Votes for Women," has been arrested on several occasions.

Counsel for the public prosecution said to the court that he could not adequately describe "the disgraceful and discreditable scenes of organised disorder," of which the accused were guilty on Tuesday evening.

Urge Georgian Bay Canal.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Premier Borden and Hon. F. D. Monk, Minister of Public Works, were waited upon yesterday morning by a deputation, which urged the necessity of an early commencement of the work of constructing the Georgian Bay canal. The delegation, which consisted of G. H. Bradbeson, M.P., Pontiac; Gerald White, M.P., North Renfrew; R. A. Dunlop, Pembroke; Mayor Hopewell of Ottawa, and W. J. Poupore, asked that an appropriation be placed in the estimates to be brought down at the present session.

Mr. Borden is understood to have assured the deputation that the matter is already engaging the serious attention of the Government. He did not make any definite promise.

Many are of the opinion that the estimates for 1912-13 will contain an appropriation of a few millions for initial construction work.

Duke Will Not Interfere.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—On the advice of the Cabinet the Duke of Connaught has declined to interfere in the sentence of death passed upon James Alek, a Hungarian, who murdered his wife and her parents near Saskatoon.

Brought Him to Time.

London, Ont., Nov. 23.—Last Tuesday afternoon E. T. Essery, acting for Mrs. Julia Hanson, issued a writ for unstated damages against William W. Wallace for alleged breach of promise of marriage. Yesterday Rev. Thomas H. Mitchell, pastor of New St. James' Presbyterian Church, robbed the court of an interesting case by uniting the contending parties in marriage.

Q. What is astigmatism of the eye?

A. Astigmatism is an uneven curvature of the eye and causes a double focus. As the eye always strives for clear vision, this double focus annoys the brain, and causes headache and nervousness. We make lenses called cylinders to correct astigmatism.

Q. What causes double vision?

A. Double vision is caused by the eye not being in line, that is, one may turn up or have a tendency to do so, or both may turn in, a weak muscular system is the cause, a weak nervous system is back of it all.

We would be pleased to have you call and let us fully explain how such conditions can be relieved by glasses.

CHAPLAIN DISMISSED.

King George's Spiritual Adviser Loses His Position.

London, Eng., Nov. 23.—A tremendous sensation has been caused in social and religious circles throughout the country by the announcement in last night's London Gazette, that King George had ordered the dismissal of his domestic chaplain, Rev. Frederick Percival Farrar, rector of Sandringham.

It is stated that the royal chaplain's dismissal is in consequence of serious charges.

Rev. F. P. Farrar, who is a son of the late Canon Farrar, has been a close friend of royalty for several years, and frequently dined at the royal table.

He has also been dismissed from his position as honorary chaplain to Queen Alexandra. As royal chaplain and rector of Sandringham the dismissed clergyman frequently preached and administered holy communion to the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra, and also to the present King and Queen during their residence at Sandringham.

Rev. Mr. Farrar was married on July 6 last to Miss Nora Davis, sister of Richard Harding Davis. She is a daughter of the late Clarke Davis of Philadelphia.

Central news reports says Rev. Farrar "has absconded and a warrant is out for his arrest."

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Much comment has been caused by the cancellation of the appointment of Rev. Frederick Percival Farrar as chaplain to Queen Alexandra. The official announcement to that effect was issued from the Lord Chamberlain's office. When an attempt was made yesterday to obtain the reasons for his retirement it was stated that Mr. Farrar had gone away, leaving no address.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Midgic Station, N. B.—One can hardly believe this as it is not natural, but it was my case. For ten months I suffered from suppression. I had different doctors, tried different medicines, but none helped me. My friends told me I would go into a decline. One day a lady friend told me what your medicine had done for her, so I wrote you for advice and received your reply with pleasure.

I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at the second bottle showed improvement. Now I am regular and never was so well in my life, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine.

Please publish my letter for the benefit of others.—Mrs. Josiah W. Hicks, Midgic Station, N. B.

Indian Head, Sask.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is indeed a boon to women who suffer from female ills. My health is better now than it has been in my five years of married life and I thank you for the good your advice and medicine have done me. I had spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without receiving any benefit.—Mrs. Frank Cooper, Box 448, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

I wouldn't bother you if it wasn't necessary."

"I'm sure you wouldn't," the Colonel admitted. "We'll slip away quietly when the game is over. It won't be long. Good shot, Freddy! Sixpence, you divide!"

They found themselves in the Strand about half an hour later.

"Where shall we go?" Wrayson asked. "Somewhere quiet."

"Across the way," the Colonel answered. "We shan't see any one we know there."

Wrayson nodded, and they crossed the street and entered Luigi's. It was early for diners, and they found a small table in a retired corner. Wrayson ordered the dinner, and then leaned across the table towards his guest.

"It's that Barnes matter, Colonel," he said quietly. "Heneage has taken it up an dmeans going into it thoroughly. He saw me letting out your daughter that night."

The Colonel was in the act of helping himself to hors d'œuvre. His fork remained suspended for a moment in the air. Then he set it down with trembling fingers. The cheery light had faded from his face. He seemed suddenly older. His voice sounded unnatural.

"Heneage," he repeated, sharply. "Stephen Heneage? What affair is it of his?"

"None," Wrayson answered. "He likes that sort of thing, that's all. He saw—your daughter with a lady—the Baroness de Sturm, and the seeing them together, after he had watched her come out of the flat that night, seemed to suggest something to him. He warned me that he had made up his mind to solve the mystery of Morris Barnes' murder; he advised me, in fact, to clear out. And now, since then——"

The waiter brought the soup. Wrayson broke off and talked for a moment or two to the maitre d'hotel, who had paused at their table. Presently, when they were alone, he went on.

"Since then, a young brother of Barnes has turned up from South Africa. There was some mystery about Morris Barnes and the source of his income. The brother is just as determined to solve this as Heneage seems to be to discover the—the murderer! They will work together, and I am afraid! Not for myself! You know for whom."

The Colonel was very grave. He ate slowly, and he seemed to be thinking.

"There is one man—a solicitor named Bentham," Wrayson continued, "who I believe knows everything. But I do not think that even Heneage will be able to make him speak. His connection with the affair is on behal of a mysterious client. Young Barnes and I went to see him this afternoon, but beyond encouraging the boy to search fo rthe source of his brother's income, he wouldn't open his mouth."

"A solicitor named Bentham," the Colonel repeated mechanically. "Ah!"

"Do you know him?" Wrayson asked.

"I have heard of him," the Colonel answered. "A most disreputable person, I believe. He has offices in the Adelphi."

Wrayson nodded.

"And whatever his business is," he continued, "it isn't the ordinary business of a solicitor. He has no clerks—not even an office-boy!"

The Colonel poured himself out a glass of wine.

"No clerks—not even an office-boy! It all agrees with what I have heard. A bad lot, Wrayson, I am afraid—a thoroughly bad lot. Are you sure that up to now he has kept his own counsel?"

"I am sure of it," Wrayson answered.

The Colonel seemed in some measure to have recovered himself. He looked Wrayson in the face, and though grave, his expression was decidedly more natural.

"Herbert," he asked, sinking his voice almost to a whisper, "who do you believe murdered Morris Barnes?"

"God knows," Wrayson answered.

"Do you believe—that—my daughter had any hand in it?"

"No!" Wrayson declared fiercely.

The Colonel was silent for a moment. He seemed to be contemplating the label on the bottle of claret which reposed in its cradle by their side.

"And yet," he said thoughtfully, "she would necessarily be involved in any disclosures which were made."

"And so should I," Wrayson declared. "And those two, Sydney Barnes and Heneage, mean to bring about disclosures. That is why I felt that I must talk to some one about this. Colonel, can't you get your daughter to tell us the whole truth—what she was doing in Barnes' flat that night, and all the rest of it? We should be forewarned then!"

The Colonel covered his face with his hand for a moment. The question obviously distressed him.

"I can't, Herbert," he said, in a low tone. "You would scarcely think would you, that I was the sort of man to live on irreconcilable terms with one of my own family? But there it is. Don't think hardly of her. It is more the fault of circumstances than her fault. But I couldn't go to see her—and she wouldn't come to see me."

Wrayson sighed.

"It is like the rest of this cursed mystery, utterly incomprehensible," he declared. "I shall never——"

With his glass half raised to his lips, he paused suddenly in his sentence. His face became a study in the expression of a boundless amazement. His eyes were fastened upon the figures of two people on their way up th room, preceded by the smiling maitre d'hotel. Some words, or rather an exclamation, broke incoherently from his lips. He set down his glass hurriedly, and a stain of red wine crept unheeded across the tablecloth.

"Look," he whispered hoarsely, "look!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The Colonel turned bodily round in his chair The couple to whom Wrayson had drawn his attention were certainly incongruous enough to attract notice anywhere. The man was lank, elderly, and of severe appearance. He was bald, he had slight side-whiskers, he wore spectacles, and his face was devoid of expression. He was dressed in plain dinner clothes of old-fashioned cut. The tails of his coat were much too short; his collar belonged to a departed generation, and his tie was ready-made. In a small Scotch town he might have passed muster readily enough as the clergyman or lawyer of the place. As a diner at Luigi's, ushered up the room to the soft strains of "La Mattchiche," and followed by such a companion, he was almost ridiculously out of place. If anything, she was the more noticeable of the two to the casual observer. Her hair was dazzlingly yellow, and arranged with all the stiffness of the coiffeur's art. She wore a dress of black sequins, cut perilously low, and shorn a little by wear of its pristine splendour. Her complexion was as artificial as her high-pitched voice, her very presence seemed to exude perfumes of the patchouli type. She was the sort of person concerning whom the veriest novice in such matters could have made no mistake. Yet her companion seemed wholly unembarrassed. He handed her the menu and looked calmly around the room.

"Who are those people?" the Colonel asked. "Rather a queer combination, aren't they?"

"The man is Bentham, the lawyer," Wrayson answered. His eyes were fixed upon the lady, who seemed not at all indisposed to become the object of any stray attention.

"That Bentham!" the Colonel repeated, under his breath. "But what on earth—where the mischief could he pick up a companion like that?"

Wrayson scarcely heard him. He had withdrawn his eyes from the lady with an effort.

"I have seen that woman somewhere," he said thoughtfully—"somewhere where she seemed quite as much out of place as she does here. Lately, too."

"H'm!" the Colonel remarked, leaning back in his chair to allow the waiter to serve him. "She's not the sort of person you'd be likely to forget either, is she?"

"And, by Heavens, I haven't!" Wrayson declared, suddenly laying down his knife and fork. "I remember her now. It was at the inquest—Barnes' inquest. She was one of the two women at whose flat he called on his way home. What on earth is Bentham doing with her?"

"You think," the Colonel remarked quietly, "that there is some connection——"

"Of course there is," Wrayson interrupted. "Does that old fossil look like the sort to take such a creature about for nothing? Colonel, he doesn't know himself—where those securities are! He's brought that woman here to pump her!"

The Colonel passed his hand across his forehead.

"I am getting a little confused," he murmured.

"And I," Wrayson declared, with barely suppressed excitement, "am beginning to see at least the shadow of daylight. If only you had some influence with your daughter, Colonel!"

The Colonel looed at him steadfastly. Wrayson wondered whether if was the light, or whether indeed his friend had aged so much during the last few months.

"I have no influence over my daughter, Wrayson," he said. "I thought that I had already explained that. And, Herbert," he added, leaning over the table, "why don't you let this matter alone? It doesn't concern you. You are more likely to do harm than good by meddling with it. There may be interests involved, greater than you know of; you may find understanding a good deal more dangerous than ignorance. It isn't your affair, anyhow. Take my advice! Let it alone!"

"I wish I could," Wrayson answered, with a little sigh. "Frankly, I would if I could, but it fascinates me."

"All that I have heard of it," the Colonel remarked wearily, "sounds sordid enough."

Wrayson nodded.

"I think," he said, "that it is the sense of personal contact in a case like this which stirs the blood. I have memories about that night, Colonel, which I couldn't describe to you—or any one. And now this young brother coming on the scene seems to bring the dead man to life again. He's one of the worst type of young bounders I ever came into contact with. A creature without sentiment or feeling of any sort—nothing but an almost ravenous cupidity. He's wearing his brother's clothes now—thinks nothing of it! He hasn't a single regret. I haven't heard a single decent word pass his lips. But he wants the money. Nothing else! The money!"

"Do you believe," the Colonel asked, "that he will get it?"

"Who can tell?" Wrayson answered. "That Morris Barnes was in possession of valuables of some sort, everything goes to prove. Just think of the number of people who have shown their interest in him. There is Bentham an dhis mysterious client, the Baroness de Sturm and your daughter ,and—the person who murdered him. Apparently, even though he lost his life, Barnes was too clever for them, for his precious belongings must still be undiscovered."

The Colonel finished his wine and leaned back in his chair.

"I a mtired of this subject," he said. "I should like to get back to the club."

Wrayson called for the bill a little unwillingly. He was, in a sense, disappointed at the Colonel's attitude.

"Very well," he said, "we will bury it. But before we do so, there is one thing I have had it in my mind to say—for some time. I want to say it now. It is about your daughter, oClonel!"

The Colonel looked at him curiously.

"My daughter?" 'he repeated, under his breath.

Wrayson leaned a little forward. Something new had come into his face. This was the first time he had suffered such words to pass his lips—almost the first time he had suffered such thoughts to form themselves in his mind.

"I never looked upon myself," he said, quietly, "as a particularly impulsive person. Yet it was an impulse which prompted me to conceal the truth as to her presence in the art buildings that night. It was a serious thing to do, and somehow I fancy that the end is not yet."

"Why did you do it?" the Colonel asked. "You did not know who she was. It could not have been that."

"Why did I do it?" Wrayson repeated. "I can't tell you. I only know that I should do it again and again if the need come. If I told you exactly how I felt, it would sound like rot. But I'm going to ask you that question."

"Well!"

The Colonel's grey eyebrows were drawn together. His eyes were keen and bright. So he might have looked in time of stress—but he was not in the least like the genial idol of the Sheridan billiard room.

"If I came to you to-morrow," Wrayson said, "and told you that I had met at last the woman whom I wished to make my wife, and that woman was your daughter, what should you say?"

"I should be glad," the Colonel answered simply.

"You and she are, for some unhappy reason, not on speaking terms. That——"

"Good God!" the Colonel interrupted, "whom do you mean Whom are you talking about?"

"About your daughter—whom I shielded—the companion of the Baroness de Sturm. You daughter Louise."

The Colonel raised his trembling fingers to his forehead. His voice quivered ominously.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Like many another Newfoundlander living far from doctors, Mr. Stone feels unbounded gratitude for the benefits obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

For years he had suffered from a congested condition of the liver and kidneys, with headaches, backaches, pains in limbs and body. Words fail to describe his sufferings as well as the gratitude he wants to express for the cure.

Mr. Alex. J. Stone, West Point, Nfld., writes: "I suppose you thought I had forgotten all about you when I got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but I haven't. You must excuse mistakes, for like many Newfoundland men, I have not much education, but I want to thank you many times for your medicine.

"I cannot tell you what I suffered from liver and kidney derangements, indigestion and constipation, nor can I find words to express how much good this medicine has done me. I feel better than I have for ve years and have given some of these pills to friends, who tell me they have done them a wonderful lot of good. I want to express my heartfelt gratitude for the benefit derived from the great medicine."

ASTHMA

Mrs. Farndel of Clementsport, N. S., Suffered All Her Life From Asthma, But Was Permanently Cured by Catarrhozone After All Other Means Failed.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma, and hopes that many will follow her example and use Catarrhozone:—

"I am now in my eightieth year, and cannot recall the time when I was free from asthma. I had always a choking cough, feverishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, headache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave relief in five minutes, and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used I was completely cured. I am as free now from asthma as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone inhaler next to life itself."

Two Minute Talks About

for Coal or Wood

When the Oven is such an Excellent Baker

WOULD you like to know the reasons for the wonderful baking powers of the Pandora oven?

One reason why the Pandora oven excels as a baker is because the Fire-Box is amply large enough to provide all the heat the oven requires. Another is because the Sheet Steel Walls of the oven are uniform in thickness. This, together with the Special Flue Construction which carries the heat around the oven twice, assures absolutely uniform distribution of heat in the oven. Still another is because the main bottom of range is protected with a heavy coating of Fire Clay which prevents cold drafts, passing underneath the range, from cooling the oven.

Look at a batch of bread baked in the Pandora oven. The crust on each and every loaf is exactly alike. The Pandora oven is the sure-working, uniform oven that you've long desired. And it's in a range that's guaranteed to satisfy you in every particular.

Go and see the Pandora at our agent's in your locality.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

Indian River Hunters Had A Narrow Escape--Canoe Capsized

Special to The Examiner.

INDIAN RIVER, NOV. 22—The cold spell reminds us that winter is near and the farmer is reminded that the plowing weather has passed for another season.

Mr. Hilliard Nelson and Mr. Edward Walsh and sons are in the settlement completing their season's threshing.

Mr. John Leary and James Leahy of Douro and Mr. Wm. O'Leary have returned from a successful deer hunt on Lake Nipissing. The two former had a slight mishap while crossing a channel with two hounds in the canoe. A deer entered the water to the scent of the hounds and the dogs became unmanageable and upset the canoe. The two hunters, who were skilled swimmers, made shore.

Mr. Frank Sullivan, of the C.P.R. wire line spent Sunday at his home here.

Miss Johanna Allen, Douro, spent last Sunday with friends here.

Mr. Austin Allen, Douro, who has been in Edmonton for the past two months, arrived home on Saturday last.

Mr. Fred Fitzgerald and Mr. Edward Crossby of Douro, arrived home from Manitoba, where they went on the Farmers' excursion. They report very cold weather in the west.

The bachelors are contemplating on a box social at Christmas and they expect a hearty support from the ladies.

Mr. John Devlin and Mr. Nathan Stabler shipped two car loads of hogs from here on Thursday last, the price being $6.70 per cwt.

Mr. M. G. Youris secured about 10,000 lbs. of turkeys, chickens, etc., from here on Tuesday last, the price for turkeys being 15c. per lb.

Mr. ADVERTISER

Did you ever stop to think how long it would take you to personally solicit 18,000 people ? Quite a while, wouldn't it ? Sure it would ! These people can be reached directly and personally in one single issue of THE EXAMINER. Figure it out for yourself, taking the admitted plan of an average of five people reading a newspaper each day, and with our circulation of over 3,500 daily, you have the number of people—and the people who buy---that see your advertisement.

No other medium of publicity in Peterborough covers the ground as thoroughly as THE EXAMINER. Going as it does into a majority of the homes, it is the medium through which you must make known the merchandise you have to sell, real estate to sell, or in fact any publicity that you desire brought in a convincing manner before readers of newspapers.

If you are not already a user of space in THE EXAMINER columns, telephone No. 57 and let one of our advertising solicitors talk it over with you. You have all to gain and nothing whatever to lose by the transaction.

VARIATIONS

From Farm and Dairy.

L. P. Anderson, Algona, Iowa

Creamery men will be surprised, if they test every day, at the variations to be found in the patrons' cream at different deliveries. There are variations in the richness from day to day and as a result the amount of cream will vary. One day the patron will have more pounds of cream with a lower test than he did the day before with less cream. Unless the buttermaker takes the sample in the correct proportion for these variations in the richness and amount at each delivery how can he have a correct composite sample?

Let us discuss the dipper sample. As an illustration we will say Mr. Jones makes two separate deliveries of cream to our creamery and we take two samples for testing at each time, one for every day testing and one for the composite. To-day he delivers 200 lbs. of cream testing 20 per cent, which makes 40 lbs. of butter fat. To-morrow he brings 100 lbs. testing 40 per cent, which makes 40 lbs. of butter fat. Testing this for every day work he has actually delivered 80 lbs. of butter fat.

WHERE THE CREAMERY LOSES

Now we test the composite sample and find that the average test is 30 per cent. He has delivered 300 lbs. of cream and with the 30 per cent test he would be paid for 90 lbs. of butter fat, or the creamery would have to pay for a loss of 10 lbs. of butter fat.

Let us reverse the illustration, and suppose that Mr. Jones delivered 100 lbs. of cream testing 20 per cent, making 20 lbs. of butter fat. The next day he delivers 200 lbs. of cream testing 40 per cent, making 80 lbs. of butter fat. In all he has delivered 100 lbs. of butter fat.

THE PATRON MAY LOSE TOO

We will now test the composite sample and find the average test to be 30 per cent, the same as in the preceding example, and he has delivered the same amount of cream, 300 lbs., 30 times 300 makes 90 lbs. of butter fat the creamery has to pay for. In this case the creamery wins and the patron loses 10 lbs. of butter fat. If the patron only knew he was losing what a "howl would go up from Denmark." Now on the other hand it is all right with him when the loss comes on the creamery.

This example may be somewhat overdrawn in the differences we make in the tests from day to day but they are possible. The variations found from day to day [illegible] smaller mean just the same and have the same evil effects, and show the results which are had by the dipper method.

A METHOD TO BE CONDEMNED

The man who takes the sample with the dipper takes the same amount each day through force of habit whether there is a small amount or a large amount of cream. This we all know to be true. He does not get the correct portion. This method of taking the samples and paying for the butter fat on the basis of these composite samples cannot be too strongly condemned.

We have not taken into consideration creameries that have cream routes. Where the hauler weighs the cream and takes the sample, and this sample is made a composite sample and then tested every two weeks, tell me please, what kind of a sample have we here. There is nothing correct about it. It is a violation of the fundamental principles of good creamery management.

The shortage of butter fat in this latter case would make the buttermakers' hair turn gray to find the overrun.

TAKE PROPER CARE

From Farm and Dairy.

W. T. Macoun, C.E.F., Ottawa, Ont.

If we do not pay proper attention to the pruning of young trees during the first three or four years we will have a tree that will fall to pieces with a heavy crop.

I believe that lots of us make a big mistake in leaving too many branches which have to be cut out later on. Three to five mains are enough to leave on the tree. Then, pruning later on will be simply the cutting out of young wood.

The advantage of a tree with a central leader is that if one main breaks off this space will fill in. In the vase shaped tree the loss of one branch cannot well be repaired, and when such a tree rots in the crotch, the whole tree falls to pieces.

A central leader and three main branches is my ideal of pruning. I would recommend using the pruning knife every year on young trees, always keepig one leader ahead of the others. I would not head back the central leader at all the first few years. I do not advocate heading back young trees very much in our climate, but pruning is necessary to shape the tree for the first three or four years.

To give proper form to the tree.

To remove all dead branches and limbs that cross each other.

To thin out the top, so that the tree can be easily sprayed, and the fruit easily picked.

Prune when the tree is dormant to increase wood growth and thus renovate the tree by inducing it to bud and new wood growth.

CAUGHT A BAD COLD.

DEVELOPED BRONCHITIS. SHE COULD HARDLY SPEAK.

Bronchitis begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellow color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to consumption.

Mrs. Edward Travers, Campbellton, N.B., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I caught a very bad cold which developed into bronchitis. I was so choked up I could hardly breathe. I tried many medicines but they did me no good, and I had almost given up in despair. A friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle and felt much better, and by the time I had taken four I was completely cured, and I can assure you I cannot say too much in its praise, as it is all you claim for it, and more."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

UNLEACHED WOOD ASHES

From Farm and Dairy.

An averaged sample of unleached wood ashes contains seven per cent. of potash and two per cent. of phosphoric acid, which at current retail prices of these plant-foods makes wood ashes worth about 45 cents a cwt., or $9 a ton.

Besides the actual fertilizing value, by reason of the potash and phosphoric acid contained in the ashes, there is some value in ashes simply from the power which potash has to make the nitrogen of the soil available for plants by chemical action on the organic matter and humus in the soil.

The potash in ashes exists in a readily soluble form, and is thus immediately available for plant food.

Ashes contain a little magnesia and a considerable amount of carbonate of lime, which is of some importance because of its effect in improving the texture of heavy soils.

The farmer can better afford to pay $8 or $10 a ton for good wood ashes than the usual rates for almost any potash fertilizer.

Leached ashes have rarely more than one per cent. of potash and one-half per cent. of phosphoric acid, which will make them worth about $1 or $2 per ton as fertilizers, but on heavy soils they may often be applied with profit just for the loosening effect, and they are valuable as top-dressing or mulch in fruit gardens.

Sifted coal ashes absorb liquids, fix volatile ammonia, prevent offensive odors, and are valuable as absorbents under hen roosts or in stables. Wood ashes should not be placed under hen roosts or in stables, because potash liberates the nitrogen and the ashes as fertilizer are deteriorated.

On average soils, fruits and vegetables are benefitted by liberal applications of wood ashes, and remarkable results have been obtained by the use of ashes on leguminous crops, especially clover and alfalfa.

Ashes are best applied in the spring, separately or in connection with phosphate fertilizers as a top-dressing. For cultivated crops the ashes should be spread broadcast after the land has been harrowed and made practically ready for the crop, and cultivated in by a light harrowing.

Wood ashes may be applied at the rate of 25 to 50 bushels, 1,000 to 2,000 lbs., to the acre.

One ton of good wood ashes will contain about 140 lbs. of potash and 40 lbs. of phosphoric acid.

PROFITABLE VARIETY

From Farm and Dairy.

J. W. Clark, Brant Co., Ont.

The Duchess is a good and profitable variety to plant. The trouble with this variety is that the farmer would not have time to market it as it is an early apple.

The St. Lawrence is a splendid apple for local markets, but not a good shipper.

There is no apple like the Spy for marketing. The Spy, the Greening, and the Baldwin are our standard market varieties. I consider the Baldwin more profitable than the Spy. Kings are shy bearers, and, therefore, are not so profitable as other varieties.

The Spy has a tendency to grow very thickly around the outside and must be thinned out if spraying is to be effective.

The early varieties of apples are profitable under some conditions. If early apples are to be grown, it would be well for enough farmers to work together to send a car load at a time. Growers around St Catharines working on this plan have received 30 to 40 cents a basket for early apples in the west. At this price they are very profitable.

The agent who comes around trying to persuade us to buy trees of some new and fancy variety at an extremely fancy price is well known to all of us. One of my neighbors bought a lot of fancy stock at $1 a tree. Some of them turned out to be Ben Davis, a very fancy apple as we all know. Some of the varieties were quite good, but buyers did not know them, and preferred to buy apples of a standard variety with which they were acquainted. Let us stick to the varieties that we know are all right.

CATTLE RAISING

From Farm and Dairy.

C. R. Barns, Minnesota

We would invite no one to turn aside from successful cattle raising or dairying to venture upon what may be to him an untried experiment in sheep raising. But on many a dairy farm, and especially on farms with insufficient live stock, there may be room for a small bunch of sheep; and the study and care of these may develop such results as point the way to the keeping of larger numbers.

Fifty or 20 ewes, and a ram, will constitute about the right-sized flock with which to begin.

They must have abundant shelter from rain and snow; but it need not be in a warm barn. Wet, whether from above or under foot, is to be scrupulously guarded against by the sheep-owner. Exposure in a cold rain is bad for a horse or steer; it is doubly bad for sheep.

The sheep-run should be on a high, well-drained site—indeed, sheep should be allowed to run over no low, wet land, no matter how attractive the herbage thereon may be.

Except that the ram should have a little grain now and then, to maintain his virility, and the ewes a little at lambing-time, the flock will require only pasturage for the greater part of the year, with clover hay or like roughage for winter feeding.

The farmer with only himself and a child or two to carry the burden of caring for animals, will often find the keeping of sheep more advantageous than the keeping of cattle.

A GREAT HELP

From Farm and Dairy.

A can of gasoline in the kitchen for cleaning purposes will be found a great help if ordinary care is exercised against fire.

To clean the gas stove, soak the jets in a little gasoline, and it will remove all dirt and do away with any odor from the gas range, or scrub the jets with a little brush dipped in gasoline.

To clean copper or aluminum cooking utensils soak a cloth in gasoline and rub on the outside of the vessel; this will remove all black or discoloration on the metal.

For grease marks or dirty spots on wood-work, a little gasoline applied with a cloth will remove at once.

If the drain in the sink becomes stopped up, remove all water from sink and pour in a pint or more gasoline and let stand; this will cut the cause of stoppage in a little while.

Before blacking a stove or range, rub off the top with a cloth wet with gasoline and it will remove all dirt and grease and make the blacking stay on longer.

Laces, gloves and silks can be cleaned very successfully by washing in plenty of clean gasoline; there should be enough to cover the article you are washing. Change the gasoline as often as it becomes dark looking; work quickly and hang in the sun to dry.

Always remember when using gasoline to keep away from fire or flame of any kind.

TIT-BITS

MANY BIBLES DISTRIBUTED

The 94th year of the American Bible Society, just closed, is chaarcterized in the annual report of its board of managers as "one of the most notable in its entire history." That this is so is realized when it is recalled that 1909-10 saw the acceptance of the conditions of the Sage gift of $500,000 and receipt of the John S. Kennedy endowment of $750,000 for the general work of the society.

Even with these large gifts, however, the managers point out that the society's budget for the year beginning April 1, 1910, will exceed $650,000. They add:

"It is apparent that even the large additions to the society's endowment which have been recorded, when they shall all be received and invested, will not yield an income at all commensurate with the expenses of a single year. There will be need, therefore, for the same generous giving on the part of the churches and individuals that has characterised the past, for the society's yearly expenditure should reach, and that very shortly, a million dollars a yar, if it is to keep pace with the rising tide of missionary enthusiasm at home and abroad and properly equip the armies of the faith."

Total issues of the society at home and abroad amounted to 2,826,831, of which 1,427,247 were issued from the Bible House in New York, and 1,399,584 by the society's agencies abroad, being printed on mission and other presses in Turkey, Syria, Siam, China, and Japan. These issues consisted of 327,636 Bibles, 543,743 New Testaments, and 1,953,452 Scripture portions. In ninety-four years the society has issued the enormous total of 87,296,182 volumes.—New York Evening Post.

CURES AT LOURDES

In a letter from London published in "America," A. H. A. tells of some remarkable cures which were recently effected at Lourdes. Among the pilgrims from England to the sacred shrine was Miss Maria Margiotto, the daughter of an Italian father and an Irish mother. For 19 months she had been unable to stand or walk. "For 12 years she had been an invalid; she had undergone 11 operations for the removal of tubercular glands—one lung was seriously diseased, the other affected, the heart was weak and she had been finally prostrated by spinal meningitis," the correspondent says. On the train the doctor declared that she might die at any moment and extreme unction was administered. Two days after her arrival at Lourdes and while at prayer near the grotto she fell. "At first," the writer adds, "it was thought she was dead. Soon she came to and, rising, declared she was cured."

SHAKESPEARE'S PUBLIC

Literary fame as a dramatist troubled Shakespeare not; but present necessities could not be forgotten; chief among them the necessity of pleasing his public. His average public, the one he had chiefly in view whose average heart and mind he had to touch and delight, was that of the Globe, a large, much-frequented house which drew popular audiences, and where accidentally some ambassador might appear; but the fate of the play would depend not upon the ambassador's applause or some learned critic's blame, but on the impression of the crowd: a boisterous crowd, warm-hearted, full-blooded, of unbounded patriotism, a lover of extremes, now relishing the sight of tortures, now moved at the death of a fly, a lover of the improbable, of unexpected changes, of coarse buffooneries, quibbles, common witticisms easy to understand, of loud noises of any sort, bells, trumpets, cannon; men, all of them of an encyclopaedic ignorance.—J. HAIR WHITE AS SNOW

Restored to Natural Color with WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

ALMOST A MIRACLE

My hair was as white as snow when I commenced using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. One bottle restored my hair to its natural dark brown color. As I am now 70 years old, I consider the result most remarkable. It is an agreeable and refreshing hair dressing, keeping the hair soft and glossy, without being in the least greasy or sticky.

PROMISES REFORM.

Sir James Says Taxation Question Will Be Looked Into.

Durham, Nov. 23.—A surprise was sprung by Sir James Whitney last night when he undertook to discuss the question of taxation on improvements and announced that an assessment committee would be appointed during the next session of the Legislature, who would, during the coming summer's recess go into the whole question of taxation and find a remedy for existing evils.

"It is a difficult subject," said Sir James, "and I don't like to talk anything more about it than I can help."

In contrasting the conditions of taxation in Ontario, with those of the northwest, Sir James said: "It is altogether different here from what it is in the west. Different municipalities are liable on bonds. There are old debts outstanding and the limit of taxation for the ordinary taxation is two per cent. If you say that only land should be taxed in a township, you will get into such confusion that you won't get out of it for years.

"But I have said it before and I repeat it that when the farmers of Ontaro want such new conditions of taxation no Government will refuse to give it to them."

Sir James urged every assessor to get himself saturated with the workings of the taxation system and he would be able to adopt a definite attitude on this question for himself.

"The assessment of land values only is the Henry George system," said Sir James. "A very good man he was, but he had a bee in his bonnet, wrote a book and died some years ago."

The Premier omitted saying anything about local option in taxation reform, or about giving separate municipalities the right to adopt taxation reform if they chose to do so.

Wm. Scarf, president of South Grey Liberal-Association, occupied the chair, and among the speakers were Dr. David Jamieson, the late member and Liberal-Conservative candidate in South Grey; ex-Mayor Laidlaw of Durham and Wm. Allen. The opera house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and there were many ladies present.

WILL GET BACK.

Carpenters Will Be Reinstated by the American Federation.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 23.—When the convention of the American Federation of Labor meets this morning it will be with the expectation of passing on the reports of two of its most important committees, that on the adjustment of industrial disputes and that on the president's report.

The adjustment committee has in hand the long-wage l controversy between the carpenters and the sheet-metal workers, which resulted last year in the expulsion of the former from the building trades department. It is expected that the committee will recommend the reinstatement of the carpenters if they will agree to abide by the decision of the department in future disputes.

All the recommendations made by President Gompers in his annual report have been considered by the committee to which it was referred. Chairman Wilson declared yesterday that the committee would make some recommendations of vital importance to the federation.

The convention will adjourn on Saturday. President Gompers and the other officers probably will be re-elected easily, as the Socialists have not developed sufficient strength to make serious opposition. It is regarded as practically certain that the 1912 convention will be held at Rochester, N.Y., although Richmond, Va., is waging a strong fight for the meeting.

The following resolutions were adopted yesterday: Favoring the construction of all Government vessels in Government shipyards. Endorsing the strike on the Harriman lines. Changing Memorial Day from the second to the fourth Sunday in May. Advocating compulsory education, free school books in public schools, and night schools. Petitioning President Taft to recommend to the governor of Porto Rico larger school appropriations; an eight-hour day and other beneficial legislation.

Joy Among Jail Guards.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—Guards at the penitentiary are rejoicing over the fact that they have a promise from the Minister of Justice, through W. F. Nickle, M.P., to whom they appealed, that they will get a salary increase, and, at the same time, have two grievances remedied.

The barber shop closed under a storm of protest will be re-opened and in future a tailor will be allowed to put pockets in trousers and coats

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

May Revise Russian Treaty.

Washington, Nov. 23.—There was a well-defined report in Washington yesterday that President Taft in his forthcoming message to Congress, might have something to say on the subject of possible negotiations between the United States and Russia, looking to a revision of the treaty of 1832, principally to remove the present restrictions upon the rights of travel and domicile of American Jews in Russia.

The rumor was coincident with the beginning of the official calls of Geo. Bakmetieff, the new Russian ambassador. Mr. Bakmetieff had quite a long talk with Secretary Knox at the State Department and soon will present his credentials to the President.

Another Gain For Unionists.

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The South Somerset bye-election has resulted in another gain for the Unionists. Hon. Aubrey Herbert has been returned by the Unionists, with 4,878 votes. Henry Vivian (Lib.) made 4,730. The vacancy was caused by the elevation of Sir E. Strachey to the peerage. Over 90 per cent. of the electorate polled votes.

The figures in the last election were: Strachey (Lib.) 4,784, and Herbert (U.), 4,317. Sir E. Strachey had held the seat since 1892, and it was Liberal before that date.

Just to Get Married.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—"We are married and very happy." These few words on a picture postcard cleared up the mysterious disappearance of Miss Mabel Briceland, stenographer of Watertown, N.Y., and Thomas Kinney of the same place. A friend of the bride received a card yesterday telling her that the couple had been married in Cleveland. They disappeared a week ago.

Borden to Guard Autonomy.

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Yorkshire Observer says Mr. Borden's determination that no measure of Imperial preference should exist that is not compatible with adequate protection for Canadian manufacturers, shows clearly enough that the essential autonomy of Canada will be as jealously guarded by him as by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Tobacco Crop Damaged.

Havana, Nov. 23.—Heavy rains during the past two days, extending from the middle of the island to Cape San Antonio, have caused heavy damage to the tobacco crop in Havana, and Pinar del Rio Provinces, and especially in the Vuelto Abujo district.

Duke to Visit R.M.C.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—An unofficial report says the Duke of Connaught and party will pay a short visit to Kingston Saturday, Dec. 2, on their way back from Toronto and Hamilton, for the purpose of visiting the Royal Military College.

Dividends Assured.

The cost of food may upward go,
Although it's now too steep,
But thanks and smiles are quoted low,
And courtesy is cheap.
Then make your path a pleasant way
Through vale or on the height
And let this wholesome truth hold sway:
It pays to be polite.

A thank you here, a thank you there,
A pleasant nod and smile,
Perhaps a harvest rich will bear—
At least they're worth your while.
And so, whate'er your duty be,
Bid ugly thoughts take flight,
For courtesy is always free.
It pays to be polite.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Merely a Test Case.

A burly negro came to the doctor of a west African missionary settlement, dragging his reluctant wife with him.

"Doctor, pull one of my wife's teeth out," said he.

The doctor examined the woman's mouth and found only sound teeth.

"Oh, that makes no difference," said the interested negro. "Pull one anyway. If it doesn't hurt too much you can pull my tooth that is aching."—Success Magazine.

Rock Me to Sleep.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight!
Make me a child again just for tonight.
Mother, come back with the soap as of old.
Dig in my ears while my chin you still hold,
Rub from my forehead the traces of mud,
Scrub my thick, curly locks with the white suds,
Then o'er my slumbers your loving watch keep—
Rock me to sleep, mother; rock me to sleep!

—Lindsay Lariat.

COVET GIFTS TO THE GODS.

Probing the Bed of a Sacred Lake For Ancient Treasures.

"Ten thousand feet above the sea level, in the mountains of Colombia, not far from Bogota, lies the [illegible] lake of Guatavita, in a huge cup surrounded by hills," says the Guatemala Review. "An English engineer, with the assistance of a body of natives, has in the last few years succeeded in draining off all the water, laying bare a deposit of mud about thirty feet in depth. It is in this mud that the valuable offerings of the ancient natives to their deity are presumably lying, and the beginning of the trenching work has already brought 'finds' of a description sufficient to prove that the old tales of hidden treasure are not mythical. There have been recovered up to now a gold bowl, numbers of emeralds, two gold snakes, a gold band, golden images, curiously carved stones and several articles of pottery. According to the stories of the historians, these are parts of the gifts which the inhabitants of Colombia were accustomed for centuries to make in propitiation of their gods.

"The Chibcha Indians, under the leadership of their chief and high priest, assembled periodically on the shores of the sacred lake, the chief having his body covered with gold dust. There they placed their offerings of gold, precious stones and household treasures on a rude raft which, when it was heaped up with the priceless cargo, was rowed to the center of the lake by the chief. He then washed off the gold dust from his body, and the treasure on the raft was tossed into the water, while the spectators danced and sang on the shore.

"After the Spaniards invaded the country the natives are said to have thrown countless treasures into the lake to prevent them from being seized by their conquerors. The latter made some attempt to recover the gold, but met with little success."

SIFTING DIAMONDS.

Easy Way They Locate the Gems in South Africa.

Sifting ashes is a common process, but the sifting of diamonds is of recent practice and has been successfully in use for a few months in the lately discovered fields near Luderitz bay, in German Southwest Africa. The process of recovering the stone is so simple as to be almost ludicrous.

The negro boys, with blue goggles on, kneel down on the sand searching for the diamonds. They are furnished with spades, and with these they proceed to fill an ordinary fine meshed sieve. A man will then take the sieve, give it a shake and plunge it into a bath of sea water, which has the effect of hardening the contents, while at the same time, owing to the specific gravity of the diamonds, the latter fall to the bottom.

The man then picks up the sieve and turns it over on to an ordinary deal table, and the diamonds are then on the top. He takes an ordinary table knife, picks out the diamonds with this and carefully places them in a pickle bottle which stands by his side. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Lepers in Egypt.

The latest census for Egypt shows that there are about 6,000 lepers in that country, which, according to the London Lancet, is a number at least double that which has previously been mentioned in official figures. "The public health department," adds the Lancet, "has not yet devoted much time or study to this question, and there are as yet no laws upon the subject. But we are glad to see in the last annual report of that department that it is suggested that beggars and vagabonds affected with leprosy shall be isolated and that lepers should not be allowed to make or sell cigarettes and certain foods, nor should a leper be permitted to be an indoor servant or cook."

Catching Wild Fowl by Decoys.

The fens are today, as centuries ago, one of the most sparsely populated districts in England. In its wide expanses of marshland wild fowl make their home, and there are many suitable spots for establishing decoys. One is now in course of formation in an isolated spot in the Cambridgeshire fens. A tract of land a dozen acres in extent has been planted with osiers and willows, inclosing a large pool of water. Surrounding the pool are the pipes into which the wild ducks are decoyed by tame birds. This revival of a method of capturing wild fowl is attracting much interest in the fenland.—London Times.

Opposites Meet.

"Mr. Hurry, I want to present Miss Delay," said a clerk in the postoffice department the other day to the recently appointed chief clerk to the third assistant postmaster general. Mr. Hurry had just started work and was introduced to all the clerks in his division. Miss Delay has been employed at the department for about ten years.—New York World

A LITTLE DANDERINE WILL MAKE YOUR HAIR LUSTROUS, SOFT, FLUFFY, ABUNDANT

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

If you Wish to Double the Beauty of your Hair in Ten Minutes surely Try a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping [illegible] and falling hair.

Try as you will, after one application of Danderine you cannot find any dandruff or a loose or falling hair, and your scalp will never itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair sprouting all over the scalp. Danderine makes the hair grow long, heavy and luxuriant and we can prove it. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

ITALIANS' SUCCESS

Aided by Captive Balloon They Bombard the Turkish Inland Entrenchments

SEVERAL HUNDRED DEAD

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TRIPOLI, NOV. 23.—With the aid of a captive balloon, which telephoned the ranges and effect of fire, the Italian warships gave a terrific bombardment to the Turkish trenches and forts, some six or seven miles inland, yesterday, resulting in the retirement of the Turks and Arabs, leaving several hundred dead in the field.

Will Confess If Guilty

Special to The Examiner:

RICHMOND, VA., NOV. 23.—Rev. John J. Fix, the spiritual advisor of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., who will be electrocuted to-morrow for the murder of his young wife, said this morning, after an interview with the condemned man, he was certain if Beattie was guilty, he would confess all before going to the electric chair. The father, brother, and other friends are spending the day in the doomed man's cell. He spent a restless night.

To Inquire About Navy

Special Wire to the Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., NOV. 23.—Herbert Craig, M.P., will, on Monday, ask the Government in the Commons if anything official has been heard from Canada, as to whether the Borden ministry intends to carry out the navy scheme for Imperial defence.

Insane Man At Bay

THAMESVILLE, NOV. 23.—After driving Dr. Stewart from his home, Thomas Murphy, an insane patient, took possession, and with the aid of a vicious dog and a double barrelled shot gun held off the besieging police all night. This morning he still holds the fort, and the local police have asked Chatham for reinforcements.

Successful Social

The first social under the auspices of the Sacred Heart church took place in the St. Peter's T.A.S. rooms last evening.

There was a large attendance, numbering upwards of 250, and a very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent. The result of the euchre tournament was: Gentleman's prize, Mr. D. Merrill. Ladies' prize, Miss Fawley of Lindsay. The Misses Dorris supplied the musical element.

Winter Races For Peterboro'

BELLEVILLE, ONT., NOV. 22—The Toronto Driving Club, Samuel McBride, President, will inaugurate the ice racing season in Canada, Dec. 25, 27, 30 and Jan. 1, at Dufferin park. Port Perry will probably follow this meeting, and then comes Lindsay, Peterborough, Belleville, Kingston and other towns. While there is not money hung up at the meetings following Toronto, as in Ottawa and Montreal, there will be sport galore for the horsemen who may not have the inclination or speed enough to take in the big meetings.

Funeral Of Mr. Archie Seymour

The funeral of the late Archie H. Seymour, formerly of Peterborough, took place Tuesday afternoon, from Oshawa to Prince Albert cemetery, and was largely attended. It was conducted under the auspices of the Oshawa Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of which the deceased was a member, and six of his fellow members were pall-bearers. The floral tributes, which included a number from Peterborough, were unusually numerous, and beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. McGill Hood, Mr. Chas. Seymour and Mr. Robert Browne, and other Peterborough relatives, attended the funeral.

Among the floral tributes were wreaths and designs from the Prudential Insurance Company, Mr. Hagan, Mr. and Mrs. Fursey, Miss Wesley and Miss Cann, S. J. Allen and E. J. Melver (jointly) of the Prudential Company.

LINDSAY'S REJECTION OF THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Mr. Hall in His Meeting at Ventress' School House Gives Some Interesting Information About the Power Scheme.

HOW IT WORKED OUT

Mr. Hall's meeting at Ventress' schoolhouse, Harvey, last night, was largely attended and enthusiastic, and the candidate's enunciation of his platform and condemnation of the Whitney Government for what it has, failed to accomplish were endorsed by the gathering. Mr. Oliver was in the chair, and opened the meeting with a brief address.

Mr. Hall took up some of the most important issues of the campaign, referring at some length to the power question.

The citizens of Peterborough, said Mr. Hall, are taking about the same stock in the Hon. Adam Beck's Hydro Electric power scheme for Peterborough, as the electors for the Town of Lindsay did a little over two months ago.

The Beck power scheme, in Lindsay, was to purchase the Lindsay Light, Heat and Power Company, for $230,000.00, and then spend $70,000.00 in improvements. To carry out this scheme the Town Council of Lindsay proposed a by-law to mortgage the town for $300,000.00, and submit it to the people. The Hon. Adam Beck however, suggested that that was not a good way to go about it—that a better way to do, was to submit a by-law to the people to mortgage the town for $230,000.00 for the purpose of buying the Lindsay Light, Heat and Power Company plant and then, after the town owned the plant it would be forced to go ahead and spend $70,000 more in improvements. The Hydro-Electric Commission evidently thought that the ratepayers of Lindsay would vote against the $300,000.00 by-law, but they might vote for a $230,000.00 by-law.

The citizens of Lindsay, regardless of party, roundly denounced the Adam Beck scheme, at a public meeting held in Lindsay on the 26th of September last. Among the prominent Conservatives who spoke against and denounced the Adam Beck scheme were J. D. Flavelle, John Carew and G. H. Hopkins, K.C. Mr. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., dealt with the Hon. Adam Beck Hydro-electric scheme without gloves. He quoted from the Hydro-electric report, as follows: "Owing to the fact that the Company's present reserve will not be available to the town in the event of the purchase, it is proposed to re-establish this fund out of the surplus, which will be realized from one year's operation of the plant at the present existing rates."

Then the report of Mr. Hopkins' speech proceeds, as follows:

"Mr. Hopkins wants to know how long we are to suffer. Some excuse would be trumped up for continuing the old rates for another year, and so on. Vote for the Seymour Power by-law and immediate relief of over 25 per cent. You don't want relief for your great grandchildren. You want it for yourself. There is no town getting better than the 7c rate. I challenged Mr. Beck to name one and he could not do so. The Hydro report shows that it is necessary to raise $70,000.00 for repairs and additions. The first by-law was to raise $300,000.00. Why was it reduced to $230,000.00, because if you raise $300,000.0 and put the plant in proper repair, the Hydro report only shows a profit of $5,070 at the existing rates. The Seymour rates will reduce the receipts by $7,133.00, according to Duncan Rae's figures, leaving a yearly deficit of $2,063.00 to start with. These are not my estimate guesses, but their own actual figures. Ratepayers, for yourselves, do not be humbugged into mortgaging the town for $300,000.00. They could raise the other $70,000.00 without your consent, and they knew it, and that is why they changed the by-law, to deceive you."

It is quite evident that the citizens of Lindsay thought that the Hon. Adam Beck was trying to dupe and deceive them, and the result upon the vote of the by-law showed that the people of Lindsay were not prepared to be hoodwinked by the Hon. Adam Beck because there were 1,100 votes against the Hon. Adam Beck's wind cat scheme, and there were only 400 votes in its favour.

If the Hon. Adam Beck has any such power scheme for the City of Peterborough, it will likely receive the same treatment.

"I can assure you," said Mr. Hall, "that the Hon. Adam Beck underrates the intelligence of the citizens of the City of Peterborough, if he thinks the electors of Peterborough are going to be hoodwinked in this election on account of his vague promises that the Hydro Electric Commission are coming to Peterborough. The electors want to know what scheme he has, and if it is a feasible one, and in the interests of the City of Peterborough I will support him, and do what I can to support him, but if it is not in the interests of the City of Peterborough I will oppose it. If Mr. Beck has any definite proposition to lay before the electors, I am sure we would like to know what it is.

OLD BOYS IN WINNIPEG

In a letter received from Mr. H. L. Brace, formerly of Peterborough, and now educational secretary of the Central Y.M.C.A., of Winnipeg, he states that arrangements have been completed for a big gathering of Peterborough Old Boys in that city on Tuesday next, November 28th. It has been decided to hold a banquet in the Royal Alexandra hotel on that date and an enjoyable evening is looked forward to. It is expected that there will be at least one hundred former residents of Peterborough present.

County Council Left This Morning to Interview Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals

IN REGARD TO BRIDGE

The County Council left at noon per C.P.R. for Ottawa, where they will interview Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, regarding the Gannon's Narrows bridge, between the Townships of Harvey and Ennismore. At present there is only a floating bridge and the Council will ask the assistance of the Government in erecting a new and more substantial structure. The Pigeon Creek bridge matter will not be brought up, the principal and practically the only business being the Gannon's Narrows bridge. The Council will not likely return until Saturday morning or afternoon.

The following members went down: Warden C. Coben, Mr. E. Elliott, County Treasurer, Messrs. S. Killen, W. Tucker, T. H. Graham, W. J. Howden, J. Miller, W. J. Porter, F. Moher, W. Comstock, A. Brault, J. Knox, J. Russell, W. Hales, E. A. Tanner, J. Darling and J. H. Garbutt.

The Council has almost completed the business of the session, an account of which will likely be published in Saturday's issue.

SIXTY ARE DROWNED

Terrible Accident in France This Morning When Passenger Train Plunged Through a Bridge

LIKE RATS IN TRAP

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PARIS, FRANCE, NOV. 23.—Sixty persons lost their lives this morning when a train plunged through the bridge into the waters of the River Thouet on the State Railway at Montreuill Belay, in the department of Maine et Locie. The structure was weakened by recent floods, and some abutments had been swept away. All boats in the locality had been carried off by inundation and the work of rescue was difficult. The majority of victims were drowned in cars like rats in a trap.

Suffragette Goes To Gaol For Month

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., NOV. 23.—Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, who organized and practically led the Suffragette demonstrations, was tried and convicted today of assaulting and obstructing the police. She said that the militant methods taken were repugnant to women, but were the only means available ot secure the franchise or any recognition whatever. She didn't flinch when the Magistrate imposed one month's imprisonment without an option of fine.

OTTAWA, NOV. 23.—The statement of the Conservation Commission issued to-day, gives warning of the fact that instead of there still being millions of horsepower yet to be developed by Canada, from Niagara Falls, there are only one million and a quarter altogether, and more than half of that has already been placed under private control.

MAKING THE EMPLOYER SIT UP

Why do we want a Workman's Compensation Act that will make the employer liable, so to speak, automatically?

Because that is the only way to make the employer as anxious about the human lives in his care as about his buildings and machinery.

Just now the employer has the handle end of the law. The delays, motions, cross-motions, and appeals all fight for him, as against the workingman's short purse, or no purse at all.

The workingman, who has obtained a verdict in the trial court, only to have it reversed in an appeal court, is expected to say "The law giveth and the law taketh away; blessed be the name of the law."

The workingman is asked to grin and bear it. He is supposed to comfort himself by reflecting that it is better to have won and lost, than never to have won at all.

But that kind of a win is worse than nothing. What is needed is a Workman's Compensation Act, that is a sure winner—the kind that R. R. Hall advocates.

A Workman's Compensation Act, with no unnecessary and expensive court trimmings on it. A Workman's Compensation Act that pays cash in full, when the injured workingman presents his sight draft.

A Workman's Compensation Act that will decrease the necessity for compensation by making the employers so entirely and immediately responsible for accidents that they will seek to guard against them if only to save money.

A Workman's Compensation Act that will soften the employer's heart by going straight to his pocket, if he doesn't do the right thing.

When the employer understands that death or injury means dollars and cents, and no getting out of it, he will be mighty chary about maintaining death-traps in his factory.

A Workman's Compensation Act that makes the employer fully liable is the only thing that will bring him to time. To cut down an inevitable expense he will try his best to "be good". He will sit up nights and wake early mornings to think out new ways of protecting human life.

If you want that kind of Workman's Compensation Act vote for R. R. HALL.

DISTRICT DAIRY MEETING WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Large Attendance and Fine Addresses at Norwood—Peterborough Cheese Board is Highly Complimented.

MR. WARD'S REPORT

The annual district dairy meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association was held in the town hall, Norwood, yesterday afternoon.

It was with expectations of a goodly attendance of the farmers of the community that the meeting was appointed to be held in that town, and these expectations were realized. Considerable interest was centred in the various discussions, which, doubtless, will benefit many of those engaged in the production of milk and cheese. The general tone of the meeting was to the effect that the intense heat experienced through the past summer, was to the detriment of the industry.

Mr. Henry Glendinning, of Manilla, the President of the Society, occupied the chair. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, the Vice President, was unanimously nominated for the position of District Director, and he will be officially appointed at the three days' convention to take place at Campbellford early in January next.

After a few preliminary remarks the official business of the meeting commenced with the reading by Mr. P. W. Ward of Roxborough, of the report of the year's work.

Mr. W. P. Ward.

"Our milk," said Mr. Ward, "has not been so good this year, as that of preceding years. I do not think the Dairymen have been less careful than other years, but the extreme heat, which prevailed this year, certainly had a most undesirable effect upon dairy produce. In visiting various cheese factories during the summer, I noticed cheese, good and well-made cheese, melting down to almost nothing. This should be an object lesson to us, as I believe in looking at things as they are, and we shall reap more profit."

Mr. Ward then proceeded to read his report, as follows:

Gentlemen:

With your pleasure I will now make my report of season's operations in your section.

In making this report I will try to be frank, and note our failures, as well as our successes, and trust they will both be educative and be the means of bringing about greater improvement for another season.

To be forewarned should make us forearmed.

The past season has been a very trying one on producer, maker and your curing-rooms, probably the most trying in the history of dairying in this country.

Long periods of extreme heat has resulted in the milk not reaching the factory in as good condition as it should have been, and has taxed the maker's utmost skill to make passable goods. Then, after all his efforts, he had the heart-breaking experience of seeing the finished product deteriorating in quality by being subjected to the extreme heat in the rooms in which they were held.

A great many of our rooms, for days and nights at a time, have ranged in temperature from 75 to 90 degrees, and in some cases even higher, resulting in deteriorated quality and an excessive loss in weight.

Under these conditions, it is impossible to have cheese of finest quality that will command the attention they should on the consumer's table

I think I would be safe in the statement that there has been more money lost by the producer in the last season than there has been in the five previous seasons from cheese being heated and wrong in flavour, directly attributable to milk not being cooled and too high a temperature in curing-rooms.

And only for the favourable conditions of the market, which has been characterized by a strong demand and good prices, these losses would have been double and possibly treble what they were.

We have also just passed through a very dry season, which seriously lessened the quantity of milk.

But this has been partly made good to the producer by the extreme high prices for your cheese, yet it has hit the makers very heavily.

For the upliftting and improvement of the dairying industry in your section, I would recommend that it be made more profitable for everyone engaged in it.

How shall we do this?

First—Good cows, with abundance of proper food and water at all times.

Second—A clean, cool delivery of milk.

Third—A properly equipped and sanitary factory.

Fourth—A skilled maker and manager.

Fifth—But not least—a curing-room that can be maintained at an even temperature of 60 degrees at all times and under all conditions.

I cannot close this paper without some remarks in regard to sanitation and sanitary conditions at the farms and factories.

I've been pleased to note that the use of whitewash and lime is increasing and do not think there is anything better for time, labour and

HON. MACKENZIE KING COMING

It will be welcome news that Hon. MacKenzie King, of Berlin, formerly Minister of Labour, for Canada, will visit Peterborough on December 7th, and deliver an address in Mr. Hall's interests, in the Grand Opera House. Hon. Mr. King's ability as an orator is recognized on all sides, and he has many admirers here, who will be glad to have an opportunity of hearing the president of the Ontario Reform Association express himself on Provincial issues. Further particulars will be given later.

REMANDED ONCE MORE

Effort Made to Have Mascarrion and His Wife Live Together Once More—A Property Dispute

MAY BE SETTLED

Antonio Mascarrion, the Italian who has been on remand for a week, on a charge of assaulting and ill-treating his wife, was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble this morning again, and remanded for another week. His wife is willing to go back and live with him, but she wants her share of the furnishings of the house, etc., which, according to her ideas, includes everything, because she owned the house, in the first place. The assets were in her husband's name, however, and he is unwilling, so far, to sign anything over to her until his death. The remand was made in order to try and have the couple come to some sort of satisfactory conclusion.

Peter Johnston, the alleged "Jack the hugger" of the west end, who has been on remand for a week, on a charge of insanity, was remanded for another week, and as he has shown signs of improvement, may be placed in the House of Providence for a week, where he will receive better care.

A. Mascarrion was lodged in the police cells this morning after being remanded, and in conversation with the police authorities, in a way agreed to sign over the claim of his wife. He will be brought before the magistrate this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when he will be given a chance to sign over the household goods, etc., to his wife. He still maintained a pugnacious attitude, however, and believed that she deserved what she got. He said that when he came in, she told him it was none of his business where she had been in the afternoon and this made him angry.

ANONYMOUS LETTERS SENT ABROAD

Unscrupulous Attacks on Well-known Citizens—Investigation Will Follow

A quartette, consisting of two George street merchants, an East City resident, and a North End citizen, are the recipients of anonymous letters. All four letters are identically the same, as regards the wording, and the object which the sender has endeavoured to convey. The gentlemen, who received such flattering attention at the hands of the scurrilous writer, are well known in the city for their activity in religious circles, and it is on these grounds that the writer has attacked them. One of the recipients jocularly referred to the matter "as a stab in the dark," and was quite pleased to think that their firm stand, as true Christians, was beginning to make some of the dissenters sit up and take notice.

Others who are concerned in the matter have announced their intention of investigation, and are confident that they will be able to bring the guilty parties to justice. If they prove successful in rounding up the culprit, it will place the latter in a serious predicament, as the nature of the letters are such that a court of justice would be warranted in dealing severely with the writer of them.

LIBERAL CAUCUS

Opposition Members Gathered This Morning and Sir Wilfrid Was Enthusiastically Received

TO-DAY'S DEBATE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, NOV. 23.—The first Liberal caucus of the session was held this morning, with Thomas McNutt in the chair. There was a full attendance and the enthusiasm which marked last night's demonstration, in honour of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, was repeated as the leader entered the room. Party plans were talked over. To-day's debate in the Commons promises to be unusually interesting. Mr. Monk will be answered by Mr. Lemieux, and then will come Pelletier, and there is a possibility that Hon. W. L. White will make his maiden speech. There does not seem to be any hope of reaching a division to-night, and it now looks as if the vote will go over to Tuesday or Thursday next.

Mr. Frank Dobbin For Alderman

In reply to a query, Mr. G. N. Gordon announced his intention of being a candidate for aldermanic honours, to-day. It is understood that Mr. Gordon has a paving policy up his sleeve, which alone should insure the unanimous approval of the electors of the centre ward. Mr. Frank Dobbin has also been named as a possible candidate for the north ward. He will appeal to the electors on the aldermanic ticket also.

The mayoralty slate begins to look like a three-cornered fight with the following contestants lined up for the fray: Ald. Bradburn, Ald. Buller and Ald. Morgan.

Exhibition Next Week

Next week, the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association will hold an exhibition of oils and water colours, pottery, book-binding, laces, hand-wrought silver, enamelled jewellery, homespuns, etc., in the Public Library lecture room. A number of oil paintings will be shown, the work of Miss Marion E. Jack, a Canadian artist from the Maritime Provinces, who has studied under Lascar, in Paris, and is now resident in London, Eng. Miss Jack has exhibited in London, Birmingham Dublin and Paris, some of her landscapes having been hung on line at the Salon, and, having received considerable attention, as did also her studies in mural decoration. The latter consists principally of views of Lake Lucerne. Mr. H. Franks Waring, a Canadian, now residing in London, England, will also exhibit. Of him the Academy says: "We would call especial attention to the water colour work of Mr. H. Franks Waring, at the Baillie Gallery. In Mr. Waring's pictures there are all the best qualities—freedom with restraint, and strength with sensitiveness. They are full of weather and wholly beautiful."

The Exhibition will be open to the public from Tuesday, Nov. 28th to Friday, Dec 1st. The advance sale of tickets will be on sale at Payne's drug store until Monday at noon.

OBITUARY

RICHARD COUGHLIN.

In the death at 9 o'clock on Monday last, of Mr. Richard Coughlin, Norwood lost one of its most highly respected of citizens.

The deceased, who was fifty-nine years of age, was a life-long resident of Norwood. He succeeded his father in carrying on the business of the farm, and lived thereon until his death. He was, in politics, an ardent Liberal, and an esteemed member of the C. O. F. Both in his private and public life he was noted for his naturally charitable disposition, and, in passing, beyond, he leaves a memory of sterling citizenship in the minds of all those who were fortunate enough to know him.

Mr. Coughlin is survived by a sorrowing wife and two children — Charles, at home, and Miss Coughlin, of Peterborough. Two sisters also lament his passing, in the persons of Mrs. Bibby, of Minnesota, and Miss Julia Coughlin of Toronto, and two brothers, Daniel of Peterborough and Patrick of California, U.S.

At the funeral, which took place in Norwood, yesterday morning, Mr. Dennis Coughlin, of Minnesota, and Dr. Coughlin, of Belleville, were present.

ORGAN RECITAL.

An Organ and Vocal Recital of extraordinary merit will be given in St. Andrew's Church to-morrow (Friday) evening, by Mr. Treneer, Organist, and others. Mr. Treneer is acknowledged to be an Organist of exceptional merit, and a rare treat is in store for those who attend.

MAKING US EAT DUST.

One of the annoying features of Mr. Borden's abject surrender to the Nationalists, in adopting their no-naval policy, is the fact that this trifling with a serious question will, apart from the infinitely more important national and imperial considerations involved, make Canada ridiculous in the eyes of the world, and also weaken the esteem of the Mother country for us and throw doubts upon the sincerity of our professions of loyalty, and of our stability of decision. After due deliberation and based on an unanimous resolution of Parliament, we passed a law to establish and organize a Canadian navy, and upon the strength of the act now on our statute books, tenders for naval work were invited and also for cruisers to be built in Canada. Now, the great British firms that tendered and and went to the trouble of preparing estimates, are anxious over the matter, in view of the attitude of the Borden government. They need not be anxious or in doubt any longer. The government which was elected on the head of its Imperialism and loyalty and British connection enthusiasm has, to use the slang of the street, "laid down" to the Nationalist wing of the Conservative party, and have killed, or indefinitely postponed, the matter of Canadian participation in bearing the burdens of imperial defence. Our British brethren and the rest of the world will conclude that Canada is as unstable as water; that we don't know our own mind; that we lack courage and national decision of character; that we are content to stay in the pauper class—willing to accept the protection of the British navy, but unwilling to bear a little share of its tremendous burden which we leave to be borne by the overweighted taxpayers of the Mother country; that our professions of loyalty; our chatter about British connection, etc., is indeed chatter with no substantial foundation or backing; that our pretended imperialism, the sentiment of seven million Canadians, fades away under consideration of party expediency before the demands of a handful of anti-British anti-imperial, so-called Nationalists. Verily, Mr. Borden is making the Canadians eat dust.

AN OVER-RATED STATESMAN.

We have come to be rather fatigued with the persistent claims of his admirers, that Sir James Whitney is a flawless statesman, and that his administration has been perfect. But he has shown himself to be dogmatic domineering and a beautiful exponent of one-man power. His own followers are snubbed in a way that severely strains their party loyalty. In a word, Sir James has all the qualities that would make a man a successful ruler in the days before we had parliamentary institutions, and the people had nothing to do but submit. If Charles I, of England had been backed by a legislative majority such as Sir James Whitney uses to make his autocracy possible, he would have been able to snub popular deputations and disfranchise electors, levy ship money and chop off people's heads instead of having his own chopped off. Sir James Whitney, backed by a majority such as he has in the Legislature now, would have given Charles I pointers as to how to run an autocratic government.

Sir James, apart from his personality, is greatly over-rated as a statesman — as the man "who has done things." He and his admirers, as the Globe points out, boast of his Hydro-Electric project, as if had it not been for Mr. Whitney and his government, there would have been no development of power, and that Niagara Falls would still be unharnessed, and still running as a mere moving picture show. He deserves no credit for the development of Niagara power, and mighty little for the Hydro-Electric distribution scheme. Whatever merits are in that one-sided arrangement that builds up the west end of Ontario industrially at the expense of the east, and especially Peterborough, and only thinks of us at an election, and feeds us with promises, as it has fed the west of the province with performance — whatever merits are in this scheme, are due mainly to Mr. Beck, who had to carry on the scheme in its dark days, not only unaided by Sir James Whitney, but had to fight against his reactionary attitude and against the great "vested interests" so strongly represented in his cabinet. The Conservative organs in Toronto, were hostile to Mr. Beck's work, and "Mr. Beck has, time and again, declared that the success of his campaign was in a large measure, due to the steady and persistent support of the Globe and other Liberal journals at the very time the electric power rising was known to be entrenched in government circles against him." "The bungling and injustice" that have attended the establishment of the Hydro-Electric scheme may well be laid at the door of Sir James Whitney and his cabinet, in which Mr. Beck had no portfolio, and only a negative welcome. The Globe gives some credit to Mr. Hanna for his prison reform scheme, but whatever merit there may be in the appropriation of ideas worked out experimentally elsewhere; they are more than offset by his bungling with the management of the public institutions—increasing expense, and decreasing efficiency.

Speaking in reference to these things the Globe says:

"And after these two there stands scarcely one thing to the credit of Ministers who pretend to have "done things." The Temiskaming Railway policy they fought in Opposition, and in office have made it a burden to the very communities it was meant to serve. Hon. Frank Cochrane's administration of the Lands, Forests and Mines broke down years ago, and even Tory complaint is loud against its dominance by exploiters and a group of would-be millionaires. In matters of settlement not even normal progress has been made. What Hon. Dr. Reaume has done in Public Works is so insignificant as scarcely to have been mentioned. In Education the things done have been reactionary, and the resultant situation is the vexation of teachers and the despair of educational experts. As for the Justice Department, it is a notorious scandal.

And so one might go round the whole circle of the Government's opportunity and obligation, and in each segment one would find stagnation or confusion. The self-complacent incapacity of the majority of the Ministers is as a pall on those of their deputies who have ability and initiative. As a result the service has steadily depreciated. But Sir James Whitney, with his easy irresponsibility of language, boasts loudly of having "done things." The things he has done he ought not to have done. The things he ought to have done he has left undone. There are no more ideas either in him or his colleagues. His campaign is one of bluff and pretence."

Thus we see that the idol of brass—triple ass at that—has feet of clay and that the claims made for Sir James Whitney and his government, to being distinguished for achievement and being a model, is playing upon a reputation, largely self-suggested and founded upon—wind.

TIME TO SPEAK PLAINLY.

(Montreal Herald.)

It is not yet quite clear what the Borden Cabinet and the Conservative majority propose to do about this naval business.

Mr. Hazen has made it known that the tenders received for the construction of ships for a Canadian navy are not to be accepted; therefore, that these ships are not to be built.

He says they would be obsolete by the time they were built; that does not sound reasonable, but supposing it were to be so, is he going to stop there?

He could order a different class of ships, if necessary. There surely must be some model that will be in vogue in the time it takes to build.

It is not quite clear from Mr. Borden's own remarks whether he is going to be content with not letting these ships be built, or whether he means to repeal the naval service act as a whole.

It is decidedly unusual for a new government to ask the repeal of a general act, framed, discussed and passed in view of the whole country, and receiving at the time it was debated as much support as any measure of like importance ever receives. Governments are in some measures bound in fact by the acts of their predecessors. This naval service act was, in various stages, opposed by Mr. Borden, but the main principles of it were also, at one time and another, and especially in the early stages when he spoke his own mind, actively enunciated and defended by Mr. Borden. Does he really mean to repeal the act? Some believe so. The thing cannot rest long in that shape. It ought not to be kept in that shape at all. There has been enough shuffling about the business. Mr. Borden has a big enough majority at his back to enable him to say just what he means. If he knows, he ought to tell. If he doesn't know, he had no right to form the Cabinet as it is formed. The public, in any event, have the right to know what is in his mind. If he is afraid to tell he is too weak for the high office he holds.

THE WHITNEY GOVERNMENT AND THE BILINGUAL SCHOOL QUESTION

At last the people of Ontario have a definite statement as to the attitude of the Whitney Government toward bilingual schools. Attorney-General Foy, speaking presumably for his colleagues, although he prefaced his remarks with the words "my views," told the electors of North Toronto on Monday night that there cannot lawfully be any bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario, and if any are found they must cease to exist.

As his statement must be regarded not as the utterance of an individual, but of the supreme authority in Ontario on questions of law and its enforcement, it may be well to give Mr. Foy's carefully prepared statement in his own words:—

"My views are that the English language should be thoroughly taught in our schools to every pupil by teachers fully competent to teach English.

That no other language should be taught in those schools.

"That such is the law that should govern us.

"That there cannot lawfully be any bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario, and if any are found they must cease to exist, and care should be taken to make all schools conform to the law."

Mr. Foy in this declaration follows in the main the line laid down by Mr. Rowell in his Massey Hall speech when he demanded that the Government should take a stand on the question. Upon the chief issue the Attorney-General accepts the Liberal platform, which proposes "to provide through adequate training schools a sufficient supply of competent teachers, and thus insure under proper regulations that the pupils in every school in the Province shall receive a thorough English education.

While insisting, as the Liberal leader does, that English must under the law be efficiently taught in all the schools of Ontario, Mr. Foy seems to go farther and assert that no other language "should be taught in those schools," and that "such is the law." The Attorney-General is not quite explicit. Does he mean, for example, that a teacher of a primary class, consisting chiefly of little children coming from homes in which they hear no English, may not address the children in any other language than English? Does the Attorney-General hold that the law absolutely forbids the use of any other language as an aid to the teaching of English? The words "no other language should be taught" seem to lend themselves to this construction. We know that Bishop Fallon, whose protest against bilingual schools in his diocese raised the issue, takes this position strongly. In the famous letter to Dr. Pyne, in which he presented the Bishop's views, Mr. Hanna said:

"His attitude throughout was not that of an enemy, but we must not deceive ourselves. He is an extremely energetic man, and has this question very much at heart, and, whatever comes of the matter, he will either give it all his support or all his opposition in his own diocese. He rejects with scorn the idea that one should teach the children in their maternal language behind the desk at the same time as the language of the school. He seemed full of the idea that the pupils must be obliged to understand English and to speak it in their lessons and games, and that hearing nothing but English in the schools, they would understand it in two or three months."

Mr. Foy must define the words "no other language should be taught." Does he use them in the sense in which Bishop Fallon evidently meant when he told Mr. Hanna that the French pupils in the Essex schools, would understand it in two or three months"?

The statute upon which he bases his opinion of the law is explicit as to the teaching of English in all schools, although Dr. Pyne has for years winked at its evasion, but the statute does not seem at all to convey the right to forbid the use at any time by teacher or pupil of some other tongue than English. The law is in these words:

"59 Vict. (1896), Cap. 70, S. 76 (2): It shall be the duty of every teacher of a public school to use the English language in the instruction of the school, and in all communications with the pupils in regard to discipline and management of the school, except where impracticable by reason of the pupil not understanding English. . . Recitations requiring the use of a text-book may be conducted in the language of the text book."

Mr. Foy knows that he is dealing with a great and vital issue that cannot be settled by playing with words On the one hand stand Bishop Fallon and those who believe with him that the children who attend Ontario's schools should hear and speak no other language than English. On the other side are the French-Canadians, who claim, as Armand Lavergne does, that French should have an equal status with English in the schools, and that the saving clause "except where impracticable by reason of the pupil not understanding English" confers a definite permission to use French in Ontario's schools. Mr. Foy must tell the people if it is the intention of the Government to amend the law so that English shall be the sole language of instruction and of communication whether pupils understand it or not. Upon that point his statement leaves the electors of Ontario still in the fog

CANADIAN PACIFIC HAS CARRIED 175,000 SETTLERS

Estimated That the New-comers Brought $40,000 Into the Country With Them---Would Take a Train 75 Miles Long to Carry All the Immigrants---Some Interesting Statistics.

MONTREAL, QUE., NOV. 22.—That the Canadian Pacific Railway is doing all important work towards the building up of the Dominion of Canada is shown by the figures with regards to the colonization operations of the Railway for this year. According to statements made yesterday the Canadian Pacific Railway, since the first of the year, have carried from Great Britain, to this country over 150,000 new settlers. The actual figures for the ten months from January to October 31, are 146,119, putting the number of new settlers brought into Canada during November, at the conservative estimate of 5,000, the figure for the year up to date, climb up to ovr 150,000. This reports only the actual paid transportation. If the number of people carried free is taken into consideration, it is not too much to add twenty per cent. to the figures given, which would include the C. P. R. colonization figures for the year to the astounding total of over 175,000. These figures are unprecedented. Never before in the history of the Canadian Pacific Railway have they carried such a traffic. Not only has a new record been set but the best previous record, that of last year, has been beaten by nearly 25,000 people. Compared with the record for 1909, the difference is still greater. Of the 175,000 new settlers brought into Canada by the Canadian Pacific, Mr. R. Miller, Assistant Supt. of Terminals of the Railway, at Montreal, states that fully 70 per cent. went straight through to Western Canada, twenty percent of the rest settled in Ontario and Quebec, and the rest drifted across the border. Most of the newcomers were fairly well supplied with cash. In fact, it is estimated that in ready money and personal effects the new-comers would average $300 each, in which case they have brought into Canada with them over $40,000,000. The work involved in the transportation of these new settlers has increased very considerably and there was not a day when at least one special train was not dispatched from St. Lawrence ports, carrying the late arrivals to their destination. As a matter of fact nearly five hundred special trains have been dispatched from the east by the C. P. R. this year. Allowing ten cars to the train this means that it would take a train seventy-five miles long to transport all of the new settlers brought into Canada by the C.P.R. this year.

REGISTRATION WILL BE COMMENCED TO-MORROW

Friends of Mr. Hall are reminded that the dates for registration for the provincial elections are November 24, (to-morrow), 25, 27 and 28, with morning, afternoon and evening sittings, at the following hours: 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.; 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.; 7.30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The registration booths are as follows:

Ward 1—VanEvery's, 204 Rubidge street.
Ward 2—Council Chamber.
Ward 3—Police Chamber.
Ward 4—Lee's shop, George and Smith streets.
Ward 5—Old Town Hall.

The Board of Appeal will sit on Monday, December 4.

To register, the elector must be of age, a resident of the city for three months and of Canada for twelve months.

All friends of Mr. Hall should see that they are registered if they are not on the list.

What to Expect.—David had accompanied his mother to church and he noticed that she dropped a nickel into the contribution plate. Back at home the mother complained of the dullness of the sermon. Said David, who is nothing if not just by nature: "But, mamma, what could you expect for five cents?"

MANY AMERICAN LEAGUE PLAYERS CAME BACK

Every club in the American League had during the season of 1911 some player whose improved work showed him as a charter member of the "Come-back" club. Of course, Jim Callahan, of the White Sox, and old Cy Young, of the Boston Nationals, stand out most prominently as those who were away and are back now, but a host of others did mighty well along the same lines.

Two men little mentioned in the public prints really revived themselves in a manner startling. They are Matty McIntyre and Joe Birmingham. McIntyre was passed to the White Sox by Detroit because he had failed to bat. He seemed done. However, he poled .323 in 1911, against .236 in 1910.

BIRMY CAME BACK WITH BANG.

For several seasons Joe Birmingham had been counted the greatest fielder in the major leagues, ability to judge batters, cover ground and throw being considered. But he could not bat. In 1910 Joe owned an average of .229, and only his sterling work in the field held his job. In 1911 he swatted .304.

Bristol Lord, of the Athletics, was another who elevated his figures to an alarming degree. From .254 he jumped to .310. Sam Crawford, of the Tigers, generally supposed to be on the ragged edge of major leaguedom, hopped from .289 to .378. Sam is a veteran of long years, but he certainly has regained his ability to "hit 'em where they ain't."

Frank La Porte, second baseman for the Browns, gained fifty points, coming from .264 to .314. There was no sudden spurt, but he kept it up all season. Even after the pitchers had settled down he gained.

There is not a club in the American League which failed to bring forth at least one man who did so well the past season, compared with the previous year, that he is entitled to a place among the famous.

THE REASON IS NOT APPARENT

There have been bales of language spilled as to why this should be, but the fact remains that it is. The American League as a whole raised its batting average from .242 to .274. Early in the season the pitching was weak. The hitting, however, continued all year.

The way men like McIntyre, Birmingham, La Porte, Schaefer, Crawford and others continued hitting away above their marks of previous years is pretty plain demonstration that a livelier baseball was employed in spite of the men who manufacture the implements of baseball war.

Here's a little comparison that furnishes some basis for judging how much easier it is to hit safely now than it was a year ago:

Player and Club.	1911	1910
Crawford, Detroit	.378	.289
Lapp, Philadelphia ...	.353	.234
Cree, New York	.345	.280
Schaefer, Washington .	.334	.275
McIntyre, Chicago	.323	.236
La Porte, St. Louis ...	.314	.264
Hooper, Boston	.311	.267
Lord, Philadelphia	.310	.254
Birmingham, Cleveland	.304	.229
Block, Chicago	.304	.210

Who Will Win On Saturday

TORONTO, NOV. 22—Will the speed of Varsity triumph over the heavy Argonaut team on Saturday, is the question asked by nearly every rugby fan in Toronto. Of course there are some who can see nothing to it but Varsity, and are ready to put up their money at any time. Others are waiting to see what kind of a day it is, and what the condition of the ground will be. Well, so far as the latter is concerned, the field will either be as hard as a rock or else muddy and sticky. Yesterday the earth was as solid as a stone wall, with coats of ice here and there. This ice was being cleaned off, however, and there will be none if the weather keeps clear. Should a thaw set in, the ground is bound to be soft, for when the earth was put on this summer there was no drainage made as the authorities thought it best to let the earth settle for a year before draining it.

There is no doubt that Lawson being in the game for the scullers will strengthen their chances of winning greatly. He is a more dangerous man with the ball than Hazlett of Queen's yet in the Varsity game, the blue and white wings experienced great difficulty in bringing down the Presbyterian and as he usually left a trail of injured being him, one may expect Lawson to be a big factor in the finals.

Argonaut backs will outkick the Varsity halves, but the chances are that the Blue and White will make up for this deficiency in running the ball back. The scullers are being given the call on a heavy going, but the members of the team say that their heat game of the season was in Ottawa on a perfectly dry field, and they say that this is the kind of going that they want.

Both teams are working harder than ever to get into best possible shape, with Varsity confining their work to short snappy signal practices, with the backs practicing after the signal. Argonauts being drilled hard by Coach Foulds, they working out last night on the St. Andrew's campus, and then they were told to run around the Rosedale field seven times. Coach Foulds stood in the centre of the field and about the fifth round announced that anyone going in would not play Saturday. This was a cruel blow to hand out to them, but they all stuck, although the others had weighed in when Banty Russell came trooping in.

RUGBY

They have got the rugby craze in western Canada now and it is said several of the stars of the Interprovincial and Intercollegiate unions will follow the advice of a chap named Greeley and hit the trail for the west before another season comes around. Among those receiving mention on the list of probabilities are Jack Williams and Robertson of Ottawa, Billy Mallett of the Argos and Hugh Gall Seppi Dumoulin is interested in the league out west and it would not be surprising to see the ranks of the Tigers and Alerts invaded in order to get championship material for the new organization. The league will become affiliated with the Canadian union and expects to figure in the Canadian championships after this year.—Hamilton Herald.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy Ever Used

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly—A Family Supply for 50c—Money Refunded if it Fails.

If someone in your family has an obstinate, deep-seated cough—even whooping cough—which has yielded slowly to treatment, buy a 50-cent bottle of Pinex and watch that cough vanish. If it fails, money back promptly, and without argument.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy that money can buy, at a saving of $2. Gives instant relief and will usually wipe out a bad cough in 24 hours or less. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

Pinex Cough Syrup has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both good features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, throat tickle, incipient lung troubles, and a prompt, successful remedy for whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other elements which are so healing to the membranes. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your Druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

POST CARD COLUMN

INLAND REVENUE OFFICER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Is it true that as soon as the Provincial election is over that Mr. Harry Phelan is to be appointed Inland Revenue Officer, to succeed Mr. William Rudkins? I am told that it is correct, but that no announcement is to be made for the present. Why? Will it be acceptable to the "Compact" after the election—don't care.

Yours truly,
One Who Has Heard.

BRADBURN FOR SENATOR.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Do you not think that our City Council have enough to do to attend to the city's business without mixing up, as a body, with politics. I observe by the evening papers that at the next meeting of the Council, a motion is to be brought forward, favouring Mr. Kendry as a senator from this district. Why should the City Council which is supposed to represent the whole body of citizens of all classes, creeds and political opinions, rush in to select and recommend a candidate for a political appointment, even before there is a vacancy in this district; even if there was a vacancy, what right have the city fathers to speak for the whole body of citizens, and especially for the Conservatives of Peterborough, who, according to usage ought to have something to say in the making of a selection? Is Mr. Kendry the man for the job? Perhaps we poor Conservatives might have a little to say in selecting a man. Consider the claims of Mr. Bradburn. His father, the late Thomas Bradburn, for fifty years was one of the largest campaign givers in the Conservative party. In fact, he was the man that kept the Conservative party going. Night and day he did the toil. His son, T. Evans Bradburn, for the local Legislature, carried West Peterborough on two occasions, and retired undefeated, while Mr. Kendry carried West Peterborough for the Commons twice, and on the third occasion was snowed under by Mr. R. R. Hall. Mr. Kendry has not contributed any more to the good of the party than has Mr. Bradburn; he would not be any more good in the Senate than Mr. Bradburn; then, why should the Council take sides between these gentlemen, or any other Conservative who might have claims, and meddle in a political matter that the head of our party, Mr. Borden, can settle himself without the advice of a body that has nothing to do with Senatorships of a political character? If the Conservative party wish a senator appointed from here, and I should be glad to see one selected, let the party meet, select a Conservative committee to interview Mr. Borden and have whatever appointment is to be made, done decently and in the regular way. No band wagon display about it.

Yours truly,
DECENT CONSERVATIVE.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I am not a politician, but I like to see fair play. I read a letter in the Times, a rather abusive letter, from a so-called "Anxious Inquirer," who seemed more anxious to abuse Mr. Hall, the Liberal candidate, than to get information. The narrow gauge writer suggests that Mr. Hall should restore some of the money lost in taking stock in some industries he has promoted, and names several companies. As a matter of fact, to my knowledge, for I have opportunities of knowing, Mr. Hall never had anything to do with several of these companies, and as to the others, their failure is nothing new in business affairs. They show one thing, anyway, a laudable desire on Mr. Hall's part, to promote industrial progress.

If undertaking enterprises, that do not succeed, is a crime, then Mr. Hall sins in good company, and somebody else should restore a lot of money. I am something of an old-timer, at business, and I can recall many instances in Peterborough where enterprises have failed, and investors lost money. I will mention a few, and since "Anxious Inquirer" has tried to make political capital out of the companies he mentions, I will tell him that the majority, if not all of the following vanished enterprises were originated by, or perished under, Conservative management, which might not have been the cause, but should be remembered, when there is buncombe talk about restitution. In this connection I ask, where are the following now?—The Bridge Works; the Peterborough Stove Company; the Peterborough Carbon Company; the White & Davis Company, (agricultural implements); Romaine Brick Works; McAllister Milling Company; Central Milling Company (in which the directors narrowly escaped meeting their guarantee); Peterborough Cold Storage Company; Sugar Beet Company; the Paton Moir Woolen Company (sold out at a cent on the dollar to the Auburn Woollen Mills Company; the Ultimator Company, and the Edison Company, brought to life by the Canadian General Electric Company. "Anxious Inquirer" should be fair and not try to injure a man who has been a public-spirited citizen, and shown enterprise—if not always with success—simply because he is a political opponent. I am not a politician, but a citizen who is willing to give credit where credit it due, and a "boost" instead of a knock.

Yours truly,
BUSINESS.

ORGANIZATION OF A.Y.P.A. FOR ST. JOHN'S LAST NIGHT

The special committee appointed at the gathering of the men of St. John's at Mr. Stratton's, on Monday night, to consider the organization of a Young People's Association, met at the office of the Bank of Ottawa last night. Mr. Wainwright, chairman, presided, and the society was organized by the appointment of the following officers:

President—Mr. Harold Cluxton.
Vice-President—Mr. J. E. Jamieson.
Secretary—Mr. F. C. Roberts.
Executive Committee—Messrs. F. Linton, R. J. Devey, J. A. Aylmer and I. E. Jamieson.

The organization committee was, by vote, made permanent. It consists of Messrs. Aylmer, Stratton, Yokome, Jamieson, Cluxton, Devey, Coleman, Ackerman, Wainwright, Burnett, Linton and Conway.

WEDDING BELLS

IRWIN—BRICK.

The home of Mr. Frank Degen, 691 Stewart street, was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday afternoon, when Miss Francis Adeline Brick, daughter of Mr. Patrick Brick, Verulam, was united in marriage to Mr. William John Irwin, son of Mr. John Irwin, of the Township of Emily. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Davidson, in the presence of the immediate friends of the family. The bride was given away by Mr. Frank Degen. The presents were many and beautiful and evidenced the high esteem in which the contracting parties were held by their many friends. The happy couple left on the 4.28 train for Toronto and points West. On their return they will reside in the Township of Emily.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY'S MEETING

Splendid Address Given by Rev. Dr. Marsh on Tuesday

The second meeting of the local branch of the Royal Astronomical Society was held in the Physics Lecture Hall of the Collegiate Institute Tuesday night. Mr. H. O. Fiske, of the Society, presided. Mr. R. Pearson, Antrim street, and Mr. James Frowde, Weller street, were received into full membership and the name of Mr. F. O. Graver was proposed as a member by Mr. Segar and seconded by Mr. Thos. Elliott.

The reports of observations showed considerable diligence among the members, and the President brought to the notice of the Society that the Planet Mars will be the nearest the earth on the 29th inst. This will not occur again for many years. The planet is now close enough to outline the markings and faint snow caps.

After the general business of the meeting was completed, Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, gave the lecture of the evening on, "How the Lunar Surface Becomes Rough." During the course of his address, he remarked that the roughness of the Lunar surface was probably due to the shrinking of the surface and the buckling up of outer crust, and the oozing forth of the molten matter forming the mountains. It might also be caused by pressure from the interior through the fissures, causing volcanoes now extinct. He drew the attention of the Society to the numerous physical features of the hollow mountains with smaller craters, the radiating rays, and great seabeds, also other interesting observations.

The lecture was distinctly interesting, the speaker holding the attention of the audience in a remarkable manner.

THE POPE AND THE WAR

The "l'Osservatore Romano," official organ of the Vatican, thinks it necessary to call attention once more to the persistent effort made to create the impression that the Holy See is associated with the Italian Government in its military foray upon Tripoli. It points out that the Lloyd Ottoman, published in Constantinople, and other European journals persist in trying to popularise the belief that the Holy See is in some way mixed up with the Italo-Turkish war. They even insinuate that it is financially interested in that war. This they do despite the fact that the Holy See's official declaration of absolute neutrality recently appeared in the "l'Osservatore Romano."

There is, of course, a well-defined purpose back of this. It would be of great advantage to the Italian Government to have the moral support of the Holy See. That support would throw a veil over the iniquity of robbing a country for the reason it is too weak to defend itself. The Vicar of Christ, of course, will not help, even indirectly, to hide the moral hideousness of such a crime.

It would be well, then, to heed this warning "L'Osservatore Romano" addresses to the Catholic press of the world: "We warn not only our own readers, but the Catholic press in Italy and in other lands against placing any credence in these false and tentative rumours which absolutely have no basis of fact."—New York Freeman's Journal.

OUR GREAT MID-SEASON SALE CONTINUES

Spirited Buying Is Still Being Recorded in Every Department

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE IN WHICH TO SHARE

We've shattered our former Mid-Season Sale record for the past few days, but it was expected, for it's very rare indeed that such vigorous price cuts are made on new, desirable seasonable goods at this time of the year. In the very first announcements of this Sale we made clear the reason why we were compelled to reduce prices and thereby bring about a material reduction of our overstocks—the response was immediate and enthusiastic.

With the notice of the early close of this event we have not the slightest doubt but that buying will be resumed with renewed energy by those who have already shared and feel that they MUST secure as many of these extraordinary values as they can while the opportunity is at hand. — - -

Mrs. Mowry Was Made Life Member Of Circle

Annual Thankoffering Service of Park Street Missionary Organization Held on Tuesday.

INTERESTING PROGRAMME

The annual Thank-offering service of the Park Street Baptist Woman's Mission Circle was held Tuesday evening, in the lecture hall of the church. There was a fair attendance and the following programme was rendered. After the devotional exercises the President, Miss Margaret Mann, spoke a few words on 'Thanksgiving.'

Solo—Mrs. Robert Wright.

Report from Convention — Mrs. Mowry and Mrs. Barrie.

Solo—Miss Ethel Hill.

Paper on "China"—Mrs. Hill.

Solo—Miss Ethel Hill.

At the close of the programme Mrs. Mercello Mowry was made a life member of the Foreign Missionary Society.

The following address was read by Mrs. Johnston, and the presentation was made by Mrs. Gillespie::

Peterborough, Nov. 21, 1911

Dear Mrs. Mowry,—At this time of Thanksgiving, we, your co-workers in the Park Street Baptist Women's Mission Circle, feel the time has come to show our appreciation of your long and faithful services in aiding to spread the Gospel, the good news of salvation, in the home land, as well as in the foreign fields. At the inception of this Circle you were our first President, a position you held for a number of years. In times of discouragement and difficulties, you were ever helpful and prayerful, guided us onward and upward.

As a proof of our esteem for you as a friend and fellow labourer, also to show the value placed on your untiring labours in the cause dear to us all, we ask you to accept this life-membership certificate in the Foreign Missionary Society. In doing this we are pleased to know this is not a parting gift, as is often the case.; but your fellow-workers will look forward to years of service together in spreading the Gospel to our heathen sisters in darkened lands.

Signed on behalf of the Park St. Baptist Women's Mission Circle,

Margaret Mann, President.
Cecilia Johnston, Secretary.

Mrs. Mowry, in a few well-chosen wrds, gracefully thanked the members of the Circle and friends for their kindness in thus honouring her.

Refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

"There's a Reason"

At Routley's

The China did Rattle Last Week but the Variety is still intact.

Eager Crowds gathered at the announcement, and the rush started last Monday and made it one of the most successful sales of the sort we have ever had.

It touches the art and industrial life of England, France, Austria and Germany, and ramifies in too many ways and directions to be completely exploited in a day or a week. The original offerings are still in splendid assortment. A brief recapitulation should give added impulse to thousands who could not come last week.

Here are some of the most important items in the collection. The shapes and decorations of the china are marvels for the money.

English Porcelain Dinner Sets, 97pieces, Crown Derby, floral design, gold traced, regular price $20. Special $13.95

French China, Theo Haliland's and 3 other makes. Each set consisting of 97 decorated pieces. Regular $60. Special $37.48

Austrian China Decorated Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, pretty floral design, all pieces traced with gold; 4 distinct natural colourings and decorations to choose from. Regular $18. Special $10.95

15 Chamber Sets, 10 pieces, heavy gold traced, with pink rose decoration, full size and prettily shaped. Clearing $3.29

A FEW SMALL WARES we would like to clear out.

Cortiecill Embroidery Silk, reg. 5c skein. Spec, 2 for 5c

Post Card Views of Peterboro reg. 2 for 5c. Spec. 6 for 5c

Matrimonial Ad Led Girl To Wash Tub

Wabash, Ind., Nov. 22.—Mrs. William Bailey, formerly Miss Mabel Blanche Baker, has experienced the "before and after taking" of matrimonial advertising. A little more than three weeks ago the following advertisement appeared in a local paper:

"Wanted—A young lady between the ages of 20 and 30 to carry on correspondence; object matrimony; must know how to cook and keep house; attractive appearance necessary. William Bailey, No. 422 Canal street Wabash, Ind."

Miss Baker read the advertisement. She went to Mr. Bailey's house, but he was not at home. She crawled through a window, and when her future husband returned in the evening he found a warm supper awaiting him. The ham was cooked to his liking, the eggs were turned over and the coffee suited him. After supper Miss Baker washed the dishes. Mr. Bailey wiped them.

The following morning they were married. The couple at once settled down to married life. Yesterday this advertisement appeared in the same newspaper:

"Wanted—Family washings to do; satisfaction guaranteed; will call for and deliver clothes. William Bailey, 422 Canal street, Wabash."

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey called at the newspaper office to have the advertisement inserted. They had just returned from a hardware store, where they purchased tubs and washboards which will keep the wolf from the door during the winter.

Ten days after Mr. Bailey was married he lost his position. Then the nest egg vanished, and, unable to obtain employment, the wife suggested she "take in washing." The husband consented, and is to go after and deliver the baskets of clothes.

"I really won't mind it a bit," said the bride as she walked out of the newspaper office.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

MONTH OF LIFE OFFERED TO PRISONER BEATTIE

If He Confesses to Murdering His Wife He Can Live Until Christmas Eve.

RICHMOND, VA., NOV. 19.—Henry Clay Beattie, jun., in the death cell of the penitentiary here, living less than ten feet away from the electric chair in which he is to die next Friday, debated with himself to-day a problem about as strange, as tremendous, as ever a man faced. It was this: "Would thirty additional days of life be worth while accepting in exchange for a confession of guilty? Would one more month of breath be a sufficient recompense for a final and eternal blackening of his name by himself?"

Governor Mann, it has developed, moved by all sorts of requests to grant the rich young wife slayer a short reprieve, made this grim proposal:

"If Beattie will make a full and frank confession he can live until Dec. 24, Christmas Eve. If he does not he shall be electrocuted at the time fixed. Let him decide for himself."

WANTS TIME TO THINK

It is understood his lawyers informed him of the proposal yesterday and that he said in reply: "Give me time to think. Give me time. I would like to live 30 days longer. God knows what might happen in 30 days. I cannot decide now. It is too great a question."

And so, contrary to his usual custom of spending the day reading light novels, he spent this Sunday pacing up and down his cell, or sitting on his cot with his head buried in his arms, wrestling with his big problem.

Naturally, the boy wants life. He wants every minute of it he can have. He has many times exclaimed passionately: "Oh, God, if they would only give me a few more weeks."

HIS NERVE IS BREAKING

The amazing nerve that kept him up through his trial has undoubtedly begun to break. Within the past few days he has at intervals gone into fits of violent weeping, followed by outbursts of rage in which he would rant and swear. Those who have been closest to him—apart from his relatives and lawyers—say they believe he would do anything for an added month of life. They rather expect that he will make the confession.

He said: "God knows what might happen in 30 days." But if he makes the confession and gets the 30 days, nothing can possibly save him, because the confession will automatically remove any possible doubt that Gov. Mann might have of his guilt—and the governor is convinced of it already. Beattie may figure that it would be foolish for that reason to admit his guilt. On the other hand he may consider that he might as well tell the truth; make the jurors who convicted him feel more comfortable and take what sweetness there may be in a month of life.

FATHER OPPOSES PLAN

His aged father saw him to-day. When asked afterward what he expected Henry would do, the elder Beattie merely said: "If my boy makes any statement to the public before the end it will be greatly against my wishes and advice."

It has been said that the old man told his intimates he hoped Henry would not be reprieved as long as he had to die anyhow within a short time. Mr. Beattie, sen., is anxious to take his daughter Hazel and his other son, Douglas, and forever leave the state where Henry disgraced the respected name he bore. There is universal sympathy for the gray-haired old father but none whatever for the boy. The Beatties are going to Washington as soon as they can obtain the body.

NEW MAP OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC SHOWS IMPORTANT MILLING INFORMATION

The preliminary edition of the milling map of Ontario and Quebec is now being issued from the Railway Lands Branch of the Department of the Interior. This new publication shows the different points throughout Ontario and Quebec where flour mills and elevators are in operation and in table form the total capacity of the different elevators in each province. Detailed information is also given as to the power by which each mill is operated, whether water, steam or electricity.

Railways Appear Prominently.

An interesting feature of the map is the fact that each different railway system is shown in a separate colour, thereby making it a simple matter to determine at a glance upon which line of railway a certain place is located.

Irrespective of the special information which has been incorporated in this publication, the map should be of general use to those interested in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Copies Free of Charge.

Copies of this map may be obtained free of charge upon application to the Railway Lands Branch of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THERE is a certain portion of my ancient history which I don't think I shall forget to my dying day. It is the description of the way in which the barbarians punished an offending general. He was chained down on the desert, face upwards under the burning African sun, then his eyelids were cut off and he was left powerless to turn away his eyes from the terrible rays, to suffer until he died or went mad.

Horrible, isn't it?

And yet somehow I was reminded of it when several of my letter mothers, father and friends used the same phrase. "Watch one who is to be cruel, watch closely that eye. Notice the eyes of those poor babies blinking that I hope you often see. The dull, shade the eyes of a mustered courage to say, "Your baby's eyes!" He once met a man baby tilted back child was winkin in his eyes." promptly and em not for his eyes. cause he was left

Surely this is a wood for him." phatically replied, 'The sunshine is Of course, it is good for him but I know a man who went blind, asleep outdoors with the sun shining fathers cannot be too careful. Yes, of course, seven-eighths of them are already taking every precaution.

But it isn't for those that this is written.

* * * * *

I was calling on a neighbour of mine the other day, when her little boy, who is only four years and a half old, came home from an errand on which she had sent him.

The errand was some which had taken a ten minutes' walk, including two crossings.

"How do you ever dare let Him cross those streets?" I questioned.

"I wouldn't" said the mother, "if it were not for the training we have given him. Phillip never steps into the street until he has carefully looked both ways and seen that nothing is coming.

"Ever since he was old enough to know anything at all, I have trained him that way until it is just as much of a habit as it is for him to eat with a spoon instead of with his fingers. Even when he is playing and his ball rolls into the street, he never runs after it until he has looked both ways to see if the road is clear. Of course, it has taken a good bit of talking, insisting and some punishments, but I think it has all been worth while, for I feel so safe about him. Besides I think the habit is one which will be good for him to have all his life."

Since that day I have seen Phillip alone two or three times and seen him cross the street in just the manner his mother described, so I am sure she has reason for her confidence.

Now, don't you think her method of educating a habit of carefulness is a better way to guard a child's safety, than simply to grasp his hand when you come to a crossing and tow him willy-nilly across?

Of course, towing him across is a very simple and safe way when you are with him, but you can't always be with him, especially as he grows older, whereas the habit of looking both ways before he tries to cross a street, if deeply enough inculcated, will be his constant companion.

Philip's mother said further that even when she and his father were out walking with him they did not take hold of his hand at a crossing, but simply reminded him to look sharp, and thus taught him to assume responsibility.

When one sees adults alight from a car and start to the sidewalk or launch themselves into a busy thoroughfare looking neither to the right nor left, one can fully endorse the idea that this habit of keeping his eyes open will be a unique and much to be desired safeguard to Phillip.

And incidentally to any other child.

A VERY FUNNY COMEDIENNE IN A SPLENDID COMEDY

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," With Miss May Robson, at Grand Last Night a Rare Treat---"Aunt Mary" Amused a Large Audience---Miss Robson's New Vehicle To-night.

"God meant all of us to be happy, but some of us don't seem to know how to set about it." These are the closing words of Miss May Robson in 'The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary,' the most successful comedy presented at the Grand Opera House last night, and, after seeing the production, one must inevitably come to the conclusion that Miss Robson has discovered an effective way of making people happy for the time being, at least. Certainly, last night's big audience were in a happy vein all through the presentation, the famous comedienne capturing all hearts, from her first appearance on the stage. 'Aunt Mary' as presented by Miss Robson, is an eccentric part of rich humour—a really funny, natural role, which is portrayed in an irresistible manner, that seems to hold the audience under a spell. There were times last night when the gathering laughed almost until the tears came; there were moments when the intensity of Miss Robson's acting, in a period of pathos, held the audience silently absorbed. Never has there been a more naturally funny feminine role seen here than that of Aunt Mary and Miss Robson's designation—"the funniest woman on the stage," is amply justified by her clever work.

The play tells the story of a rich maiden lady who once had a love story of her own, but whose heart is bound to her nephew at college, who is a little wild, but not more than the ordinary young man. He is unfortunate enough, however, to become involved in a number of scrapes, one of which is a breach of promise suit in which the nephew is blameless. The exposure causes the aunt to disinherit him, and he hurries off to New York, where he falls in love with a splendid girl, and where finally the aunt follows him. She is treated to a dinner by the nephew's college chums, and whirled about town in an automobile, and introduced to the roof gardens and other popular places The sport completely wins her from her country life, and reconciles her to the marriage of her nephew with his sweetheart.

The comedy is exuberant with rich humour and strengthened by gems of homely philosophy which find a responsive vein in the audience. The intense mother love of Aunt Mary, which she tries to mask, sometimes under a brusque demeanor, is admirably portrayed by Miss Robson. As the prim New England spinster, who hasn't been to New York for twenty-five years, she is a delight and later on in the action, when she succumbs to the gayety of the metropolis her good humour is so infectious that one feels a longing to join her merry party and help give her a good time.

Miss Robson has the support of a very capable company, Jack Storey, as Jack Watkins, Jr., is natural and likable in the part of the nephew. Paul Decker's "Mitchell" is breezy and not over done, and the other male roles are well looked after. Lotta Blake contributes a clever character study in her portrayal of Lucinda," and Faye Cusick, as Jack's sweetheart, was unaffected and appealing in her work.

To-night, Miss Robson will be seen in her new vehicle "A Night Out," written by herself in collaboration with C. T. Dazey. "A Night Out" is said to be even funnier than "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," but as an Eastern critic remarks "How can it be?"

Peterborough people should not miss this opportunity of seeing the famous comedienne.

ANNUAL MEETING

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 22, the members of the West End A. Club held their yearly meeting in their rooms on George street. Upwards of 30 members were present, and judging from the interest they took in the club's affairs, its future looks very bright. Committees were appointed to look after the social end and it was also decided to put a hockey team in the city league if one is organized.

The officers elected are as follows:
President—J. Oldham.
Vice-Pres.—J. Davidson.
Secretary—H. H. Dinsdale.
Treasurer—H. Kirn.

DISTRICT DAIRY MEETING

cost expended, to help obtain sanitary conditions.

Would recommend that all stables have tight floors, be kept clean and whitewashed twice a year.

I have had some samples of factory water supply tested this season, that clearly demonstrates that it needs more attention.

Would recommend that mouth of wells be well elevated, a tight cover, and surrounding surface kept perfectly clean, the use of plenty of whitewash and lime in and about factory, and a determined effort made to exclude flies.

Trusting that these few thoughts may be promptly acted on, and at the opening of next season's operations we may find the producers all equipped for cooling the milk, the factories in first-class shape and properly manned, a cool-curing-room, then co-operation all along the line from start to finish and we shall see more improvement in dairying than we ever have seen in one year, in the history of the industry in your section.

I thank officers, patrons, owners and makers for the kind assistance and courtesy that has been extended to me in carrying out my work, which I trust will be received by all in the same spirit in which it has been done, namely, for the uplifting and improvement of our great national industry, dairying.

At the conclusion of the report, a short discussion took place, in which Mr. Ward paid a tribute to Peterborough's cheese selling. He said: "The mode of selling cheese in Peterborough is second to none in the Province. One of the greatest curses of the industry is the shipping of cheese too green. It should not be sent out of the factory until about ten days old. If factories were sufficiently equipped to send out cheese as old as that they would go ahead by leaps and bounds. It is when the temperature rises from 75 degrees to 90 degrees, and continues so for some days, that the cheese suffers."

A delegate:: "I have buyers who have asked for cheese off the press."

Mr. Ward: "The business belongs to the producer, and it is in his interests not to allow the cheese to leave his factory, until it is some days old. He has his reputation as a cheese manufacturer to maintain.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, said:

"I am sure I am thankful for the nomination, and as there is no opposition, I am more thankful.

With reference to Mr. Ward's report, I think Mr. Ward gave you good advice. Peterborough stands very high in the cheese product of the Province of Ontario. If only a cool curing room can be obtained there is not a buyer who will not get your cheese. Last fall I visited some cheese factories with a gentleman from the Old Country. He told me that last summer English Cheddars were 18c a pound, and we were only paying 14c. Thus the best Canadian cheese, to some extent, took the place of the English cheese on the English market. We need more enthusiasm in the dairying industry of this section; more care in the Canadian farmer, in producing suitable feed, etc.

Mr. Henry Glendinning.

The address of Mr. Glendinning was a very fine one, and contained some helpful information.

"I think," said he, "the production of milk is one of the most important things in connection with the dairying business to-day. Can we, as farmers, increase our milk supply? Can we supply better milk to the factories? The quantity and quality of milk is a great thing towards the industry of this country.

In 1910 the catch of clover was not as good as usual. The spring of 1911 was the worst spring for killing clover I ever saw. Alfalfa did fairly well, yielding about half a crop. The dry season made very poor pastures. We ought to take note of these things. We cannot control the elements, but we can control our food supply.

It has been the case for years that the Indian corn crop has been a success, and that leads us to the point —should we not grow more corn? Now, some farmers who grow corn, cut it down in the fall and leave it in the field. I am not in favour of this. My idea of feeding corn is out of the silo. If we do that we are never "caught," because we have a stock of very nutritious food.

As a rule, the pastures of Ontario are not good. I do not think it is as much the fault of the climate, as it is the fault of our system. For instance, some farmers grow a lot of timothy. There is not the material in timothy to produce milk. If we take a cow out of a timothy field, and place it in an old pasture, the grass of which is not so long, we should get a bigger flow of milk, simply because there is proper nutriment. We only get from four to six weeks real good pasture, after that the pastures get short. It is then we require the supplementary food; it is then the silo comes in.

One great mistake farmers are making, is that the grain is planted altogether too thick. Corn gets its nutriment from the atmosphere, and it therefore, needs a great amount of sun. The sugar and starch in the corn, both come from the atmosphere, while only water and mineral matter come from the ground. Do not, therefore, set your corn too close —four to two inches is close enough.

We want to bear these things in mind. If corn is cut and left, chemical transformations occasion a 37 per cent. loss, and for the prevention of this the silo is the best known thing, as yet. Notice in a tree, the leaves take its nutriment—carbon dioxide—from the atmosphere, which is first transformed to starch, and the starch into wood fibre. It is just the same with the grain transformation; sugar becomes starch, and the starch wood fibre. Wood fibre is not digestible, and having less nutriment than previously, how can the corn be expected to produce good milk. For this purpose there is the silo, where the corn can lie isolated from the air, and this preserves its nutriment.

Another thing I should like to say to the farmer is: "Have cows that have power to convert food into milk. If you are dairymen you want good cows. There are three kinds of cows —the first converts its food into milk, the second into beef, and the third, apparently, does not thrive at all. At the present time there is far more money in milk than there is in beef.

Mr. Frank Singleton, instructor at the School of Agriculture, at Kingston, and Mr. E. S. Hopkins, the District representative of the Department of Agriculture, also gave very instructive addresses.

THEY INJURE CHILDREN

Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physics May Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given. Ordinary pills, cathartics, and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They sometimes cause griping, nausea, and distressing after-effects, and many actually injure the health, thus establishing a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as a safe and dependable remedy for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies not only relieve constipation, but help to remove the cause of this ailment. They also frequently overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

There is really, in our opinion, no similar medicine so good as Rexall Orderlies for the purpose to which it is directed, especially for children, aged and delicate persons. They are prepared in tablet form and in two sizes of packages; 12 tablets, 10c., 36 tablets, 25c., and 80 tablets, 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

RAILWAY NEWS

The construction commenced this morning of a new siding on the G.T.R. at Bethune street, running south. The siding has become necessary owing to the increased freight traffic which requires more accommodation for its cars. This increase is evidenced by the fact that two shunters are at work in that district, whereas some little time ago, only one existed.

The call boys at Lindsay failed to put in an appearance yesterday morning and the ward master discovering this, had to call the men. Some of the freight trains were late in consequence.

YOUTHFUL DELINQUENT

A young lad of tender years was caught stealing goods in front of the store of a George Street merchant this morning. After giving the youthful delinquent a severe lecture and admonishing him to divert from his evil ways, he allowed him to depart in peace. By way of explanation for his conduct, the boy pleaded poverty as an excuse for his conduct. He said that it was the first time that he had committed the offence, and it would be his last.

400 Feet More.—In conversation with the City Engineer this afternoon the Examiner was informed that there is now about 400 feet of the south end sewer to be completed. Under present weather conditions, the men are laying from 25 to 30 feet per day, and the Engineer stated that if the weather remains at all favourable, they will be able to continue at this rate until the whole work is completed.

A Correction.—The Examiner wishes to correct a statement made in a recent issue regarding the arrest of an aged lady on a charge of insanity. The article stated that owing to peculiar actions of the lady in J. C. Turnbull & Co's store, one of the saleslades 'phoned the police. The Examiner was wrongly informed, as the lady was arrested elsewhere in the city, and the arrest was not the result of information given by the before mentioned company.

THE CHARM OF GRACEFUL MANNERS

There are many women who, secure in the possession of personal beauty, lose sight of the potency of a cultivated manner. There are those, too, who think that real courtesy departed with the powdered wigs, brocades and patches of a bygone age. To a great extent this is true, for the hurry and bustle of the present day show themselves in every detail in life.

The sweeping courtesy and stately bow of the old world fame have given way to a nod of recognition which is not distinguished by its grace. The same meagre measure is doled out in most of the necessary courtesies of life. Yet a pleasing manner goes far to make up a pleasing personality. A winning smile, a gracious bow—such have a greater power than the merely pretty face, which grows monotonous when unaccompanied by charm of manner.

It is by cultivation that personality is established and character is formed, and one's tastes are accentuated and trained to become part and parcel of one's individuality. And the question of manners is one not to be lightly ignored.

It may be fashionable just now to indulge in a sort of pert smartness, but it is not graceful, and, perceiving its rapid growth, one almost longs for the days of exaggerated politeness. Perhaps they will come back with the Victorian puffings and flouncings that have been revived this winter in the fashion world.

There is also a certain tendency to self assertiveness—useful, maybe, in these days of equality between the sexes and yet of no more service because of its being made so apparent. Since it must exist it would be much more desirable if its presence were veiled. It surely is a quality very ungracious in woman.

Every woman should realize that the well mannered person is armed at every point for her own protection, whatever her intercourse with the bustling world. If she has dignity, this is a weapon that does far better service than the self assertiveness of her less wise sister. A becoming dignity is indeed to be cultivated, and the exercise of it can never detract from a woman's natural charm. It is only by it that she can command man's respect and consideration, the loss of which is so much deplored at the present time.

KING GEORGE'S TELEPHONE

Although His Majesty's telephone number, "832 Westminster," can be duly rung up by any of his subjects, it does not follow that they will be able to speak to King George direct. As a matter of fact, the arrangements in the palace make it impossible for anyone to casually call up His Majesty for a friendly chat. As the writer of an interesting article on the telephone at Buckingham Palace remarks, all the high functionaries, from Lord Knollys upward, to say nothing of minor officials and servants, are in touch with His Majesty, who can speak to them in their own apartments or private residences.

Every lady and gentleman of the royal household, every functionary, can be reached in a twinkling. Then there are, of course, private lines to Barlborough House, St. James Palace and York House. Even the schoolroom of Buckingham Palace is "on the wire."

There are three fifty-line switchboards in Buckingham Palace. Two are used for the day service and one for night purposes, and during the 24 hours the staff works in sections. The transfer of the lines from the day to the night service is accomplished by means of a change-over switch, either in the palace postoffice or in the palace itself.

The King possesses an extension from the switchboard to his private apartments, and in addition, His Majesty has a private exchange line to his own apartments. This is used for special communications with state affairs.

Queen Mary has a private line and also an exchange line. The latter facility Princess Mary also enjoys. She can converse with her parents or with the occupants of the school room. Miss Knollys has a telephone in her sitting room from which she can converse with Queen Mary or Queen Alexandria.—Tit-Bits.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

I'm so in love with summer,
The long sunshiny days,
The tall red roses bending
The winding country ways,
The liveoak branches spreading
To make a shady spot,
The bouldered torrents flashing—
But ain't this summer hot!

The cicada's far calling
The trumpet blossoms red,
The cloudless sapphire heavens
The satyrs wood nymph led
Are not more glad for summer
Than I am, they are not—
I always long for summer—
But ain't this summer hot!

My babies run to meet me
Adown the sunny street;
They run because the pavement
Is hot to baby feet.
When I turn the hose on them
They sizzle they're so hot,
But I'm no summer hater,
Indeed, indeed, I'm not!

When ice forms on the river
And blankets feel so good
You hate to leave them mornings
And fireless is wood,
And there are fires to kindle
And fuel to be got,
Then's when I long for summer
And want my summer hot.

I'd like for zero weather
To hand me out a few
To tie the can to summer
And chase the peek-a-boo,
Then I would long for summer
As O just now do not,
The summer I'm in love with most
Is the one I haven't got.
—Pudd Mortimer Lewis.

The Revised Version.—The contradictions of life are many. An observant man remarked recently that he was prowling about a certain city square, when he came upon a drinking fountain which bore two conflicting inscriptions. One, the original inscription on the fountain, was from the Bible—"And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely." Above this hung a placard—"Please do not waste the water."

N. W. ROWELL IN OXFORD

Leader Addresses Large Gathering in Woodstock

HYDRO MUST BE FREE

Woodstock, Nov. 24.—Back in his own riding, North Oxford, N. W. Rowell, K.C., the Liberal leader, delivered another fighting speech last night, declaring that the Liberal party stands unalterably opposed to transferring the great business enterprises of the municipalities — the Hydro-electric system, to a department of the Government, where, he alleged, spoils and patronage systems will have free play. He asked for support "in order that we may prevent this wrong from being done to the municipalities."

"Neither party can claim the credit for forwarding the scheme," he said. The representatives of the municipalities brought up the scheme and carried it along with co-operation of the Government, he said.

"The Hydro-electric was under way before Mr. Beck became connected with it," said Mr. Rowell. "But I would like to give him a great deal of credit for the work he has done."

"The Hydro-electric should be kept from political influence and intrigue. We take issue with Sir James when he proposes to turn it over and make it part of the political organisation of this province.

"Public ownership of public utilities will only justify itself provided you have efficient economical and non-partisan management. No worse blow could be dealt to public ownership than by subjecting the management of this great public utility to the influence of the spoils faction of either party. Against such a proposal all the municipalities of this province should enter their most emphatic protests. It must be free from political influence. That is our policy. Upon it we will stand or fall."

The meeting was held in the local opera house, and there were about 300 present, the place not being nearly filled. Dr. McKay, who resigned his seat for Mr. Rowell, was chairman. Col. T. R. Mayberry, former M.P.P. for South Oxford and present Liberal candidate, and E W. Nesbitt, M.P., also spoke.

"Neither the Liberal nor the Conservative Government is entitled to the credit of originating or setting in motion this Hydro-electric power scheme," said Mr. Rowell. "The idea was conceived by and the movement was pressed forward and took practical shape under the direction of the representatives of the municipalities."

Col. Mayberry said that Hon. W. A. G. MacKay, lately leader of the Opposition, was first in ability in the Opposition. He was glad that a man of the calibre of Mr. Rowell had taken his place.

Big Strike In Berlin.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—A general strike of the Berlin cloak and suit makers and workers in the children's clothing trade occurred yesterday for a 10 to 15 per cent. increase of wages guaranteed for several years.

The strike affects 50,000 female homeworkers and 3,000 tailor intermediaries.

Sir Dick Is Censured.

London, Nov. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Richard Cartwright's speech has caused some sensation here. The Pall Mall Gazette says he has really gone a little too far. It is unfair to represent English ignorance of Canadian matters as stolid or complete.

DEPENDS ON MANITOBA.

Ontario Must Ask Her For a Port on Hudson Bay.

Alvinston, Ont., Nov. 24.—The generosity of the Manitoba Government is all this province has left to rely on in its hopes for getting an Ontario port for ocean-going vessels on Hudson Bay. That is the position that this banner province has been placed in through the wilful act of the Laurier Government, in taking the present boundary between Manitoba and Ontario, and thereby handing both the Hudson Bay ports to Manitoba, said Sir James Whitney here last night.

"All the way down Hudson Bay, on the Ontario coast line," said Sir James, "there is no way that a craft large or small can go from this province through Hudson Bay to Europe. That's the way they've fixed it, all through the unjust methods of the Laurier Government.

"We have hopes that the Manitoba Government will treat us more fairly than the Dominion Government has done, and that they will, out of good nature, give us some arrangement whereby we can have a port on Hudson Bay. I don't know anything about that just yet, because now it is in the hands of the Manitoba Government, to take over the territory that has been given them by the late Dominion Government," he said.

Sir James stated that explorers and professional men say it is impossible to find a harbor at Port Nelson, Port Churchill might be found suitable.

"We don't object to Manitoba getting the territory. What we want is a port on Hudson Bay, and we made representations to the Laurier Government to get the boundary so arranged that Ontario, as well as Manitoba, should have a port on Hudson Bay for ocean-going vessels," he added.

John Farrell of Forest presided and J. B. Martyn, the Liberal-Conservative candidate in East Lambton, also gave an address.

Both Sir James Whitney and Mr. Martyn were presented with beautiful bouquets, presented by little Misses Myrtle Dene and Madeline Oke. Sir James was also made the recipient of an address of welcome from the Liberal-Conservative Association of East Lambton.

Dr. Martyn said that there was no need for an alarm clock to wake up the Whitney Government, as was suggested in The Globe. The Hydro-electric policy alone was sufficient to disprove any such inference. He showed faith in his constituents by describing Lambton as the best county in Ontario. He wanted some method of raising the value of land, and urged the establishment of a demonstration farm here, one that will be absolutely self-sustaining.

Canada's Call to Britain.

London, Eng., Nov. 24.—"Open the Door!" is the title of a penny Tariff Reform League booklet explaining the significance of Canada's rejection of American reciprocity.

It is shown that Canada's preference to Britain has increased the wages of British workers by nearly $30,000,000 a year.

"If we are not to risk a repetition of the reciprocity offer," it is stated, "and with it the preference that Canada now gives us, and the still larger preference she is ready to give us, we must respond to her desires without further delay and deal with her as generously as she deals with us."

Revised.

When I go out to take a walk
I look so grand and gay
I have to put some hatpins on
To keep the boys away.
—Yonkers Statesman.

Held Together.

"Shall I scrape the walls for you?" inquired the landlord.

"Well, I don't know," replied the tenant. "If you take off that wall paper the old house might fall down."

F. D. MONK IS ADRIFT

Nationalist Minister Tries to Affirm His Loyalty

MR. LEMIEUX ON CAMPAIGN

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—At eight o'clock last night the House of Commons was as dark as was the naval policy of the coalition Government after Mr. Monk had finished the total eclipse of his own explanation by the final unilluminative declaration, "We are here, you are there." Just before six o'clock Hon. Mr. Lemieux had thrown considerable light on the Nationalist-Conservative conglomeration of opposing policies and sectional appeals. He had followed a long and labored explanation by Mr. Monk, which did not explain or justify the coalition. Then the power went off.

Hon. F. D. Monk, in resuming his debate on the address, carefully considered the claim of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the defeat of the late Government was due to passion and prejudice. Even in the matter of reciprocity he thought no page in the history of Canada would be written down as a finer display of calm, courageous judgment and determination than that which the leader of the Opposition called an emotional page.

Numerous scandals had sprung up under the regime of the late administration, declared Mr. Monk. The scandal of the Quebec bridge had a serious effect. Never in the history of the Parliament of Canada had there been such a glaring dereliction of duty. Then there was the North Atlantic trading scandal. Two officials were concerned in the expenditure of half a million dollars on immigration, and had refused, under the protection of the then Government to tell what persons received the money.

Opposition orators had talked of a Government of coalition. He did not think there was very much to be said in condemnation of coalitions as such. He would like, however, to draw the attention of the House to the fact that Laurier, when he came into power in 1896, took in elements that till then had been somewhat diverse. He took in Hon. Mr. Dobell of Quebec, a Conservative. He took in Hon. Mr. Tarte, who had since been a cause of great bitterness to him.

Mr. Monk emphasised his assertion that there was no dissension in the Borden Cabinet.

"I have been an amateur of the circus," continued the Minister of Public Works, and the members of the Opposition lay back in their seats and roared with laughter.

He went on to compare the acrobatic feat of clearing the backs of four elephants, Laurier's leap on the navy. Clearing at a bound the platform he enunciated at the Imperial conferences of 1902 and 1907, he had brought down the resolution of 1909. "I voted for that resolution," said Mr. Monk, "and I would do so again under similar circumstances." (Government cheers.)

There had been a panic in England, the British navy had been declared unequal to the defence of the Empire and the control of the seas. "I have been unfairly taxed with disloyalty," declared Mr. Monk. "But the moment of danger to the British Empire will never be the moment that I and my friends will choose to discuss our relations to the Mother Country. (Cheers.) But the panic, he continued, "had quickly disappeared. The British navy, it was realised, was still in a position to retain the supremacy of the seas."

He concluded with a renewal of his asserveration that absolute harmony prevailed in the ranks of the Government.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who followed, claimed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has done more than any man living to improve the relations between the various races in Canada. He then introduced the British preference, reduced postal rates, made the port of Montreal a successful rival to the great port of New York, and, by a wise and prudent investigative policy, had filled the great lone land of the west. Over $121,000,000 had been spent on the transportation system.

As to the result of the election, "I bow to the decision of the majority," said Mr. Lemieux, but I offer no apology for the stand taken by the Liberal party. It was a victory of fear over self-reliance, a victory of passion over reason."

Mr. Lemieux read from Hansard of Jan. 12, 1910, to prove that Mr. Monk had declared himself opposed to the navy motion, while to-day he had said he adhered to it.

In the Quebec campaign, while the Liberals were being charged with being too drastic, the Nationalists had declared that Mr. Monk had not been present and had not voted for the motion.

"I charge the coalition Government with varying its attitude according to circumstances," said Mr. Lemieux. "It had one policy for Ontario and another for Quebec."

The Government's position on the navy, he claimed, was a "double-barreled policy" — a referendum to please the Nationalists and a cash contribution or Dreadnoughts to please Ontario. In Ontario the Canadian navy was set forth as a "tin pot navy"; in Quebec as an infernal machine. That Mr. Borden had never made a public appearance on the same platform with Mr. Monk in Quebec during the late campaign was a part of this double game.

During the dinner recess an accident at the power works left the buildings in darkness and when the House met at eight, all it could do was to adjourn till to-day, when Mr S. A. A. Mondou of Yamaska, who began his speech, will resume.

Cummings Charged With Murder.

Montreal, Nov. 24.—That Bella Cameron Cummings came to her death as the result of two bullet wounds inflicted by her husband, was the verdict reached yesterday morning by the coroner's jury which enquired into the death of Mrs. Cummings, who was shot on Tuesday evening at 7.15 on Chautauguay street.

John Cummings, the husband, is under arrest and has confessed his crime. A number of witnesses were called at the inquest. Mrs. Cameron, mother of the murdered woman, testified that she had been threatened several times by her husband.

Ed. Packer, who was walking with Mrs. Cummings when she was murdered, identified Cummings as the murderer.

Strange Tale of Abduction.

San Bernardino, Calif., Nov. 24.—Miss Jessie McDonald, a school girl, took the stand yesterday in the trial of Dr. A. W. McDavit, dentist, accused of her abduction, and told of her alleged imprisonment for 16 months in a room adjoining his office.

Miss McDonald said she first met McDavit five years ago as a patient. "I cared for my child and myself," she testified. "I washed clothes, Dr. McDavit bringing the water necessary for this from his office."

She was rescued by her father after having asked a friend of McDavit's to telephone him.

Operated on Crown Prince.

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 24.—Crown Prince Gustav Adolph of Sweden, the son-in-law of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, was operated on yesterday for appendicitis. His condition is quite satisfactory. He had suffered slightly for several months, and was operated on at his own request.

Off Go Three Heads.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—Three of the nine members of the Quebec harbor board, Messrs. George Tanguay, J. B. Laliberte and R. Larue, have been removed by the Government. Their places are filled by J. B. Letellier, N. Belleau and Victor Chateauvert.

Toronto Traveler Stricken.

Brandon, Man., Nov. 24.—E. D. Groskurth, a drygoods' traveler from Toronto, was taken to the hospital here yesterday in a very serious condition. He is suffering from a severe attack of sciatica and is hopelessly crippled.

GREY MAY STEP OUT

Sir Edward is Object of Considerable Criticism

RADICALS ARE HOSTILE

London, Nov. 24.—The belief prevails in political circles that Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, will retire from the Cabinet after the eagerly awaited exposition on foreign relations on Nov. 27 in the House of Commons and that James Bryce, Ambassador to the United States will succeed him.

The resignation of the Foreign Secretary will almost certainly be handed to the Prime Minister should any lack of confidence be shown in his policy during which will follow his statement on Monday.

Sir Edward Grey, who during the earlier years of his occupancy of the Foreign Office received the almost unanimous support of all parties, has recently been the object of continuous attack, not from the Opposition, but by members of his own party, or rather the extreme radical element in that party. The secrecy with which diplomatic negotiations have been carried on has aroused the fire of the radicals, who latterly have received some support from the more moderate Liberals.

The disclosures regarding the Anglo-German conversations with respect to Morocco and the statements that these two countries were on the verge of war, have given the Radicals another opening, and they are now, it is understood, pressing for the retirement of Sir Edward, declaring that "We won't be drawn into war without knowing the reason why."

The Radicals favor an Anglo-German agreement and accuse Sir Edward Grey of balking their efforts in this direction, either by his own design or through the influence of anti-German officials to the Foreign Office. Should Sir Edward resign, Viscount Haldane, Secretary of War, and Reginald McKenna, will likely follow him.

James Bryce is the man thought most likely to be his successor, as Mr. Bryce would be supported by the entire party, as he was when the Unionists attacked him for the part he took in the negotiations on the subject of reciprocity between the United States and Canada.

By a tacit understanding the Unionist leaders support the Government's foreign policy or at least refrain from criticizing it. They, like the moderate Liberals argue: "Why turn a brilliant diplomatic victory into defeat by sacrificing the victor, in order to secure the goodwill of vanquished Germans?"

The lobby is full of rumors of other troubles besetting the Government. It is said in Unionist quarters that the Cabinet is not able to satisfy John Redmond's home rule demands, which have increased through fear of the growing O'Brienite strength in Ireland and the Laborites are dissatisfied with the findings of the royal commission last August with respect to the railway strike. They blame the Cabinet for failure to secure recognition of the unions.

The Prime Minister, it is true, is under moral obligations to avoid a crisis during the King's absence, but it may be beyond his power to do so.

Germnay Is Waiting.

Cologne, Germany, Nov. 24.—Foreign Secretary Von Kiderlin-Waechter's explanation leaves no doubt that an Anglo-German clash was imminent in July, according to an apparently inspired despatch from Berlin in The Cologne Gazette, which adds: "The acute crisis is passed, but the situation remains grave. Germany awaits with even greater tension Great Britain's coming explanations. Upon this will depend the relations of the two countries in the future—whether they are to be distrustful and unfriendly or whether a better understanding will be brought about. Germany is reluctant to believe in the possibility that a war could break out over night between two great powers without a real question being at issue, but late events have spoken early."

Italians Hemmed In.

Paris, Nov. 24.—That the Town of Tripoli is virtually besieged by the Turks and that Homs is in no better situation is the opinion of a correspondent of The Temps, who has succeeded in joining the Ottoman forces. He telegraphs regarding the Turkish side of the war under date of Nov. 12 and says that it is certain that after a month and a half war, after large expenditures and serious losses, the Italians are no further advanced than on the day following their disembarkation. If the Turkish forces are inferior in numbers to the Italians they make up in confidence what they lack in numbers.

The food of the Turkish army is frugal, but sufficient. Arms are adequate, many carrying rifles captured from the enemy. The correspondent did not find dissension among the Arabs and Turks.

Scottish Academical Roughs.

Edinburgh, Scot., Nov. 24.—At a meeting of the Edinburgh University Liberal Association on Wednesday night the name of Mr. Winston Churchill was, it is understood, deleted from the list of honorary presidents on account of a letter he had written to the association. In the communication Mr. Churchill, it is understood, refused to attend any social functions of the association, adding that he did not wish to be associated with "Scottish academical roughs."

McGill Fund Piling Up.

Montreal, Nov. 24.—The McGill mark was overtopped at noon yesterday, inside of four days, one day before the committee expected to complete the task of raising $1,000,000, and the total is now rapidly on its way towards the million and a half mark, which has been demanded by Robert Redford, if the committee are to receive his large gift of $100,000.

E. A. Robert of the Montreal Street Railway, yesterday, $80,000; N. Curry, $25,000, and Sir Hugh Graham, $25,000; Dr. Milton Hersey has also given $30,000. The total announced is $1,132,633.

Drydock For Quebec.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—A delegation representing the business interests of Quebec City yesterday morning waited upon Premier Borden and a number of his colleagues and urged Government aid for the construction of a drydock at Quebec to accommodate the biggest class of ocean-going vessels. Several members accompanied the delegation, including Messrs. Forget, Lesperance, Sevigny, Price and Lamanche.

Barrie Man's Sudden Death.

Barrie, Nov. 24.—The family of Wm. Degear was startled yesterday morning as they finished breakfast to see their father reel suddenly and die instantly. He had been in his customary health. Before coming to Barrie the family lived at Minesing. One son is a resident of Toronto, Thomas, who is a carriage-maker of McGill street.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"Of course! Of course! God help me, I thought you meant Edith! I never thought of Louise. And Edith has spoken of you lately!"

"I found your younger daughter charming," Wrayson said, seriously, "but it was of your daughter Louise I was speaking. I thought that you would understand that."

"My daughter—whom you found—in Morris Barnes' flat—that night?"

"Exactly," Wrayson answered, "and my question is this. I cannot ask you why you and she parted, but at least yo ucan tell me if you know of any reason why I should not ask her to be my wife."

The Colonel was silent.

"No!" he said at last, "there is no reason. But she would not consent. I am sure of that."

"We will let it go at that," Wrayson answered. "Come!"

He had chosen his moment for rising so as to pass down the room almost at the same time as Mr. Bentham and his strange companion. Prolific of smiles and somewhat elephantine graces, the lady's darkened eyes met Wrayson's boldly, and finding there some encouragement, she even favoured him with a backward glance. In the vestibule, he slipped a half-crown into the attendant's hand.

"See if you can hear the address that lady gives the cabman," he whispered.

The boy nodded, and hurried out after them. Wrayson kept the Colonel back under the pretence of lighting a fresh cigar. When at last they strolled forward, they met the boy returning. He touched his hat to Wrayson.

"Alhambra, sir!" he said, quietly. "Gone off alone, sir, in a hansom. Gentleman walked."

The oClonel kept silence until they were in the street.

"Coming to the club?" he asked, a little abruptly.

"No!" Wrayson answered.

"You are going after that woman?" the Colonel exclaimed.

"I'm going to the Alhambra," Wrayson answered. "I can't help it. It sounds foolish, I suppose, but this affair fascinates me. It works on my nerves somehow. I must go."

The Colonel turned on his heel. Without another word, he crossed the Strand, leaving Wrayson standing upon the pavement. Wrayson, with a little sigh, turned westwards.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Wrayson easily discovered the object of his search. She was seated upon a lounge in the promenade, her ample charms lavishly displayed, and her blackened eyes mutely questioning the passersby. She welcomed Wrayson with a smile which she meant to be inviting, albeit she was a little suspicious. Men of Wrayson's stamp and appearance were not often such easy victims.

"Saw you at Luigi's, didn't I?" he asked, hat in hand.

She nodded, and made room for him to sit down by her side.

"Did you see the old stick I was with?' she asked. "I don't know why I was fool enough to go out with him. Trying to pump me about poor old Barney, too, all the time. Just as though I couldn't see through him."

"Old Barney!" Wrayson repeated, a little perplexed.

She laughed coarsely.

"Ih! come, that won't do!" she declared. "I'm almost sure you're on the same lay yourself. Didn't I see you at the inquest?—Morris Barnes 'inquest, of course? You know whom I mean right enough."

"I know whom you mean now," Wrayson admitted. "Yes! I was there. Queer affair, wasn't it?"

The lady nodded.

"I should like a liqueur," she remarked, with apparent irrelevance. "Benedictine!"

They were seated in front of a small table, and were at times the object of expectant contemplation on the part of a magnificent individual in livery and knee-breeches. Wrayson sumoned him and ordered two Benedictines.

"Now I don't mind telling you," the lady continued, leaning over towards him confidentially, "that I'm dead off that old man who came prying round and took me to dinner, to pump me about poor Barney! He didn't get much out of me. For one thing, I don't know much. But the little I do know I'd sooner tell you han him."

"You're very kind," Wrayson murmured. "He used o come to these places a good deal, didn't he?"

She nodded assent.

"He was always either here or at the Empire. H ewasn't a bad sort, Barney, although he was just like all the rest of them, close with his money when he was sober, and chucking it about when he'd had a drop too much. What you want to know about him in particular?"

"Well, for one thing," Wrayson answered, "where he got his money from."

She shook her head.

"He was always very close about that," she said. "The only story I ever heard him tell was that he'd made it mining in South Africa."

"You have really heard him say that?" Wrayson asked.

"Half a dozen times," she declared

"That proves, at any rate," he remarked thoughtfully, "that there was some mystery about his income, because I happen to know that he came back from South Africa a pauper."

"Very likely," she remarked. "Barney was always the sort who would rather tell a lie than the truth."

"Did he say anything to you that night about being in any kind of danger?" he asked.

"No! I don't think so. I didn't take particular notice of what he said, because he was a bit squiffy. I believe he mentioned something about a business appointment that night, but I really didn't take much notice."

"You didn't tell them anything about that at the inquest," Wrayson remarked.

"I know I didn't," she admitted. "You see, I was so knocked over, and I really didn't remember anything clearly, that I thought it was best to say nothing at all. They'd only have been trying to ferret things out of me that I couldn't have told them."

"I think that you were very wise," Wrayson said. "You don't happen to remember anything else that he said, I suppose?"

"No! except that he seemed a little depressed. But there's something else about Barney that I always suspected ,that I've never heard mentioned yet. Mind you, it may be true or it may not, but I always suspected it."

"What was that?' Wrayson demanded.

"I believe that he was married," she declared impressively.

"Married!"

"Wrayson looked incredulous. It certainly did not seem probable.

"Where is his wife then?" he asked. "Why hasn't she turned up to claim his effects? Besides, he lived alone. He was my neighbour, you know. His brother has taken possession of his flat."

The lady rather enjoyed the impression she had made. She was not averse, either, to being seen in so prominent a place in confidential talk with a man of Wrayson's appearance. It might not be directly remunerative, but it was likely to do her good.

"He showed me a photograph once," she continued. "A baby-faced chit of a girl, it was, but he was evidently very proud of it. A little girl of his down in the country, he told me. Then, do you know this? He was never in London for Sunday. Every week-end he went off somewhere—and I never heard of any one who ever saw him or knew where he went to."

"This is very interesting," Wrayson admitted, "but if he was married, surel yhis wife would have turned up by now!"

"Why should she?" the lady answered. "Don't you see that she very likely has what all you gentlemen seem to be so anxious about—his income?"

"By Jove!" Wrayson exclaimed siftly. "If course, if there was anything mysterious about thesource of it, all the more reason for her to keep dark.

"Well, that's what I've had in my mind," she declared, summoning the waiter. "I'll take another liqueur, if you don't mind."

"Did you tell Mr. Bentham this?" he asked.

"Not I," she answered. "The old fool got about as much out of me as he deserved—and that's nothing."

"I'm sure I'm very much obliged," Wrayson answered, drawing out his pocketbook. "I wonder if I might be allowed——?"

He glanced at her inquiringly. She nodded.

"I'm not proud," she declared.

* * * * * * *

"As an amateur detective," Wrayson remarked to himself, as he strolled homewards, "I am beginning rather to fancy myself. And yet——"

His thoughts had stolen away. He forgot Morris Barnes and the sordid mystery of which he was the centre. He remembered only the compelling cause which was driving him towards the solution of it. The night was warm, and he walked slowly, his hands behind him, and ever before his eyes the shadowy image of the girl who had brought so many strange sensations into his somewhat uneventful life. Would he ever see her, he wondered, without the light of trouble in her eyes, with colour in her cheeks, and joy in her tone? He thought of her violet-rimmed eyes, her hesitating manner, her air always as of one who walked hand in hand with fear. She was not meant for these things! Her lips and eyes were made for laughter; she was, after all, only a girl. If he could but lift the cloud! And then he looked upwards and saw her—leaning from the little iron balcony, and looking out into the cool night.

He half stopped. She did not move. It was too dark to see her features, but as he looked upwards a strange idea came to him. Was it a gesture or some unspoken summons which travelled down to him through the semi-darkness? He only knew, as he turned and entered the flat, that a new chapter of his life was opening itself out before him.

CHAPTER XIX.

Wrayson felt, from the moment he crossed the threshold of the room, that he had entered an atmosphere charged with elusive emotion. He was not sure of himself or of her as she turned slowly to greet him. Only he was at once conscious that something of that change in her which he had prophetically imagined was already shining out of her eyes. She was at once more natural and further removed from him.

"I am glad," she said simply. "I wanted to say good-bye to you."

He was stunned for a moment. He had not imagined this.

She nodded.

"Good-bye!" he repeated. "You are going away?"

"To-morrow. Oh! I am glad. You don't know how glad I am."

She swept past him and sank into an easy chair. She wore a black velveteen evening dress, cut rather high, without ornament or relief of any sort, and her neck gleamed like polished ivory from which creeps always a subtle shade of pink. Her hair was parted in the middle and brushed back in little waves, her eyes were full of fire, and her face was no longer passive. Beautiful she had seemed to him before, but beautiful with a sort of impersonal perfection. She was beautiful now in her own right, the beauty of a woman whom nature has claimed for her own, who acknowledges her heritage. The fear-frozen subjectivity in which he had yet found enough to fascinate him, had passed away. He felt that she was a stranger.

"Always," she murmured, "I shall think of London as a city of dreadful memories. I should like to be going to set my face eastwards or westwards until I was so far away that even memory had perished. But that is just where the bands tell, isn't it?"

"There are many who can make the bonds elastic,' he answered. "It is only a question of going far enough."

"Alas!" she answered, "a few hundred miles are all that are granted to me. And London is like a terrible octopus. Its arms stretch over the sea."

"A few hundred miles," he repeated, with obvious relief. "Northwards or southwards, or eastwards or westwards?"

"Southwards," she answered. "The other side of t' channel. That, at least, is some I always like to feel that there is sea between me and a place which I—loathe!"

"Is London so hateful to you, then?" he asekd.

"Perhaps I should not have said that," she answered. "Say a place of which I am afraid!"

He looked across at her. He, too, in obedience to a gesture from her, was seated.

"Come," he said, "we will not talk of London, then. Tell me where you are going."

She shook her head.

"To a little Paradise I know of."

"Paradise," he reminded her, "was meant for two."

"There will be two of us," she answered, smiling

He felt his heart thump against his ribs.

"Then if one wanted to play the part of intruder?"

She shook her head

"The third person in Paradise was always very much de trop," she reminded him.

"It depends upon the people who are already there," he protested.

"My friend," she said, "is in search of solitude, absolute and complete."

He shook his head.

"Such a place does not exist," he declared confidently. "Your friend might as well have stayed at home."

Psoriasis Was Cured

After Five Years of Suffering —Three Doctors Failed and Said Case Was Incurable

Itching and Burning Was Terrible Until Relief and Cure Was Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Psoriasis is another name for chronic eczema. It is the worst form of this dreadful itching skin disease. Once eczema has reached this stage it is usually considered incurable.

But here is a case which proves again the wonderful healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Not only does relief come quickly, but the resulting benefits are thorough and lasting.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "I thought it my duty to write you telling you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For five years I suffered with what three doctors called Psoriasis. I doctored with three different doctors, with no good results, and one of our noted doctors told me if any one offered to guarantee me a cure for $50.00 to keep my money in my pocket, as I could not be cured.

"The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head. The itching and burning was hard to bear. At last my brother read in the paper about Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer. I got 8 boxes, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise the ointment enough, and you are at liberty to use my testimony, as I hope thereby to induce other sufferers to try the same."

The Country Home

From Farm and Dairy.

"The air is goe. in the country because all the bad air is stored up in the houses," says an American doctor. In too many cases his criticism of ventilation in country homes is correct. Many of us are apparently more anxious to keep warm than to keep healthy.

The open country is the most healthy place in which to live, but in the country disease is more prevalent than amongst the same class of people in the city. Better ventilation of the home, particularly of the bedrooms, is the greatest reform needed to make country people the healthiest class of the community as they should be. Ex-Governor Hoard, of Wisconsin, in a recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman, gives the following plan of ventilating country homes that he has most used with good results.

VENTILATE THROUGH CHIMNEY

"First the chimney should be constructed with a double flue from the cellar to the top. One flue is to be used solely for the purpose of drawing off the foul, cold air at the floor surface.

"This is done as follows: For the upper sleeping and bath rooms, select at some convenient place a space between the studding. At the base board insert a 6 by 8 open iron register. At the top insert a two-inch tin pipe tightly soldered at each length which runs from the top of the studding space along the attic floor to the ventilating flue in the chimney, where it is tightly bricked in. Cover these tin pipes in the attic with a boxing of boards to prevent them from being flattened in any way. As long as there is heat in the chimney there will be a strong suction from the flue, which will remove the cold, foul air at the bottom of the bedroom and let the warm air at the ceiling down to the floor.

IT'S CHEAP TOO

"If the house is heated with furnace hot air this method will greatly increase the circulation, lessen the expense of coal and promote the health and vigor of the occupants of the rooms. The warm air rises by reason of its lightness to the top of the room. Unless the cold air, which is always the foulest and heaviest, is drawn off, the warm air cannot get down to the floor. Hence we often see rooms cold and uncomfortable at the floor and uncomfortably warm at the ceiling.

TO VENTILATE LOWER ROOMS

"The lower rooms that are next the chimney can have an open register inserted in the ventilating flue at the baseboard. Other rooms more distant can have an open register inserted in the floor which is connected with a 3-inch tin pipe that passes to the chimney at the top of the cellar room.

"This system takes advantage of the daily heat in the chimney to draw off all cold and foul air, thus creating a vacuum which is at once filled with pure air from outside. Nature abhors a vacuum. This method of ventilating living and sleeping rooms is automatic, inexpensive and always efficient, as long as the windows and doors are closed."

WHEAT PRODUCTION

From Farm and Dairy.

England is credited with producing 50,000,000 bus. of wheat a year. She imports 200,000,000 bus. of wheat and takes pains to import that as wheat instead of as flour for the sake of getting the fertility which is contained in the bran and shorts portions of the kernel almost exclusively. She imports 100,000,000 bus. of corn and nearly a billion pounds of oilcake a year. In addition to this annual source of fertility she imports large quantities of phosphorus. These importations of grain result in the production of a vast quantity of stable manure in Britain which is lavishly applied to the fields which are planted to grain.

By this process of gathering the world's fertility and heaping it up on the "tight little island" regularly and systematically for centuries and of shipping nothing out of the country that has fertilizing value, she bears the strongest evidence of what fertility coupled with her heavy rainfall and her humid air, which allows the minimum escape of moisture in the production of a ton of dry material in a crop, will do for the crop yields of a country.

Germany shows much the same condition, though a somewhat lighter yield than England, and while she has ranged less widely in gathering fertility, she ships out of her country little besides sugar, which commodity contains none of the elements of crop fertility.

Denmark sells butter as almost her exclusive export product, a material which, at the commercial rates of fertilizers as they are sold on the market, carries off 48 cts. worth of fertility a ton, while wheat bran on the same basis shows a value for its fertilising ingredients of about $9 a ton.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN TWENTY HAS A STRONG BACK.

THE KIDNEYS ARE TO BLAME NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The poisons that ought to be carried off are sent back into the blood, taking with them a multitude of aches and pains. There is no use of expecting relief until the kidneys are restored to health.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the quickest and most reliable remedy. Mrs. Ed. Baxter, Upham, N.B., writes—"I take a good deal of pleasure in telling you what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I was troubled with my kidneys for a number of years, and my back was so lame I could not sweep the floor. A friend of mine advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and after using three boxes I am as well as ever. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from lame back or kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

INTERESTING TESTS

From Farm and Dairy.

Interesting tests for egg laying have been conducted at the Oregon Agricultural College by John H. Mack, a special poultry student.

In these tests single-comb White Leghorns were used, five pullets and a cockerel being given a run of but 10 by 10 feet, in which space was the house, so that they were in close confinement. The house was a six by three and a half foot brooder coop rearranged for their use. Half was used for roosting quarters and half for a scratching shed

This scratching shed was kept well bedded with straw about eight inches deep, and a large part of the whole grain given the fowls was fed here, though some were fed in the yard to induce the fowls to scratch outside when the weather permitted. The front of the house consisted of two doors, which were either wide open or partly so even in the coldest winter weather. No ill effects were noticed, and the egg record and general vitality of the flock showed that they were benefited by the more nearly natural conditions, although the cold sometimes seemed extreme for them.

As the soil was rather heavy, several inches of sawdust were spread on the ground, so that the chickens did not track in cold, wet mud, and had a good scratching place, which dried rapidly after a rain.

A dry mash was fed them in hoppers and whole grain, oats in the morning and wheat in the afternoon, strewn in the litter. The fowls ate only about one-third as much oats as wheat but as there were oats and barley in the mash they probably made up deficiencies there. The mash, which was fed dry and kept constantly before them, consisted of two parts of bran to one of ground corn and one of ground oats and barley. Other hoppers to which they had access all the time held beef scrap, charcoal, grit and ground shell. A good supply of kale was kept before them to pick at, and good, fresh water was always within easy reach.

The following record of the amount and cost of the feed from November to May is interesting in the light of the production records: 158 lbs. of wheat, $2.22; 66 1-2 lbs. of oats, 66c; 13 lbs. of bran, 15c; 7 1-2 lbs. of ground oats and barley, 10 1-2c; 9 lbs. of beef scrap, 32 1-4c; 8 lbs. of charcoal, 4 1-2c; 5 1-2 lbs. of grit, 5 1-2c; 5 3-4 lbs. of shell, 5 3-4c; 5 3-4 lbs. of ground corn, 8 3-4c; total cost, $3.92 1-4.

Pullet No. 1 laid 113 eggs, valued at $2.35; pullet No. 2 laid 112 eggs, valued at $2.75; pullet No. 3 laid 101 eggs, valued at $2.39; pullet No. 4 laid 113 eggs, valued at $2.94; and pullet No. 5 laid 99 eggs, valued at $2.23.

Thus it is seen that the total expenditure for the five pullets and the cockerel was but $3.92 3-4, while the income from the eggs was $12.66, leaving a profit, if the work in caring for the chickens is not counted, of $8.74.

GOOD ROADS

From Farm and Dairy.

Some of the advantages of good roads over bad ones, cited by C. O. Raine, Master of the Missouri State Grange, are as follows:

The possibility of securing quick medical assistance in the event of sickness in the family.

The ability of children to attend school regularly, although possibly living a considerable distance from the school house.

The possibility of the family attending church and enjoying social intercourse with their neighbors and friends, both in the country and in town.

The possibility of utilizing time during bad weather by attending to business and social duties away from home both day and night.

The enlarged rental value of the farm.

The ability to market produce when it is scarce because those living on bad roads cannot get to market.

The increase in the tonnage in the hauling of produce to market and the return haul of family necessities.

The increase in the value of the farms by many dollars per acre and the possibility of selling with a readiness not known to those holding lands not adjacent to good roads.

The importance given to the country by reason of its being inhabited by people who build and maintain good roads with pleasure and profit to themselves.

A FINE FACTORY

From Farm and Dairy.

One of the neatest and best equipped cheese factories in Northumberland Co., Ont., is the "Ideal" Factory at Norham. This factory, erected at a cost of $3,000, ran its first season in 1910, when 76 tons of cheese were made.

The factory, an illustration of which appears on this page, is equipped with cement floors and all modern appliances for making cheese in a sanitary manner and with a minimum of work.

The factory is located on a bluff, and the whey runs by gravity to the whey tank 80 feet away.

The best feature of this new factory is the cool curing room, 20 by 28 feet in size, with an ice chamber attached 10 by 28 feet.

"This year we had very hot weather," said Mr. E. Demerest, the maker at the Ideal Factory to an editor of Farm and Dairy recently, "but we never had a complaint from a buyer as to the quality of the cheese. When the cheese was made right it stayed right. We had no difficulty in maintaining an even temperature of 60 degrees in the hottest weather.

"I worked for several years with an ordinary curing room and was always rather nervous when the buyer was around inspecting cheese. Now I kind of feel that I have the whip hand. I know that the cheese will be all right in the curing room, and the buyer will be anxious to get it.

"The walls of our curing room are of two-ply of lumber and one of paper on either side of the studding with shavings between.

"All of our patrons are well satisfied with the curing room, and we believe that we more than got back the extra cost of the curing room the first year. As the curing room was built at the same time as the factory, the extra expense for cool curing facilities did not exceed $150.

CREAM CHEESE

From Farm and Dairy.

Miss G. Bagnell, N.D.O., Macdonald College, P.Q.

The requirements for 10 cream cheese of the variety described in Farm and Dairy, Oct 26, are: One gallon cream (15 per cent butter-fat), one tablespoonful of starter or buttermilk, 20 drops of rennet extract, or equivalent in tablets, dairy salt, thermometer, a pail, bowl, skimmer and spoon, two buckaback towels and string, and a cream cheese mould and some muslin.

The method of procedure is as follows:

1. Put cream and starter into a clean vessel and mix.

2. Get the temperature between 80 deg. and 84 deg. F.

3. Dilute the rennet extract with five times its bulk of water, in order to facilitate mixing. Add it to the cream, stirring gently and thoroughly for two minutes.

4. Cover with a cloth to retain the heat, and let it stand for two or three hours, or until a nice, soft curd is formed.

5. Spread one of the cloths in the bowl, then with the skimmer gently ladle the curd from the pail into it, being careful to take thin slices, and to break it as little as possible.

6. Gather up the cloth and tie with a string, without crushing the curd, then hang it up to drain on a stick placed between two chairs, or in some other convenient position, with the bowl placed underneath to receive the whey. Let is drain from 12 to 24 hours.

7. When sufficiently drained, turn the curd into a clean cloth, sprinkle with salt to taste, and knead in the cloth to thoroughly mix the salt.

8. Then fold the cloth neatly over the cheese, and place between two boards to press, with a brick on top, and leave for a few hours or until the cheese is of the consistency of newly churned butter; it should, however, be less sticky, and of a more mealy texture than butter.

9. Cover the lid of the mould with a piece of muslin, and place another piece of muslin (6-inch square) in the mould. Put four ounces of the cream cheese curd into the mould. Put the lid on the mould and press with the hands; by this means the curd takes the form of the mould. Fold the ends of muslin over the curd and press again, when the cheese may be taken from the mould and wrapped in parchment butter paper.

Weight of each cheese, 4 ounces.

Retail price, 15 cents.

A Great Question.—A Welsh minister, in commencing his sermon one Sunday, leaned over the pulpit and said with a solemn air, "Friends, I have a question to ask. I cannot answer it. Yu cannot answer it. If an angel from Heaven was here he could not answer it. If a devil from Hell were here he could not answer it." Death-like silence reigned. Every eye was fixed on the speaker. He proceeded. "The question is this—'How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?'"

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, as I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 887 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

Firing a Broadside

(Copyright, 1911 by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

WHEN the new battle ship Utah, with a full load displacement of 23,003 tons, went into commission a few weeks ago, an experienced naval officer who had been looking her over with a proud sense of patriotic spirit remarked:—

"She's the cream of them all. I'd like to help train her to fight."

The big ship as she ploughed her way slowly through the water was in herself an emblem of strength and a product of all that modern naval design could make her. Surely she was equipped to give a good account of herself. In the words of the naval expert watching her, she was "ready to be taught how to fight."

It may not have occurred to persons outside of the navy that it is as necessary to teach a ship how to act in a battle as it is to teach a pugilist how to act in the ring. Yet it is so—emphatically so. Even the mighty Utah, with her ten 12-inch 45-calibre rifles, her heavy Krupp armor and her complement of 888 men, would make a sorry showing against a very inferior ship if her officers and men did not know how to get the best out of her during the comparatively short space of time when the actual battle is being fought.

This is why she is now being made ready for her period of training, and also why the Navy Department attaches such great importance to the naval drills which are conducted regularly by competent men in time of peace. By naval drills one must take into consideration all the different phases of "training" that the ships of the United States Navy go through from one end of the year to the other. Special consideration might be given to the periods of target practice, when the ships are taught to shoot straight, for shooting straight is indeed the most immediate and important offence and defence which a ship can have.

But let it not for a moment be supposed that teaching a ship to shoot straight means merely getting good gunners and putting them at the big guns. "The man behind the gun" has been a navy watchword for many years, but it is not the man behind the gun who is going to be the prime factor in naval battles of the future. A battle ship might have a picked crew of the best gunners available in all the world and yet not make a single hit in a modern naval engagement. In fact, if the gunners did their work properly the ship would necessarily miss with all the broadside guns every time the wrong information as to range, &c., were communicated from the fire control towers to the gunnery crews.

The importance of the gunner is accurately to carry out his orders and point the guns as he is instructed to point them. Perfect co-operation between the fire control tower and the gun pointers would form the ideal shooting ship, as the gunners would be correctly told where to shoot and would shoot as told. But if one or the other of these co-ordinate branches must be sacrificed it would be better to have mediocre gunners and a good fire control system than good gunners and a system of fire control that threw them off the target.

Training a modern battle ship to fight, therefore, consists, among other things, of teaching the officers in the fire control [illegible] the shots on the target and communicate the range accurately to the gun pointers at the big guns, and in teaching the guns' crews to shoot "according to instructions" and to shoot as quickly as they can. The rapidity of shots fired is, of course, of paramount importance, and in this respect the efficiency depends solely upon the crews at the guns.

It is in working on this problem that the most expert ordnance officers in the navy are devoting their best energies day by day. Everything that might spell improvement in this line is given consideration. The majority of this work revolves around the system of fire control, which naval experts are straining to bring to the highest point of efficiency. This fire control system not only must be effective in target practice, but must so stand as to be practical and effective when hostile shots are coming its way.

There would be surprise for many if they realized even a small part of the work which the naval experts go through in this process of training a battle ship for actual battle. Ideas are constantly exchanged between those officers most proficient in this line, and the ideas brought out in foreign navies are closely scrutinized and studied. Mimic battles between American sea monsters and the best available foreign ships are fought and refought under various conditions in the minds of the naval authorities.

Problem of Military Masts.

Perhaps an account of one of these battles, fought in one of the offices of a naval officer in Washington only last week, would illustrate by what means American officers attempt to arrive at conclusions, and likewise would give an idea of how modern naval battles are fought. The battle begins in this way:—

A commanding officer whose opinions carry great weight with the Navy Department, and who is daily working on the "training of battle ships," sits quietly in his library in the evening thinking about suggestions he has heard in talks with his brother officers and the problems which on that day have been discussed.

The proposal of making a slight change in the military masts now aboard American ships has just been up for consideration. Some of the officers believe these masts should be smaller than they are now, and that the American dreadnoughts should have one instead of two of the structures. Other officers are in favor of keeping the masts as they are because of the tremendous advantage they would give American ships in the early action of an engagement.

Still other authorities are doubtful about the superiority of the American skeleton masts over the British tripod masts. They point out that the skeleton masts, upon which the all important fire control stations are situated, are each 120 feet high and from 30 to 40 feet in diameter at the base, and they argue that they form too large a target for the enemy, which would doubtless direct highly explosive projectiles against them.

All these ideas are in the mind of the naval officer. How does he form his own opinion as to the best type of mast for the American ships of the future? He sends—figuratively speaking, of course—one of the late American ships with the skeleton masts out to meet one of the latest British ships with the British tripod masts, and pictures what he thinks might happen.

Suppose, he reasons, that the battle ship Utah were to meet the British battle ship Neptune in the open sea to-morrow and the ships were assigned to the cheerful task of destroying each other. What would be likely to happen?

Both vessels are of about the same normal displacement—20,000 tons—both have ten 12-inch rifles and both have about 21 knots speed.

The powerful Utah steams out in search of her formidable opponent, with her officers and men ready for the fray and ship cleared for action. In the basket at each masthead are two spotters. The executive officer, chief of the fire controls, is ready to take the most advantageous position he can find when the actual battle begins.

Each spotter has a telephone apparatus attached to his hand, and by means of a tube will shortly communicate his signals to the gun pointers at each of the ten 12-inch guns, all on a median line of the ship. The visual sighting apparatus, the telephone system and the electrical apparatus are all working in tip-top shape. The men at the guns are ready to hear that the enemy has been sighted.

Finally on the horizon there appears the faintest indication of a trail of smoke. Orders are given to increase speed, and some of the four hundred tons of the vessel's oil is flushed on the coal to accomplish this. The trail of smoke becomes more distinct. Like a tiny speck first appears the sign of a ship. Word that the enemy is sighted is flashed like magic to the officers and crew. The hour of the supreme test is at hand.

Larger and larger grows the speck, until it is surmised that the Neptune is as anxious for the battle as the Utah. She appears to be coming head on, ready to shift her position when within range and get the full benefit of her 12-inch broadside. The commander of the Utah likewise realizes that the position of his ship with respect to the enemy is important, for if the bow of his vessel points toward the Neptune he can fire only four of his 12-inch rifles. He wants to use all ten. He does not count the sixteen 5-inch 50-calibre rifles, as he believes the battle will be over before they can be made use of. He fully realizes that the big guns are to decide the day.

As the approaching speck is watched from the fire control tower it assumes more and more distinctly the shape of a ship. It is now about nine miles away. As the ship appears to have come within the 15,000-yard range orders are given aboard the American ship to begin the range finding fire.

With a crashing concussion that shakes the mighty ship a gun pours forth its volcano of fire and an armor piercing shell shoots through the air in the direction of the object nine miles distant. The course of the shot is followed from the fire control tower. It is seen to fall short by about 725 yards.

"15,225" is shouted through the tube in the tower to the ten gunnery crews. The range was thought to be 14,500 yards, and the shot is 725 yards short.

Another terrific concussion announces the second shot. This is just a little to the right, and strikes the water two hundred yards over the ship's stern.

"15,025" is the immediate signal, while hurried orders are telephoned below to change the train of the guns so that the slight mistake in angle will be corrected. The third shot sends up a splash almost where the thick armor of the ship meets the water. The range is found. Orders for broadside firing at the given range are flashed below.

In instantaneous response to the signal the ten 12-inch rifles pour forth a salvo of ten shots. Three of them hit the water short of the Neptune, two others are to the right and several just seem to skim over the deck. One is a hit, as shown by the miniature ball of fire which appears to the observers toward the thick armor of the ship's stern. There is doubt about another shot, which seems to disappear somewhere near the after turret.

In twenty-two seconds' time from the first salvo another is on its way. There is no response from the Neptune. It looks as if the enemy were completely taken off guard by the fact that the American ship opened fire at 15,000 yards. Nine thousand yards is supposed to be the battle range. The British vessel had orders to begin firing at that range. She is coming closer full steam.

The second salvo from the American ship is seen to do more damage than the first. Geysers of water are spouting up about the ship, while some of the shots seem to have fallen in a mass into the after turret of the Neptune. Almost before the effect of the shots can be seen the next salvo from the Utah is on its way. The shots are falling true and presumably of fire which appears to the observers toward the thick armor of the ship's stern. There is doubt about another shot, which seems to disappear somewhere near the after turret.

Almost before the effect of the shots can be seen the next salvo from the Utah is on its way. The shots are falling true and presumably with terrific effect. The fire control system is working like a charm.

Mast Appears Frail.

From high up on the skeleton mast the spotters can see the effects, and the delicate mechanism and visual apparatus are working splendidly. It is seen that the British fire control station which is directing the firing is on the frail mast of the ship. It is known to be armored, but the mast appears so frail as to fail if it is hit, although it is realized that hitting the mast is difficult.

Salvo after salvo is [illegible] from the destructive missiles from the Utah when there comes the echo of a thunderous roar from the Neptune, followed by splashes of water to the right and left and in front of the Utah. The enemy has opened fire. Eight bright flashes tell that a salvo of eight shots is on its way. The after turret guns are silent. This confirms the suspicions of the American officers that they have been smashed out of commission before the ship was ready to show them at all.

The range is now to the enemy's liking for the missiles are striking nearer home, although the salvos do not come with the short intervals of the American salvos. The British broadsides come at nearly a minute apart, giving the Utah's guns, firing every twenty-two seconds, two shots to one.

The H. M. S Neptune

A shell lodges in the end belt armor of the Utah and explodes, shattering the part of the deck near it. Another shell hits amidships. One of the turret bases is slightly damaged, but the majority of the British shells are falling far beyond the ship. The British seem to be purposely aiming high. There is a terrific explosion in the after skeleton mast which shatters the tubes and sprays the decks fore and aft. Another explosion in the skeleton mast under the fire control station, then another. The enemy is firing purposely at the targets presented by the skeleton structures. The shells explode on the slightest contact.

The duel of shot and shell is now on in earnest. Salvos pass one another in transit and the damage which is being wrought aboard the British dreadnought reminds officers of the shooting at the San Marcos by the battle ship Delaware earlier in the year. Another turret aboard the British ship is silenced. The ten American turrets are still blazing away full blast.

It is evident that the early action is all in favor of the American ship. The theory that it is the first blow that counts in modern naval warfare is being borne out, for the British ship, with her shorter battle range, never really had an opportunity of meeting the Utah on even terms, two of her turrets being out of commission within a few minutes after the first shots from the American dreadnought had been fired.

The British appear to be directing high explosive shells against the skeleton masts, but although the basketlike structure is ripped away in many places the masts do not fall. A chance shot from the American ship has meanwhile hit one leg in the tripod mast aboard the Neptune and the whole system has come down.

The height of the American skeleton masts has enabled the Utah to deliver very decisive blows at the longest ranges so far possible to gun fire. But now, as the ships have drawn closer, there is serious danger of the fire control station at the masthead becoming untenable. The high explosive shells, purposely directed against the large basketlike targets, are beginning to cause terrific havoc. The electrical apparatus and delicate visual apparatus are becoming affected by the hostile fire, and it is feared that the high structures may at last be brought down and possibly hamper the operation of the turret guns.

As the advantages which these masts gave at the early stage of the battle begin to wane the preparations for conducting the remainder of the battle from a lower armored station are hurriedly made. The Germans direct all their fire control from an armored station below. The possibility of being obliged to follow these tactics aboard the American ship has already been taken into consideration.

But the skeleton masts, even when abandoned, will continue to form targets for the high explosive shells of the enemy. Projectiles that otherwise would have passed harmlessly by the ship will explode when they strike the structure. The American officers, now that the usefulness of the masts is gone, would like nothing better than to throw them into the sea.

Meanwhile high explosive and armor piercing projectiles are doing their terrific damage aboard each ship, tearing first a huge gap in one vessel, then endangering the vitals of the other. In a few minutes all will be over and one of the ships will be a helpless mass.

Which is the vessel destined to become a scrapheap for the bottom of the sea? Is she the Neptune or the Utah? Has the tremendous advantage of the first blow and the effective fire of the American ship been too great for the Neptune to overcome, or has the British vessel finally succeeded in turning the tide in her favor? The American officer conducting the theoretical battle does not let it proceed that far. He is only interested in the technical problems involved. His mind has dwelt long enough on the effects of the firing to solve several important problems to his own satisfaction.

First, he has reinforced his opinion that the advantages of the skeleton masts are of prime importance, especially in the early part of the battle, and that this advantage is too great to sacrifice.

Second, he has found that the tripod mast of the enemy, although a smaller target, has a better chance of coming down, as a chance shot displacing one leg puts out of commission the entire fire control system.

Consequently he is against abandoning the military masts and against the advocates of the British system.

Large Target for the Enemy.

But there has been one phase of the battle which has particularly impressed him and provided him for thought. It is the frequency with which the skeleton structures have been hit by highly explosive battle shells. He finds, he must admit, that the masts form a large target for the enemy's guns.

"Couldn't these masts be smaller, though not lower, and yet give the advantages which we do not wish to lose?" he reasons. "Would it not be possible to have a frailer structure and one not so easily hit by the enemy? Is it necessary to have two of these masts, or would it perhaps be better to have only one?"

With one mast, he reasons, the initial advantage of the first blow at long range would still be there, and yet the target would be but half the size. The officer following the theoretical battle is deeply interested in the possibilities of gaining an advantage by having one instead of two of the skeleton masts.

But he realizes that perhaps his judgment may not be the best. Naval officers engaged in the very important work of training modern dreadnoughts to fight are far too broadminded to believe that their judgment is necessarily without fault. They are open to all the suggestions and arguments and objections they can get from men in a position to advise with them. Consequently the idea of one skeleton mast will be very thoroughly threshed out before this officer will be convinced that he is right in advocating it.

This idea of one mast instead of two is now commanding serious consideration by ordnance experts and officers who have to do with gunnery in the navy. There is a pronounced opinion on the part of some officers in favor of the plan. It will be further discussed, and if the best brains in the service favor it it will be adopted. If it be adopted it will result from the quiet but effective brain work of those who make it a business to teach the American dreadnoughts how to fight.

THREE QUEER BIRDS.

THE trumpeter bird is the ragpicker of the woods and swamps of Guiana, where he is always at work at his trade, with his stomach for a pack and his bill for a hook. He performs a most useful but most extraordinary service, devouring a perfect multitude of snakes, frogs, scorpions, spiders, lizards and the like creatures. But this terrible bird can be made perfectly tame.

On the Guiana plantations he may be seen fraternizing with the chickens, ducks and turkeys, accompanying them in their walks, defending them from their enemies, separating quarellers with strokes of his bill, sustaining the young and the feeble and waking the echoes with his trumpet while he brings home his flocks at night.

The trumpeter is as handsome as he is useful. Noble and haughty in his aspect, he raises himself up on his long, yellow gaitered legs and seems to say, "I am the trumpeter, the scourge of the reptiles and the protector of the flocks."

In Southern Africa there is another great exterminator of reptiles, the snake eater or secretary bird, a magnificent creature that attacks the largest serpents, making a shield of his wings and a sword of his beak. The name of "secretary bird" is derived from the plumes projecting backward from its head, which look like quill pens carried behind one's ear.

In South America, in the very neighborhood of the trumpeter's home, there lives the Kamichi or Kamiki, which wears a sharp horn projecting from its forehead and a murderous spur upon each of its wings. With these three weapons the serpents that he attacks are powerless against him and are easily put to death.

The secretary bird, the Kamichi and the trumpeter form a valiant and useful trio. The trumpeter has two merits above the others—the ease with which he can be domesticated and his musical talent.

The natives have a saying that he has swallowed a cornet. Whether promenading or war making, he fills the air with his trumpet calls, and at the sound of his voice of brass the reptiles take to flight.

TIT-BITS

SCENE IN INDIAN COURT

The noon hour struck, tolled by the rail gong at the treasury door, and in a moment all things came to a standstill. The Mohammedan lawyers, the village Moslems loitering about the court, even Mosuffer Khan with his guardian policeman, all reverently withdrew. A moment later they reappeared on the wide concrete veranda outside the window at my left. There they laid down their prayer mats, and, standing first with devoutly bowed heads and hands folded, they murmured the noon prayers of the prophet's religion; then knelt, still praying, and made obeisance, prostrating themselves before Allah the Merciful the Compassionate.

The reverence of their devotion was perfect and wholly free from the self-conscious shamefacedness that I should have felt, supposing that I, the magistrate, had suspended court to pray there in public. Islam is a man's religion; there is something fine in the faith that takes men out to pray before the eyes of all, on the wide veranda of a police court.—Atlantic.

HAD 'EM AGAIN

A company of motion-picture actors and actresses gave a performance of "Chantecler" on the grounds adjoining the suburban studio of a film manufacturing company. A little later one of the actors, out for a walk, came upon a man seated by the roadside and weeping bitterly.

"What's the matter?" enquired the sympathetic player.

"I'm one of the patients at the sanitarium for bugs over yonder," explained the despairing one. "Yesterday the doc said I was well—boo-hoo—and that I could leave in a day or two. And what do you suppose I saw this morning? Roosters and hens six feet high and talkin' just like humans! If I get away from that sanitarium in ten years, I'll be doing mighty well."—Lippincott's.

ON MARRIAGE OF COUSINS

London, Nov. 18.—Much Food for thought for cousins who contemplate marrying one another, is to be found in a little brochure just published, entitled "On the Marriage of First Cousins," by Miss Ethel Elderton, a co-worker with Professor Karl Pearson at the Galton Laboratory for National Eugenics, London University.

The guiding principle in forbidding marriages between near kin, such as uncle and niece, aunt and nephew, or grandparent and grandchild, is their resemblance. Miss Elderton accordingly set herself to determine whether cousins are as much alike as any of these pairs of relatives. From nearly 6,000 pairs of cousins, she endeavours to measure the degree of resemblance in health, intellect, success, temper and temperament. The likenesses are found to be greater in intelligence and health, and least in temper.

Roughly speaking, the general resemblance between cousins is about half that between brother and sister, and practically the same as that shown by statistics of uncles and nieces and of aunts and nephews. "If the undesirability of marriage between certain degrees is founded on the closeness of resemblance between individuals," says Miss Elderton, "the law which forbid the marriage of uncle and aunt with niece and nephew should also restrict the marriage of first cousins."

The offspring of cousin marriages appear to be particularly liable to be deaf mutes. "There seems little doubt that if there is ay deaf mutism in a stock, a cousin marriage, even when both parties are free from the disease, is most dangerous to the offspring."

HYPNOTIZED, BECOMES INDIAN ON WARPATH

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 18.—James Caldwell went to a party, and, for the amusement of the company, an amateur hypnotist hypnotised him.

The events that followed make it seem probable that the amateur hypnotist suggested to Mr. Caldwell that he was a tipsy Indian on the warpath.

For, yelling madly, he broke out of the house and briefly terrorized the neighbourhood of Sixth and Calder streets. Before his shouts and wild threatening gestures, children, prickly with gooseflesh, with chills running up and down their short spines, fled in all directions.

"A wild man! A wild man!" they screamed, proving the accuracy of even the adolescent observation.

Scared by Caldwell's antics, two horses ran away, their hoof-beats timing a warning chorus, "Look out! Look out!" Finally Young-Man-on-a-Tear, or Big-Bear-on-the-Rampage, or whatever Caldwell imagined himself to be, made an earnest effort to carry into captivity two highly respectable female palefaces. Shrieking, they ran into a saloon, the nearest refuge, where two railroad brakemen were enjoying their evening beer. They captured Caldwell, and despite his fierce struggles, sat on him.

It happened that a physician who was called from his house across the street, had studied hypnotics, and recognizing Caldwell's condition, brought him out of the hypnotic state.

SAYS WOMEN LOSE $500,000 AT POKER

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 18.—That Chicago women lose and win nearly half a million dollars yearly in "family" games of poker and that one prominent woman of the North Side recently gambled away $7,000 and precious heirloom diamonds in one evening were charges made by an attorney who has undertaken an investigation. Unfair methods in dealing are common, he asserts, and he ridicules a statement made to the police some time ago that these games on the Sherman road are innocent attempts of friends to pass an evening pleasantly.

Not much time is wasted, either, in the choice of players, according to this attorney, and men who have made livings by their cleverness at cards have been among the ones to lose heaviest in the "family" games. These "profesionals," though they lose thousands, says the attorney, never say a word publicly. One recently went into bankruptcy rather than protest, although he is said to have had conclusive evidence that cards in the game were flagrantly juggled.

There is a story that one man who recently lost his all fell in love with a young divorced woman, who had soon to be celebrated he will recoup his fortune.

Paper on King Lear.—The ministers of the city and their wives will meet socially this evening at the Y. M. C. A. parlours, when Rev. Harper Gray, B.D., of old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, will read a paper on "King Lear." During his visit in Peterborough Rev. Mr. Gray will be the guest at St. Andrew's Manse.

ABOUT TABLE LINEN

Too little care is exercised by the modern housewife where her table linen is concerned.

It should be remembered that linen gathers mildew very easily and should never be allowed to remain in a damp place or next to a plastered wall.

Our grandmothers used to wrap table linen in blue paper to keep it from turning yellow.

It is well to keep linen in a dark place.

Table and bed linen will last much longer if stored in proper condition.

Those articles which are not in constant use should be rinsed free of starch and dried in the shade.

If there is a slight breeze it will assist in softening the fibre so that it will be less likely to break when put away.

Linen stored with starch in it is apt to crack in time or acquire creases which are difficult to remove.

INSULTED

A strapping German with big heads of perspiration streaming down his face was darting in and out of the aisles of a Philadelphia department store.

His excited actions attracted the attention of all the sales-persons, and they hardly knew what to make of it. A hustling young man of the clothing department walked up to him and asked, "Are you looking for something in men's clothing?"

"No," he roared; "not men's clothing; vimmen's clothing. I can't find my vife!"—Lippincott's.

RULES FOR CALLING

"Certain stated calls must be made. The calls at least once a year upon those on your calling list; the call after having been entertained at dinner, or luncheon, or at an evening entertainment; the call of congratulation after a marriage, or a birth; the call of condolence upon those in sorrow; the call of enquiry at the house of illness; the call upon the newcomer into your neighbourhood, or upon a stranger who has been introduced to you by a friend; the return call, when a first call has been made upon you—none of these can be evaded. A first call should be returned within a week, or at longest a fortnight; a dinner call, or, in fact, any others of those named, should be paid promptly.

CELLULOID

Celluloid is one of the commonest substitutes for ivory, bone, hard rubber, coral, etc., and it is used for hundreds of common, everyday articles. Very few persons know just how this substance is manufactured or stop to realize that it is a first cousin to nitro-glycerin, one of the best known high explosives.

Celluloid is a compound of celluloise, or vegetable fibrin, reduced by acids to gun cotton. Celluloise is found in all vegetable life, particularly in young plants. It is a starch-like substance. Cotton fibre is cellulose to a large percentage.

After the cotton fibre is cleansed it is submerged in acids which quickly reduce it to cellulose in the form of a thick, pasty, semi-transparent mass. Camphor is added to further thicken it, and the required colouring matter is thoroughly mixed in, after which the celluloid is molded by heat and pressure into various useful and ornamental objects such as combs, boxes, pins, paper cutters, ornaments, etc.

Celluloid is moulded while hot, and, being of a very inflammable nature, the temperature is absolutely essential in order to eliminate the danger of igniting it. In the old days the mixture was heated by high pressure steam, but later electrical heaters have been devised which eliminate the leaky steam pipes, the transmission heat losses and the danger of explosion.—Newark News.

EVOLUTION OF TRAVEL

For $100, which includes a Pullman berth, the easterner may be transported to Southern California, winter playground for the nation's grownups. There one may bathe in the open sea the year round. Avoiding high altitudes, if the traveller wishes he may go by way of New Orleans, live for a day in the atmosphere of old France, and drink the superb coffee a New Orleans chef can make. He may go by way of Albuquerque and see Indian villages which are relics of a civilization coeval with Columbus; he may visit old Santa Fe, a corner of America with the ancient colouring of the Orient. Or he may go by way of the home of the Mormons, wonderful in its distinctive type of modern civilization. The automobile, the aeroplane, the telephone, or the telegraph is scarcely a more remarkable illustration of human progress than this trip of four days in a Pullman, with almost every physical comfort to be had in a prosperous home. Fifty years ago it took a good part of a year.—Collier's Weekly.

BISHOP MACKAY-SMITH

Bishop Mackay-Smith was not merely the able administrator of ecclesiastical affairs in one of the large, important dioceses of the Episcopal Church, but he was one of the best of citizens, and his passing will be deeply and generally mourned in this community. He had a close student of the theory and practice of municipal government and his active endeavour to secure an improvement in political and social conditions was not confined to mere pulpit exhortation and denunciation. He proved a tower of strength to such organizations as the Civic Service Reform Association and the Law and Order Society, for he did not spare himself in pleading the cause or in useful and fruitful co-operation with their executive committees.

Doctor Mackay-Smith was a faithful and self-denying officer of the Church militant. He cherished the highest ideal of the function of a church in the broad and generous tolerance of his views he had little patience with a narrow and constricted sectarianism. Moreover, he set a cheerful and courageous example in uncomplaining fulfillment of his exacting round of duties in defiance of the anguish of his physical afflictions. Most men would have succumbed utterly to the painful ailment which the Bishop bore in silence with unflinching heroism. A man of means, he never was content to contribute merely his money to any good cause in which he was interested, though a typical instance of his generosity was his gift of his own house to be the permanent episcopal residence of the diocese. But when he gave, he also gave himself, and it was largely because he was incessantly labourious for the welfare of others that his active and useful early career was prematurely terminated.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

MODERN MUSIC

Walter Damrosch, at a dinner in Chicago, praised the music of Debussy.

"I see with gratification," he said, "that Debussy has had a great success in his score for 'The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian,' the mystery play that he and Gabrinele d'Annunzio have just produced together in Paris.

"I am glad that Debussy's music is succeeding. It is such beautiful, simple lemusic, music a child can understand. It isn't like most of our modern music, which puzzles people to death."

Mr. Damrosch smiled.

"A lady at a musical at Long Branch," he said, "approached a celebrated violinist and exclaimed enthusiastically:

"'I so admired that last piece you played! It had a kind of wild, free beauty—an eerie madness that thrilled me to the heart. Was it, may I ask, your own composition?'

"'Madam,' the other answered coldly, 'I was putting a new E string on my violin.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOT HIS CUE

George L. Shronk, one of Atlantic City's champion life guards, was discussing his profession.

"Funny thing happen to us guards sometimes," said Mr. Shronk. "A funny thing happened to my friend Tim last week.

"A society belle from Spruce street went in the water wearing one of those fashionable transformations or wigs. A big wave went over her, and when she came up the transformation was floating out to sea. She turned and ran to Tim.

"'Oh, save my hair!' she yelled; 'Save my hair!'

"'Pardon me, lady,' says Tim. 'I'm a life-saver; not a hair restorer.'"—Washington Post.

WHY WET SHAMPOOS ARE INJURIOUS TO HAIR

(Guide to Beauty)

"Avoid wet shampoos, if you would have soft, lustrous hair and plenty of it. More or less 'free' alkali in shampoo mixtures robs the scalp of its necessary oil, and this, in a measure, causes hair to grow dull, brittle and unmanageable.

"The dry shampoo is rapidly gaining favor because of its cleansing and invigorating effect on both hair and scalp. If 4 ounces either of orris root or corn meal and 4 ounces of therox ful sprinkled over the scalp, then brushed well through and out of the hair, all traces of dust and dandruff will be removed, and the hair will take on a silken sheen and richness of color impossible by any other method."

PRESCRIPTION THAT SOON KNOCKS RHEUMATISM

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. The poisons that settle in muscles, joints and back, causing severe pain, must be dissolved and expelled from the system or there can be no relief. This prescription from a noted doctor is said to be working wonders all over the country. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it here last winter. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whisky. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed-time." Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one ounce, sealed, yellow package.—Globe Pharmaceutical of Chicago.

The rations for a day provided by Japan for each of her soldiers in the field are three little bags of rice and a bunch of dried vegetables. This means rice for all three meals and a vegetable addition for dinner.

Making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before has been outdone in the culture of silkworms in the Philippines. Ceylon silkworms which produced cocoons of a bright golden yellow, have been crossed with the Japanese breed, the result being a pure white cocoon giving a crop of silk nine times a year, compared with the usual two or three crops of the Japanese and Chinese worms.

RUBBER IN RHODESIA.

The vast extent of Northern Rhodesia renders it impossible at present to estimate even approximately the extent of the rubber areas, but such evidence as is available points to the great prospective value of this asset. The indigenous rubber of Northern Rhodesia has been strictly protected since 1903, with the result that the number of young vines shows a great increase. A comparatively small portion of Northeastern Rhodesia has recently been inspected by Mr. De Josselin de Jong, an officer of the Agricultural Department, who estimates that the five rubber forests which he visited covered in the aggregate upward of 21,000 acres, find that the number of existing vines was approximately 800,000. He reports that each of these five areas would make a complete estate capable of carrying 200 vines to the acre under cultivation.—Consular Report.

Figg—Well, how do you like having a place in the country? Hasn't the exercise done you good? Fogg—Yes, and so has the real estate agent.—Boston Transcript.

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a feeble thing the germ is a fact. If the germ could be made to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. ...n't be avoided. They are in the air we ... the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the ... of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard ... the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. DOCTORS AFRAID TO OPERATE

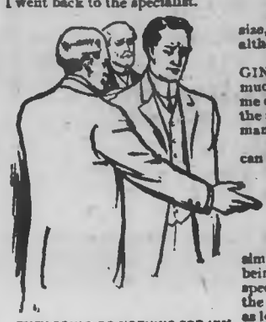
Could Not Remove Stone From The Bladder. Gin Pills Enabled Him To Pass It.

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist.



THEY COULD DO NOTHING FOR HIM

He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

Isn't it wonderful? Just think of these simple pills, that even children can take, being able to perform what the greatest specialists in Canada could not do. Surely, the days of the miracle have not passed away, as long as we have Gin Pills. These wonderful pills dissolve stone in the bladder or kidneys because they are a natural solvent for uric acid, which causes calculus. If GIN PILLS are not sold in your neighborhood, send us 50c. for a box or $2.50 for 6 boxes. Sample free if you write us mentioning this paper. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Dept. AUNT MARY'S TURN

By HAROLD THORNTON

Aunt Mary Jackson was a farmer's widow, and she ran the farm with the help of a hired man. She had always been given credit for being a sharp, keen woman. People had said that she knew twice as much about business as her husband. The husband was industrious and hardworking, but the buying and selling was left to her.

When Aunt Mary found herself a widow and entirely responsible for her actions, she determined to make money a little faster by speculation. She had read the papers very closely, and from time to time she had seen opportunities to turn a bit of cash to good advantage. The good old soul believed whatever she saw in the papers, and she believed all advertisers honest. One starting out with that belief is sure to come across lots of good things.

In due time Aunt Mary came across the advertisement of the Blue Jacket silver mine. It was a new discovery. A prospector who had gone to the mountains to hang himself kicked up $10,000 worth of silver ore with his right foot. Ten minutes' examination proved that he had stumbled upon several billion dollars in treasure. Silver ore could be dug out by the cartload and carload, and the Blue Jacket Silver Mining Company had been formed. Smith and Jones, and Brown and Perkins, were in the company, and the whole world knew them for honest men.

The Blue Jacket proposed to let a limited number of people in on the ground floor. Aunt Mary was one of them. She sent for a "free book" and when it came the picture of the president of the mine was on the cover. He had the look of a foxy swindler, but his vanity was stronger than his prudence. Aunt Mary held her breath for five minutes over the startling promises made in the book, and then sent on $100. When she received her stock certificate, it looked so nice that she sent $200 more of her cash. That would give her dividends at that rate of $75,000 a year, according to the book, and she would be quite satisfied with that. We all know how these swindles work. This one worked the usual way. When all the fools in the country that could raise enough money had been gathered in and the swindlers had made a fortune the postal authorities stepped in. That gave the swindlers a chance to pack up their money and walk away in different directions.

It so happened that two or three of the swindled were after the president of the Blue Jacket Company so closely that he thought it better to go into the country for awhile than to take a steamer to Europe, which is the usual way. Aunt Mary read of the affair in the papers. She had been robbed of her $300. It hurt her to lose the money, but it hurt her to have been taken in and done for. The worst of the matter was that she had advised others to grab a good thing, and of course she would be held responsible. She was gritting her "paws" on the rascals, when a stranger knocked at the door. It was a summer day. If she took summer boarders, and if she had none at the time, he would like to come for a couple of weeks. He was a business man from the city, whose nerves had been shattered by too close application.

Aunt Mary took a look at the man and invited him in. She took another look at him and made him a low rate, and added that he could depend upon fresh eggs and unwatered milk. At the dinner table she scanned his face for the first time. He said he was connected with a Bible publishing house, but she didn't believe him. After dinner, Mr. Coles, as he called himself, sauntered about. He inspected the wagon shed, the barn, and the milk-house, and finally came to the smoke house. As he was peeping in he was given a push, and the door slammed and locked on him.

It was Aunt Mary who had done the business. When she had her man, she brought out a chair and sat down by the door.

"I want to know what this means?" was shouted at her from inside.

"Why, you are locked in the smoke house," was the reply.

"But what for?"

"So that I can have a talk with you. If you wasn't locked in you might run away as soon as I began to say things. And, too, I want you where the constable can find you when he arrives."

"Woman, what do you mean by this outrage? Don't you know I can send you to prison for it? Open this door at once."

"How does the Blue Jacket Silver mine come along these days?" she asked.

"I know nothing about it. I told you I was in the Bible line. You have my suit case in the house. Is this a put-up job to rob and murder me?"

"Oh, no. Have you got a Bible in the suit case?"

"No."

"You ought to carry one with you. Are you still dealing in ground floor silver stocks?"

"I have never dealt in stocks. Have you mistaken me for someone else?"

"Not at all. I am one of your ground floor clients. I have your little book. You are the human skunk whose picture is on the cover. The Lord sent you to me."

"My good woman, you are making a terrible mistake, and one that may cost you every cent you are worth. In the name of the law, I demand that you unlock this door."

"Shoo, now, but what a hurry you are in. I don't expect the constable for an hour yet. How much boodle did you get away with? I suppose there'll be a reward offered for you and in that way I'll get my $300 back."

"Look here, woman," said the man inside, "it's as I have told you. You are mistaking me for someone else. Perhaps you are not to blame, but do not carry things too far. I know nothing of your $300, but if you will let me out I'll give you that much money to go on. I have an important engagement."

"What are Bibles selling at now?" quietly asked Aunt Mary in reply. The man began to yell for help, and kept it up for ten minutes. Then he saw it was no use and hoarsely asked: "Woman, what do you want?"

"I want my money back and $200 for my worry."

"You shall have it."

"I want $50 for the people around here who invested on my advice, and $25 extra for each one."

"You shall have it."

"It's kinder like compounding a felony and leaving a rogue to go free, but mebbe the Lord will send you to other victims. I don't like the idea of getting my money back and leaving the other folks suffer, and leaving you as large to grow fat on their cash, but I must take care of myself."

The strapping hired man was beckoned to come closer, and when the smoke-house door was opened, he took the Bible man by the collar and led him to his bedroom, and saw him count out the money for Aunt Mary, and then escorted him to the highway.

"About speculatin'?" said the woman, as she sat with the money in her hand; "no, I guess not, any more. I think I'll stick to taters and corn. The next swindler might not come this way."

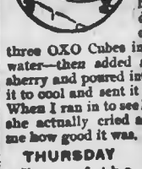
INTERESTING EXPERIENCE OF A TORONTO LADY

I have seen OXO Cubes advertised a great deal and thought I would try them, so I bought a 25c. tin and found them so satisfactory that I am going to tell the women of this city how I used them.

MONDAY - night, we were going to the theatre, so I filled my brass kettle and alcohol lamp and left them in the den with the box of OXO Cubes. We were tired and cold when we returned from the play. But in a moment, the water was boiling, the OXO Cubes were dissolved, and we were sipping the most delicious "beef tea" I ever tasted. And how we did sleep that night!

TUESDAY morning, my small daughter would not take her milk. I was at my wit's end when I thought of the OXO Cubes. I brought out the box, let her open one of the cartons, and showed her how to stir in the OXO with the milk. She said it was "goody" and every morning now she wants her "brown milk."



WEDNESDAY There is a dear old lady next door who has been ill for a long time. I wanted to make something to tempt her appetite. So I dissolved an ounce of Gelatine and three OXO Cubes in a pint of boiling water—then added a wineglassful of sherry and poured into a mold, allowed it to cool and sent it to my poor friend. When I ran in to see her next morning, she actually cried as she tried to tell me how good it was.

THURSDAY Two of the children do not come from school at lunchtime. I do not care to give them meat sandwiches—yet want them to have something more sustaining than bread and sweets. OXO Cubes solved the problem. I now spread OXO Cubes on bread and know that the children have a nourishing and appetizing luncheon.

FRIDAY Just as we had finished dinner, who should walk in but my broth'r and his new wife! While I was warming the rest of the dinner, I had the kettle boiling, dropped in a few OXO Cubes and brought in two big plates of steaming OXO soup in a jiffy. After dinner, my new sister asked "how did you make that delicious soup?" When I told her it was OXO Cubes, she was so pleased to know that she could have soup like mine.

SATURDAY I came in from doing my Sunday shopping all fagged out—and I could feel myself coming down with a dreadful cold. I made a cup of OXO and felt so rested that I added two OXO Cubes to another cup of boiling water and drank that. When I awoke Sunday morning, I had not a sign of a cold. I am finding new uses for OXO Cubes every day.

SUNDAY We were tired of the everlasting eggs or chops for breakfast so I tried to see what I could do with OXO Cubes. I fried a small onion cut in slices, with a little apple, in butter until brown—then poured in a teacupful of stock made with two OXO Cubes and boiling water—and added a tablespoonful of curry powder, a little chutney and finally minced cold beef. I stirred it for fifteen minutes over the fire and served in a hot dish, garnished with boiled rice. Everybody was delighted with my OXO creation.

OXO Cubes are the greatest advance in food invention since men began to eat and women learnt to cook.

J. Hayden-Clarendon tells with glee a story his father told him back in his boyhood days in Cork. "And it happened," he says, emphatically.

It seems that a man was on trial for murder, and the only chance his lawyers saw for him was to get a verdict from the jury for manslaughter. In order to make this sure, they picked out one of the jurymen and "fixed" him. He was to get a certain sum of money if he held out for manslaughter and secured that verdict from the jury.

The case was tried and the jury retired for deliberation. Two hours later they filed into court. They returned a verdict of manslaughter.

Later, in a secluded corner, the money was turned over to the bribed juror.

"Did you have a hard time?" the lawyers asked.

"Hard time!" he exclaimed. "I should say I did. All the rest wanted to acquit him!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

This wave of temperance which, according to the president of the British Medical Association, is converting our decanters into water bottles, recalls the days when the association of water with dinner tables would have caused a shock, even in political dining circles. There is Sir Wilfrid Lawson's story of the Cumberland dalesmen, for example. One of these worthies chanced to die, and Sir Wilfrid hasarded a guess at the cause: "Well, I suppose he died of drinking."

"Yes," was the reply; "leastwise I've never heard anything to the contrary."—London Chronicle.

"If two women call together, it is the older of the two who makes the signal for departure by rising or giving a significant glance to her companion.

"There is no need for great formality of conduct in calling. The well bred woman who is at ease in her own house need have no fear of appearing awkward in the house of another. To come in quietly after leaving her card at the door; to speak, first of all, to her hostess, then to recognize the other persons present; to chat with those nearest the seat she has taken, avoiding topics which might lead to argument or discussion; to take her cup of tea and bit of cake or sandwich; to leave at the end of twenty minutes, or half an hour after shaking hands with her hostess, and bowing farewell to the others present—here is all that constitutes a call. A little familiarity robs calling of any terrors it may possess for the bashful, or for those unaccustomed to society; and one learns it is just the old-time 'afternoon visit' with a new name."—Woman's Home Companion.

Not So Anxious.—Mrs. Fitsbrown (to her husband)—"Do you remember, dear, that before we were married you always offered me your left arm?" Fitsbrown—"Yes, I wanted to have my right hand free. You see, I had a lover's fear that someone would try to take you from me, and I always kept it in readiness for defence." Mrs. Fitsbrown—"How sweet. But how is it that now you generally offer me your right arm?" Fitsbrown—"Well, I am not so afraid of losing you as I was."

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS CASE PROVED TO THE HILT

R. R. Hall Produces the Evidence Against Whitney Government and the Electors See, Feel and Handle for Themselves---The Candidate Springs a Surprise--Education Grievances Get a Thorough Airing.

"Caught with the goods!"

"Well, what do you think of that!"

"What a fool that fellow Whitney must think we are!"

Candidate R. R. Hall sprung a surprise at Middleton's school house last night and these were some of the remarks it caused.

Sir James Whitney and his supporters have been saying that there are no bilingual schools in Ontario, so last night Mr. Hall brought along the evidence in the shape of a bilingual first, part second, second and third reader.

Exhibit A. In the Case.

They made an interesting display, Mr. Hall and Mr. Gordon referred to them in terms of the law as exhibit A in the case against the Whitney Government.

"Sometimes," said Mr. Hall, "it is permissible to distrust your own ears, especially in an election campaign, but you've got to believe your own eyes. Sir James Whitney says "there is no such thing as bilingual schools in Ontario." Attorney General Foy says according to Ontario law, bilingual schools cannot exist. Well, tonight. I have brought along the evidence that they do exist."

"Here," said Mr. Hall, spreading the exhibit on the table, "are the text books—not all the text books, mind you, but enough to show that Premier Whitney is not telling the truth when he says there are no bilingual schools in Ontario. I don't ask you to take my word. Come up and look at the books."

Which the audience did at the close of the meeting, when the talk comments, with which this report begins, were uttered.

"Where," asked one of the electors, "does it say 'authorized by the Education Department of Ont.?'"

"Oh, here it is, all right," said Chairman Middleton, "twice on the cover and once on the title page." And so that point was settled.

A Lesson in French.

"I bought these books," explained Mr. Hall, "in the ordinary way at a bookstore. They are not sold stealthily. No secret is made of selling them. The only place they want to keep them dark is on the public platform, where they are denying that there are bilingual schools in Ontario. The set I have here is a new one. I only wish I had an old set that had been used in one of the bilingual schools at Sturgeon Falls or somewhere else. It would show you the French side well thumb-marked and the English side clean and unused.

"I look," continued Mr. Hall "on page 6 of Premier Livre Lecture—that means First Reader you know—and I find this lesson: Ici est un chat. Cest un gros chat. Je puis voir sa queue. Je puis voir ses pattes.

"You will excuse my French," said Mr. Hall smiling, "but the English of it is. This is a cat. It is a big cat .I can see its tail. I can see its claws."

"The difference between the cat in this French first reader and Sir James Whitney is that you don't see Premier Whitney's claws on this bilingual education question. He keeps them carefully out of sight. He declares that he hasn't any."

Putting the Children in Wrong.

"These poor French children," said Mr. Hall, "are in wrong from the start. When I look over these text books I find that the English is not even passable. It is clumsy and stilted. The translation is not idiomatic."

"This outfit of text books," continued Mr. Hall, "is being used in three hundred bilingual schools in Ontario. The children in these schools are not getting a decent elementary education. They aren't getting a fair chance at a working knowledge of English, the language of this province, the language of Canada, the language of the British Empire, the language of business and commerce all over the world."

"Sir James Whitney cannot have spoken in ignorance of this matter. Public school inspectors have been repeating right along that there were schools in Ontario where not a single word of English was spoken. He doesn't need Dr. Merchant's report to tell him that. Sir James can take his choice of dilemmas. Either he is trying to deceive the people or the Education Department of his Government is a system of incompetence, neglect and cowardice, that is going from bad to worse."

"You can't knock a language into a child with a handspike," said Mr. Hall. "He's got to learn, and gradually at that .I stand for a system of education which will provide everybody in this province with a good elementary education and a thorough knowledge of English. The Whitney government seems to stand for neither."

How Lindsay Served the Bluffers.

Among other topics of the campaign Mr. Hall dwelt at some length on Adam Beck's transparent bluff of extending the Hydro-Electric to Eastern Ontario, and particularly of bringing it to Peterborough.

"Hydro-Electric coming to Peterborough!" said Mr. Hall. "Well, I've heard of Barnum's circus coming to Peterborough. Hydro-Electric going to do wonders! What are they going to do?"

"Mr. Adam Beck has swam into notoriety and social distinction on the back of Niagara Falls, but his fine scheme doesn't wear. The people are beginning to pick holes in it."

"Mr. Beck went with his scheme to Lindsay," said Mr. Hall. "Who opposed it—J. D. Flavelle, John Carew, and G. H. Hopkins, K.C. Mr. Hopkins, as strong a Conservative as breathes, riddled Adam Beck's plan. He wants you, said Mr. Hopkins to the people of Lindsay, to mortgage yourself for $230,000 to buy out the Lindsay Light, Heat and Power Company, and then for another $70,000 for repairs and improvements. Mr. Beck was anxious not to have the Lindsay people vote on the two by-laws together ,his idea being to have the $230,000 by-law passed first and then Lindsay, having got in that far, would vote theother $70,000 on the principle of sending good money after bad.

"But Mr. Beck's deep laid schemes went wrong," said Mr. Hall. "Lindsay turned down the by-law by 1100 to 400. The same thing would happen in Peterborough. If Adam Beck, or anybody else, can show that they can put in power to Peterborough at a cheaper rate than we get now, I am willing to lend my assistance."

A Live Man in Front.

Mr. Gordon devoted some of his attention to the policy of a demonstration farm with a local demonstrator for West Peterborough.

"We want to cut out the expense of a course at the Guelph College," said Mr. Gordon. "A demonstrator can give us all the pointers right here on the spot, and he will be ready at your call, like a doctor or a druggist, or any other emergency member of society. Wisdom with a night-bell, so to speak."

Mr. Gordon favoured farmers' institute lecture two or three times a week in Peterborough and a special course for market day, Saturday."

"I would like to see some of the rooms in our schools used for instructing the girls in domestic science. One way and another we're not getting half enough out of our education plant, for which fault, the Whitney government is entirely to be blamed."

"What we want," said Mr. Gordon, "is somebody to put things through. R. R. Hall is the livest man we have had out in front for years. He never lies down, on anything. He has untiring energy. He is jam full of ideas. Whether in Opposition or on the government side, he can do more for West Peterboroug than any man I know. We have in him the making of another Provincial Secretary of Ontario."

The meeting closed with cheers for the king and the candidate.

FOR BALDNESS

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that we will refund your money for the mere asking if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead.

We are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We believe that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—the Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

CABLE LAYING

The work of laying the underground cable, carrying the Bell Telephone Company's wires, is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the work will be completed in a few days. The cable was first laid on Hunter street, and the work of laying it on Aylmer street has now commenced. The conduits were laid several months ago along Hunter, Aylmer and Charlotte streets. The completion of this work will do doubt ensure the removal of a large number of telephone poles, thereby improving the appearance of the streets so served.

A MONTH IN GAOL

Italian Wife-Beater Receives Thirty Days and Some Good Advice From Magistrate Dumble

HE IS REPENTANT

Antonio Mascarrion came up for sentence this morning for brutally assaulting his wife, and was given one month in gaol at hard labour. "I am letting you off very lightly this time," said Magistrate Dumble, in passing sentence. "You appear to be making up your mind to do better, and we hope you will. When you are released from gaol go back to your wife, just consider what you have been doing, and then you again lose your temper, go away somewhere and sit down and think it over before striking or beating your wife. We don't allow people to take the law in their own hands in this country. It was only the other day that a man was sentenced to ten years in penitentiary for doing the very same thing as you did, and you may consider yourself fortunate in getting off so easily." Mr. Thos. Mitchell acted as interpreter during the trial. It is understood that when Mascarrion was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble yesterday afternoon, he pleaded over his property to his wife.

REPORT OF GAME

Examiner Has Arranged for a Complete Bulletin Service Covering To-morrow's Big Rugby Final

SEE SPORTING EXTRA

The Examiner has made arrangements for a complete report in connection with the big Varsity-Argo Rugby game to-morrow, for the possession of the Gray trophy, and the championship of Canada. The full story of the play will be given in a sporting extra, which will be issued immediately after the last returns are in. Interest is at fever heat over the game. A special despatch to the Examiner this afternoon says:

TORONTO, NOV. 24. — Confident that to-morrow's game between Argos and Varsity, for the Dominion championship will be the greatest Rugby day in the history of Canada, every effort is being made to keep the field of the big Varsity stadium in such a shape that both teams will have no favours, so far as playing conditions are concerned. For the last twenty-four hours it has been raining and snowing alternately but the ground is kept thoroughly dry, six tons of straw acting as a huge protecting tarpaulin. If elements suddenly change and the ground starts to freeze, many tons of water-washed sand will be substituted for the straw, and used as a blanket, to be scraped off when the game starts. The weather will not make any difference to either team's chances, said a Rugby expert this morning generally speaking. The betting odds this morning are about seven to five, in favour of Varsity. It is expected that between twenty and twenty-five thousand will see the game.

BEATTIE CONFESSES

Young Virginian in a Signed Statement Admitted That He Had Killed His Wife

ELECTROCUTED TO-DAY

Special Wire to The Examiner.

RICHMOND, VA., NOV. 24.—Rev. Mr. Fix, and another spiritual advisor, who attended Henry Clay Beattie, in his last hours, have given out the following signed and witnessed confession by Beattie, just previous to his execution:

"I, Henry Clay Beattie, Junior, desirous of standing right before God and man, do confess my guilt of the crime charged against me. Much that was published concerning the details was not true, but the awful act, without the harrowing circumstances, remains. For this action I am truly sorry, and, believing that I am at peace with God, and am soon to pass into His presence, this statement is made."

After spending a fairly restful night Henry Clay Beattie, Junior, was electrocuted, at 7.23, this morning, for the murder of his wife, on July 18th last, when he appeared with her body in an automobile and the story that she had been shot by highwaymen. The whole trouble with his wife arose, it came out at the trial, in Beattie's associations with Beulah Binford.

With the taking of Beattie's life by law, his six months' old boy is an orphan. The child was about a month old when Mrs. Beattie was murdered and is now being raised by her parents ,who live in Delaware.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENTS COST MANY LIVES

Japanese Destroyer Founders in Gale and Forty-five Lose Lives--Ten killed in Gasoline Explosion in Liverpool ---Austrian Steamer Goes Down With Sixty on Board ---Two Killed in Railway Collision.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TOKIO, NOV. 24. — The Japanese destroyer, "Karusamo" floundered in a storm off the Japanese Coast to-day and forty-five of her crew perished.

A COLLISION.

MACON, GEORGIA, NOV. 24.—Engineer Brantley, and an express messenger were killed and several passengers from the northern States and Canada, south bound, for the winter, were injured, when two passenger trains collided, near here, this morning on the Southern Railway.

STEAMER WRECKED.

VIENNA, NOV. 24.—Word was received here this morning of the wrecking of the Austrian steamer, Roumania, nar Rovigno, to-day, with the loss of sixty lives. Fierce storms have swept the coasts of the Adriatic ,this week, causing tremendous damage to shipping.

EXPLOSION OF GASOLINE.

LIVERPOOL, NOV. 24.—In a fearful explosion of gasoline, wrecking J. Bibby & Sons' cake mills to-day, ten men and women, employees, were killed and fifty, more or less, injured. Extra police were summoned to control the mobs of anxious relatives.

It is now stated that thirty-three lives are lost and seventy-five persons injured in the wreck of the Bibby Mills, which are now burning fiercely.

BANK SHAREHOLDERS WAIT UPON GOVERNMENT

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, ONT., NOV. 24.—Representing hundreds of shareholders and depositors, all over Ontario, a strong deputation waited on the Government this morning, askig for Governmental relief for both classes of creditors of the Farmers' Bank. The chief argument put up was that the issue of the certificate to the Farmers' Bank was illegal, under the Bank Act, therefore the Government should immediately recompense the depositors and relieve the shareholders of the double liability. Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, made his first official answer to a deputation, saying this was a most distressing case, and promised careful consideration by the Cabinet. The delegation left confident that a Commission would be appointed.

ANOTHER CHAMPION FOR LABOUR

Here is what the Toronto World of yesterday, says of the brazen attempt by the Whitney Government to "roll" Allan Studholme:

HAMILTON'S LABOUR MEMBER.

Conservatives in Hamilton are not displaying the possession of great wisdom in their opposition to Mr. Allan Studholme. Mr. Studholme has gained the respect of his fellow members in the legislature, and even those who most deplore his prolixity are unable to deny his courage, his courtesy, or his consistency. He represents labour in his solitary seat, because the parties have more influence with labour than labour has with the parties. But Mr. Studholme is an evidence of what is possible when the labour men get together and agree to ignore the parties.

The Conservatives of Hamilton have decided to get together and ignore the labour men. The object is to extinguish the most independent and outspoken critic the legislature has had for years. We may not always agree with the grounds of Mr. Studholme's criticism, but at least it must be recognized that they are not partisan, nor actuated by a partisan spirit. It is a sign of weakness that the Conservative party should resent such criticism and its suppression will be no gain to the party either in the house, or the country. Sir James Whitney has too many loyal slaves now. A few honestly frank and fearless freemen could do him no harm, and freemen are scarce in either Liberal or Conservative ranks.

Vote for R. R. HALL and give the only labour member of the Legislature a capable and enterprising assistant.

What Studholme lacks in knowledge of the law, R. R. Hall can supply.

Vote for R. R. HALL and fortify the workingman's cause with first-class legal ability.

"NO UNLAWFUL INTENT" SAYS JUDGE WINCHESTER

Messrs. Warren and Stratton Are Acquitted of Conspiracy—Acted in Good Faith Says Judge.

END OF THE CASES

TORONTO, Nov. 24. — Messrs. J. R. Stratton and J. J. Warren are not guilty of conspiring, together with others, to represent to the Treasury Board that a sum not less than $250,000 had been bona fide paid by subscribers to the capital stock of the Farmers Bank, with intent to unlawfully obtain a certificate permitting them to do business.

This is the finding of Judge Winchester, in his judgment handed out yesterday, following the trial of Messrs. Stratton and Warren before him last week. There is still an indictment against these two men in the High Court which will be disposed of at the next sitting of the Criminal Assizes, when the presiding judge will have to decide whether this acquittal by Judge Winchester is equivalent to an acquittal of the standing indictment.

WERE PERSONAL LOANS

Summing up the case, Judge Winchester says in his judgment:

"The Crown produced evidence in support of this charge, the main witness being W. R. Travers, formerly Manager of the Farmers Bank. In his evidence he stated that he applied to Mr. Warren, then Manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Company, for a personal loan of $80,000, and with the authority of the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank, who endorsed without recourse, certain promissory notes given by subscribers for shares in the bank, he offered a number of these notes as security for such advance. Subsequently he found that he required $20,000 more, and he offered Mr. Warren additional security for such a loan; that these were personal loans; that, upon the checks being made out for the amounts thus borrowed, he, Travers, directed the same to be paid to the Bank of Montreal, so that they could be utilized for the purpose of depositing it with the Finance Minister to assist in making up the deposit of $200,000 required by the Bank Act.

ACTED IN GOOD FAITH

"He stated that there was no agreement with Mr. Warren or with Mr. Stratton as to any unlawful act, or had they any knowledge of any wrongdoing, in connection with these deposits; that so far as they were concerned it was a pure matter of business with them for which they received interest and a bonus. This bonus apparently was divided up with the Manufacturers Life Association, who advanced $55,000 of the $80,000, and received 55-60ths of the interest and bonus. He stated that Mr. Warren and Mr. Stratton had acted in the utmost good faith in the transaction and had no knowledge of the improper use that was made subsequently by him of the moneys received from the Trusts & Guarantee Company, and with the subscription list.

"At the conclusion of the hearing I felt that the evidence was insufficient to warrant a conviction under the charge before me, but in consequence of counsel for the Crown referring me to a number of cases to support his contention I reserved judgment for the purpose of considering the same. I have since then considered not only these but a number of other cases bearing upon the question at issue."

JUDGE CITED CASE

Judge Winchester cited the case of Rex. v. Brailsford, 75 L.J., K.B. 64, and the case of the Dominion Salvage & Wrecking Company v. the Attorney General of Canada, 21 C.C.R., 73, but concluded that the evidence in the pending case was entirely different from that given in the cases cited.

"While the cases cited showed a wrong-doing with intent to commit an offence," the judgment concludes, "the evidence in the case before me shows no intent on the part of the defendants to do an unlawful act. I, therefore, find the defendants not guilty of the charge against them upon the evidence produced before me."

A NEW FEATURE FOR EXAMINER

The Examiner is published on the principle that nothing is too good for its readers. The public will be reminded of this principle to-morrow, when they find another new feature in the Saturday edition of The Examiner, in the form of a newsy, gossipy, well-written letter from Paris, about Fashion's dictates, furnished by the "Agence Lucey," Paris. Every woman in Peterborough will want to read these letters, which will be published every Saturday.

HIS ESCAPE WAS NARROW

James Robinson, a G. T. R. Section Man Came Near Going Under Moving Train

HAD RIBS BROKEN

Special to The Examiner.

OMEMEE, NOV. 23.— What might have been a fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the junction. James Robinson, a section man, attempted to board the pay car at the switch, when, without warning, the train started. Robinson was knocked down and dragged several yards before the train was stopped. Owing to the timely intervention of Sam Carelve, the engineer, was made aware of the accident. The unfortunate man was brought to the village and medical aid was summoned. Two or three ribs were broken and he suffered severely from shock.

THE SATURDAY NIGHT RALLY

The electors of Peterborough are reminded that there will be the usual big Saturday night rally in Mr. Hall's committee rooms, George street, to-morrow evening and that a cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend and hear the discussion on the important issues of the day. Short, vigorous, pithy addresses will be the order of the evening, and the rally promises to be the most interesting meeting yet held in Mr. Hall's interests.

Application Was Granted

OTTAWA, NOV. 24.—Last week an application was made to Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, for the lease of the water-power rights at dams four and eight on the Trent Valley system, capable of producing 2,000 horsepower each. Yesterday, the Minister, Hon. Frank Cochrane, granted the application in spite of the protests of interested parties who represented certain bondholders, who were afraid the incursion of the Hydro-Electric would impair their securities.

Funeral Of Mr. W. J. Martin

The funeral of the late W. J. Martin of 253 Dalhousie street, took place this afternoon.

The Rev. Jas. R. [illegible] officiated at an impressive service at the house at 2 o'clock, after which, at 2.30, the funeral cortege proceeded to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

A large number of relatives and friends, including many out of town visitors, assembled to show a last mark of respect to a citizen who was universally beloved. In passing beyond ,he leaves a memory of charitable citizenship, and the relatives have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends. The floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. Albert Martin of Toronto and Robert and William of city (sons of the deceased) and Messrs. Jeffrey of Fenelon, Wm. J. Martin and Will Comstock of city (nephews.)

Worth Knowing.—Money has its limit. It will not buy brains, common sense, virtue, character, peace of conscience, forgiveness of sins, love, freedom from death or eternal life. In other words, the pursuit of money means that all the best things in life are left unattained while chasing after a very doubtful good.

POWER HOUSE COMPLETED

The Canadian General Electric Company's new power house, at the water works dam, is now completed, and this morning commenced generating power for the Company's plant, the current being used for this purpose for the first time this morning.

STORMY PASSAGE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., NOV. 24.—Hours behind her schedule, the S. S. Lusitania made port to-day. The officers report the heaviest gales in years. Several passengers were badly hurt, being tossed from their berths during the rough passage. One night all onb oard, trying to sleep, had to lash themselves to their berths.

WHAT IS A BILINGUAL SCHOOL?

A correspondent asks—"Will you kindly inform me what a Bilingual School" is?

According to the conditions in Ontario, under the Whitney government, a bilingual school may be defined as one in which two languages are used, and neither one taught.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Mr. Borden, Mr. Monk, and other government members of Parliament meet Sir Wilfrid's charge that there are discordant and contradictory elements in the Borden cabinet to an unconstitutional degree, by the retort that Sir Wilfrid took Mr. Tarte, a Conservative, into his cabinet. But there's a difference. Mr. Tarte recanted his Conservatism because he could not stand the crookedness and corruption of his party associates. He accepted the policy of the government of which he was made a member. Mr. Tarte was, besides, a loyal Canadian, not a traitor to British sentiments and ideals. True, Mr. Tarte may have said of the cabinet, as Mr. Borden and Mr. Borden remind us, "They fought like blazes" in the cabinet; but they didn't fight long. Mr. Tarte had his own views upon the fiscal policy—he disagreed with his colleagues and got out. That's where Mr. Borden differs. He retains elements that are discordant—except as regards clinging to office—and so maintains the polychromatic cabinet complexion—a beautiful blend of orange and bleu and red—republican—the embodied tri-colour, the new flag under which loyal Canadians are asked to live.

WHAT IS "POWER AT COST?"

The Review calls upon the electors to vote for "Peck and people's power at cost." "Power at cost" is a very pretty catch phrase, but what is the cost? It appears that the installation of Hydro-Electric power equipment is costing the city of Toronto nearly five million dollars. With interest at four per cent. upon the borrowed money, that means $200,000 per year to be met by the taxpayers, and $200,000 more for sinking fund, a total of $400,000 annual levy on the taxpayers. But that is not all the cost. The taxpayers will still have to pay a stiff rate for electric light and power. There is no doubt whatever, that under private corporations—monopolies and heartless corporations you will be told—the city of Peterborough is today getting light and power at a cheaper rate than Toronto is getting hydro-electric service, and the citizens do not have to put their hands in their pickets to pay a big levy of taxation for interest and sinking fund, besides.

Just on the eve of an election the Whitney government is waking up as to power in eastern Ontario—it wants to get votes at cost by giving "power at cost." Will it do more than promise? Will it deliver "the goods?"

The Whitney government has been in power seven years, and in that time has spent four or five million of the people's money to give Niagara power to Western Ontario, and only thinks of Peterborough and Eastern Ontario at election time.

The Whitney government has been in power seven years, and has never thought of improving the Workingman's Compensation Act, so as to give the man who suffers from injury a square deal, till goaded to it by reproaches of their neglect, we have some half-hearted promises.

The Whitney government has been in power seven years and has permitted the teaching of English to be crowded entirely out of hundreds of state-aided Ontario elementary schools. Now, we don't get even promises; we get, on the other hand, the monstrous statement of Sir James Whitney, that there is no such thing as a bilingual school in Ontario.

The Whitney govemrnment has been in power seven years and has maintained the muddle of our assessment laws, and Sir James Whitney shirks responsibility and turns the matter commission. He even refuses to permit the municipalities to decide for themselves what form of taxation they prefer—refuses to give them permission to decide whether or not they will impose differential assessments on lands and improvements.

The sudden interest in power for Peterborough—full of "promises" at election time—of the Whitney government, is to be taken with a grain of salt.

To swap power for votes might not be so bad—and it might not be so good when the cost is counted—but to swap votes for promises is a horse of another colour.

Shakspere tells us that "at lovers' perjuries Jove laughs," and politicians' promises at election time may well invite a smile.

POLITICAL PARADOXY.

We had a fine spectacle at Ottawa on Wednesday afternoon, something that should bring delight to the ultra-Protestant people of Ontario. While Hon. R. L. Borden, head of a Tory government, and Premier of Canada, temporarily retired from the House to to receive instructions from Mr. Bourassa, Nationalist, with whom he was closetted in his private room for an hour or more, the House was led for the time by Hon. Mr. Monk, another Nationalist.

Both Mr. Bourassa, who issues his commands to the Premier of Canada, and Mr. Monk, who becomes deputy leader, are antagonistic to British ideals, and both advocate policies, that tend to disrupt Confederation and humiliate Canada in its imperial relations. Neither of them have, in view of their views, any legitimate place in the government of a British dominion. Yet we find the one dictating to the Premier of a British Dominion what he shall do, and the other leading the House and declaring the policy of the Conservative party of both colours, orange and blue.

Mr. Monk, as leader of the House, pro tempore, spoke, and as usual he said something; he said something that should make delightful reading for the ultra-Protestants of Peterborough and Ontario, who, with a mighty thrust, put out Sir Wilfrid for doing just what Mr. Borden, through the mouth of Mr. Monk, condemns Sir Wilfrid for doing.

Mr. Monk said, without mincing words, that Sir Wilfrid was justly punished for the loss of the confidence of Quebec, which was due to his (Sir Wilfrid's) "failure to guard the interests of his Quebec compatriots," and Mr. Monk thus categorically enumerated Sir Wilfrid's crimes against Quebec and the religious and racial rights of the French in Canada—

Sir Wilfrid did not guard the racial and religious rights of the French in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid failed to get justice in the matter of French Separate schools for Manitoba.

Sir Wilfrid betrayed Manitoba; and whatever rights the French element in Manitoba enjoyed in regard to the Roman Catholic religion in the schools, were due to the indulgence of the Manitoba, government—(Tory.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had denied bilingual schools to the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, when he organized them.

This is Mr. Monk's indictment.

It will be noticed, and not denied, that the ultra-Protestant element of Ontario condemned, sentenced, and executed the sentence upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier for doing, and being exactly what the French Conservatives of Quebec condemn him for, not doing, and not being.

No wonder Sir Wilfrid fell. He committed two exactly opposite sets of crimes at once. A man that can destroy at the same moment, and by the same course of action, the rights of Protestantism and Catholicism, is a dangerous man.

The circumstances, emphasize the absolute mockery and hollowness of the Ontario cry against Laurier, because he was un-British, because he was betraying Protestantism, when these same Ontario extremists are sleeping in the same bed with the Quebec extremists, who are condemning Sir Wilfrid Laurier because he is too British, and because he is not only fair but actually truckles to Protestant prejudices.

The very Conservatives who condemned Laurier because he is a Catholic and a Frenchman, now gloat over his condemnation for not being a loyal Frenchman and a true Catholic. The Review, in its report of the remarkable utterances of Mr. Monk, as referred to above, flames out gleefully in a fat, three-column heading—"Quebec will never forget or forgive Laurier" and chuckles in the body of the report thus—

"The Minister of Public Works, (Hon. Mr. Monk) was in fine form, (note the praise for the no-navy, Nationalist, deputy-Conservative leader) and took a rise or two out of Sir Wilfrid Laurier" (and note the gloating over the Nationalist condemnation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for doing practically what the Orange Tories of Ontario condemned him for not doing.)

It's a very pretty political paradox.

WHITNEY GOVERNMENT AND THE SPOILS SYSTEM

Mr. N. W. Rowell, the Liberal Leader, in the course of an address, dealt thus with the relation of the Whitney Government to Civil Service Reform, and its aplication to the spoils system.

Civil service reform, he declared, should greatly improve the character and efficiency of our civil service. It would make public service attractive to the best young men of the Province just as it has done in England. It would remove our civil service from the baneful political influence to which it may now be subjected. It would increase the independence of the members of the Government and of the Legislature by relieving them from the pressure and embarrassment of patronage hunters and the spoils faction in the parties. It would improve the character and tone of the political life of the country, and this would be one of its most important benefits.

How Spoils System Worked.

The working of the spoils and patronage systems, Mr. Rowell pointed out, was well illustrated by the result which followed the election of the present Whitney Government in 1905. In obedience to the demands and clamour for office on the part of their supporters, he said, they summarily dismissed all the Justices of the Peace, all the License Commissioners but three, and all the license inspectors of the Province, and appointed their own friends to the number of thousands to fill these offices. Many Justices of the Peace who had filled the position with credit to themselves and were honoured and respected by all classes in the community were summarily dismissed. Six hundred and sixty-two new appointments were made by the Whitney Government in the year 1905 exclusive of Coroners, Justices of the Peace, notaries public and commissioners for taking affidavits. Of the 704 civil servants in office December 31, 1904, 165 were dismissed or resigned within the next three years.

Inspector Hastings Case.

That these dismissals were to serve party purposes rather than the public interests was well illustrated, he said, by the case of Mr. Thomas Hastings, License Inspector in Toronto, who was summarily dismissed, after having performed the duties of his office efficiently and impartially for some nine months after the Whitney Government came into power.

Mr. Rowell quoted the testimony of Mr. J. W. Flavelle in his letter resigning the License Commissionership, as to the efficiency and honesty of Mr. Hastings' service and the reasons for the Commissioners relinquishing their task. And he read the Toronto News' comment upon these proceedings, which charged that 'the spoils faction' exercised 'a controlling influence over Mr. Whitney and his associates."

A Minister Involved.

Subsequently, Mr. Rowell continued, political influence in the administration of the law became such a scandal that the Government was compelled to appoint a special commission to investigate. "There are those," he said, "who claim that the full report of the commissioners has not yet been published. The evidence given before the Commission disclosed that the Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, had personally interviewed one of the commissioners in the endeavour to secure a license from the Board for an applicant who had a record of fourteen Police Court convictions against him," and again Mr. Rowell turned to the Toronto News, a supporter of the Government for a scathing criticism of its 'surrender to the baser element of the party.'

"The time has come," he said in conclusion, "when in the interests of efficiency in our public service, decency in the manner of appointments to public office, and the general progress and welfare of the people, we should endeavour to put an end to the spoils and patronage system, and give to the people a genuine measure of civil service reform, and on that policy we confidently appeal for your support."

HAZEN'S GREAT POINT.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In the course of his speech on Tuesday night in the House of Commons, Hon. J. D. Hazen, the new Minister of Marine and of the Naval Service, made a great point, as he thought, and aroused the enthusiasm of his party friends, by asserting that the late government had received the tenders for the construction of the naval vessels on May 1 last and that nothing was done in regard to them, although five months elapsed before the late Government went out of office.

Mr. Hazen read that statement from an official document of record. Had he read the whole record, as it was his duty to do, he would have given the House the reason for the delay. It is a reason which has been stated time and again. The delay was because:—

The Liberal Government did just what the Borden Government proposes to do.

It consulted the Admiralty.

The plans and specifications were, of course, the plans and specifications approved by the Admiralty because one condition of the agreement reached was that the vessels of the overseas navies should be of the same type as those of the British navy.

But when Mr. Brodeur was in England this summer in attendance at the Imperial Conference he discussed the details of the tenders with the officials of the Admiralty, and it was only when he came back to Ottawa on July 12 that he was in a position to be able to tell his colleagues what the Admiralty officials had agreed upon.

And when it is remembered that Parliament met six days later and that the dissolution followed 17 days later, every fair minded man must admit that Mr. Hazen's complaint falls to the ground.

Any delay which there was in the awarding of the contracts was due to the fact that the Admiralty had to be consulted, and was consulted.

Mr. Hazen ought to make these facts clear to the House at the earliest opportunity.

ALIENATING A HERITAGE.

(The Globe)

When Ontario's autocratic Premier declared that there would not be another acre of public land given to any railway, or other private corporation, there was general approval by both Liberal and Conservative newspapers. The burden of alienated land is about the heaviest that can be imposed on any people, and is entirely out of proportion to the benefits conferred on the recipients. How the Premier with his conspicuous lack of economic understanding, could decide so wisely was not easy to understand, but the public accepted their good fortune without question. But the man who does not understand is always dangerous, no matter how often he may blunder into wise courses. This was impressed by the surprising announcement that the Premier supposed to possess strong will, firm determination, fidelity to pledges, and honest intentions had decided to give two million acres of land in the clay area to the Canadian Northern Railway Company. This was a rude shock to those who were confidingly satisfied with the Premier's pledge. Two million acres is an area equal to the States of Delaware and Rhode Island. The grant is not only the alienation of a great heritage, but it imposes on the future settlers the burden of the alternate block or checker-board system. The future settlers will bear the burden of making their own land valuable and adding value to the idle holdings of the favoured corporation.

The grant is in the farming area, which is the future hope of Northern Ontario, and it will obstruct development by the worst possible burden. No condftions as to settlement are imposed, so the recipients can wait for the pressure of the necessities of the people. If Sir James Whitney possessed economic discernment a connection would be suspected between his prodigality with the people's heritage and his determination not to allow municipalities to shift taxation from the builder and cultivator to the idle holder. But it is not likely that he can discern any similarity between these two unfortunate features of his policy. Both are adopted in accidental impulse prompted by instinctive antipathy toward all improvement. Both the tax collector and the corporate owner are made to discourage the settler because the Premier has inherited a tendency in that regard. When it was charged by Liberal newspapers that the heritage of the people of Ontario was in unsafe hands the idea was held up to ridicule by all the Government's defenders. The Premier's promises and declarations had a reassuring effect, and many were inclined to conclude that they had been needlessly alarmed. But when pledges are thrown to the winds and a vast area is given away without even a reference to them, it becomes apparent that public alarm was by no means groundless. No new pledges of fidelity have been given, but if they were they would be as valuless as the old. In the light of this experience it is obvious that there is no safety except in restoring the heritage of the people to trustworthy stewards.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Hydro-Electric scheme may be a good thing in some respects, but it is rather costly for Toronto, which will have to pay nearly five million dollars for its civic "juice." When the citizens have to pay interest on five million dollars and pay for their electricity besides the "snap" is not so evident.

ABOUT CALVES

From Farm and Dairy.

Sell your bull calves as soon as you have decided on the number of beasts you can carry. Always keep a heifer in preference.

Though the rule is that to milk after the third calf is the best many cows give as good a yield with their first as with later calves.

It is surprising what a change in the appearance of the cows and of the dairy is presented when the flanks of the milch cows are clipped.

Keeping a record of the yield of the cows enables you to decide quickly which of the progeny to keep on the place and which to send to the butcher.

Even when a man grows all the feed for his stock and its use to him is nil it is not good business to feed it to cows that are not making a profit.

It is a good rule to sell the cow after she dries off from the fourth calf. Unless she is a specially favorite she is then better selling than holding.

If you are breeding to keep the heifers, see to it the cows are healthy and good milkers. Remember the calf cannot give the cow anything she has not herself.

Another Jarry Starts Operations In Toronto---Police Intervene

TORONTO, NOV. 23.—When Joseph Reopel, a young French-Canadian coming from Ottawa, walked into the Detective Department this forenoon to register a complaint that he had lost a gold watch, he failed to get out again. Detective Tipton, being an expert at remembering faces, recalled the man as one he had seen in the garage of the McLaughlin Motor Car Company, attempting to purchase a machine two weeks ago, when the detective was working on the Jarry case. Reopel's actions created some comment at the time, and a hint from the salesman that he might be "a second Jarry."

Reopel has lived up to the prediction, and enlarged upon it, the variation being that Reopel was caught by the authorities before he had time to marry the girl on whom he had been lavishing his fictitious wealth for the past ten days.

Wedding Two Weeks Hence.

Reopel came to this city ten days ago. He met Flora Garner, of 242 George street, shortly after, and, according to the police, was to have married her in two weeks. In the meantime, Reopel has purchased an automobile, jewelry, clothes and furs, to the value of several thousand dollars, and paid for them by issuing false checks, and by the giving of promissory notes payable on demand. The man is wanted in Montreal for similar conduct.

Six charges were brought against Reopel in this morning's Police Court before Magistrate Denison, and the goods which had not already been sent to the girl's address, had been ordered to be sent there.

He ordered furs to the value of $1,310 from the Sellers-Gough Company, a check being tendered in payment. The auto bought from the McLaughlin Company was valued at $1,100, and the jewelery, diamonds, and silverware from Eyrie Bros. were paid for by a $261 check. These three amounts he is charged with attempting to obtain by fraud.

Three charges of stealing are brought by the Robert Simpson Company, M. Thaeler and Son, 344 College street, and Gordon Wilson, of 164 Jarvis street. From Simpson's Reopel obtained an opera cloak for the girl, a manicure set engraved with Miss Garner's initials, a chatelaine, and several yeards of silk, the payment being a check for $81.94. From Thaeler and Son, the girl was enriched by a silk dress, an opera cloak, with several other garments ordered to be cut up. Here a check for $225 was offered to cover future purchases as well. From Gordon Wilson, it is a charge of stealing a raincoat, a razor, and a hat.

Wears Good Clothes.

Reopel is a young man, quite French in appearance, was stylishly dressed, and when he appeared before the police was making use of the alias Almond. He has been living at 103 Ontario street.

Reopel was brought into court and charged with the three latter cases of procuring goods by false pretences. He pleaded guilty to all, and upon the request of the Crown Attorney was remanded a week to make inquiries as to his past.

SEEN AND HEARD

FALLING OPTIMISTICALLY

"John D. Rockefeller, an insurable optimist, will take in good part the Supreme Court's decision against Standard Oil," said a Cleveland neighbour of the great millionaire.

"Mr. Rockefeller," he resumed, "is very proud of his optimism. I have often heard him, indeed, liken himself in optimism to the man who fell from the tower of a skyscraper.

"This man was an optimist whom nothing could dishearten. He worked in a skyscraper's twenty-eighth story, and one afternoon while admiring the glorious view he lost his balance and fell from the window.

"Loud cries of horror from the street below at once filled the windows of every floor of the skyscraper with agonised spectators. To these horror-dropped swiftly past storey after storey, shouted in cheery tones:

"'All right so far!'

"And, by jove, his optimism was justified," concluded the Cleveland man; "for he alighted, quite uninjured, on a mountain of excelsior piled in the court."—Washington Star.

LOST TO THE ENGLISHMAN

Nat Goodwin called me on the phone upon my return to New York and said he had a friend who wanted to promote the sale of a cigar. I asked him if it was a good cigar. He replied that he did not know, but urged me to meet his friend with him and investigate.

We met at the Lambs Club. The cigar man produced a few samples and passed one to Nat.

"I have about decided," said the cigar man, "to give a coupon with each cigar."

Just then one of Nat's English friends joined the group and the proposition was explained to him. He listened intently as the cigar man continued, directing his conversation to the comedian:

"With each cigar, you understand, I will give a coupon and when you have smoked three thousand of them you may bring the coupons to me and exchange them for a grand piano."

Nat sniffed the cigar, pinched it gently and then replied: "If I smoked three thousand of these cigars I think I would need a harp instead of a grand piano."

There was a burst of laughter in which the Englishman did not join, but presently he exploded with merriment:

"I see the point," he exclaimed, "being an actor you have to travel around the country a great deal and a harp would be so much more convenient to carry."—Newspaperdom.

THE PATIENT WAITER

Professor W. Lawson Tall, apropos of the new serum cure for hay fever, said at a medical banquet in Denver:

"This cure is the result of patience, the result of much patient toil. Indeed, when I think of the patient waiting involved in the perfecting of this cure, I am reminded of Dr. Bob Sawyer's anteroom.

"Dr. Bob Sawyer stepped proudly into his anteroom one day. There were quite eight or nine persons there. And Dr. Bob, looking from one face to another with compliance, said:

"'Well, who comes first? Who's been waiting the longest?'

"'Here, Doc—that' me,' said Snip the tailor, rising and flourishing his unpaid bill. 'I've been waiting over 18 months.'"—Washington Star.

MATCHLESS

"When Edwin Gould took up the manufacture of matches seven years ago," said a New York banker, "his friends were a good deal amused, and many a joke was cracked at Mr. Gould's expense.

"I remember one June day, at an open-air luncheon at Tuxedo, a superb four-in-hand dashed round a turn of the road and we all looked up from our strawberries to admire it.

"'That is Mr. Gould's team,' said some one. 'Who is driving?'

"'Mr. Gould, himself,' a lady answered. 'Doesn't he look striking on the box?'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OLD PROBLEM, NEW PLACE
(Montreal Herald)

Dr. Spoule has been in Parliament since 1878. By careful reckoning that gives him thirty-three years, the lifetime of the Macdonald, Abbott, Thompson, Bowell, Tupper, and Laurier ministries.

He is starting to learn French.

Better late than never, and never too late to mend.

But if Dr. Sproule never started to learn French before, why not?

And if he has started to learn it now, what becomes of the reasons he didn't start long ago?

How does Sovereign Grand Master Sproule of the Orange Order, think the campaign against bilingual schools is going to be fanned into flame if it is known that Mr. Speaker Sproule of the House of Commons is running a private school of his own to become proficient in French?

Still, good luck to his effort. There is much in French a man of his mature years would enjoy reading.

Bulletin The Market Prices

(Lindsay Post.)

Deputy-Reeve Dobson at last night's council meeting stated that he had a proposition to make, which he considered, was a good one. It had been suggested that if the market clerk on Friday afternoons, would get the prices of different produce from the merchants each week and put it on the blackboard in the market hall it would tend to improve our market.

Some people attended the market to sell and did not know what produce was worth and the same applies to the buyer. As a consequence, there is a tendency to hold up on the market. It would be a great advantage on Saturday morning to have a guide for buyer and seller and would improve the market.

Deputy-Reeve Dobson introduced a motion embodying his suggestions. It was seconded by Ald. orn and carried

COOL CURING ROOM

From Farm and Dairy.

A properly equipped cool curing room is a good investment at any cheese factory. Some of the greatest defects in Canadian cheese are due to lack of good facilities for properly maturing it. The best cheese makers cannot make good cheese if the curing room is not well insulated and fairly cool. And yet the total number of factories in Ontario with cool curing rooms in connection therewith is only about 50.

A cool curing room for an average cheese factory, say one making 1,000 boxes of cheese in a season, would cost $500. The saving in shrinkage would pay the principal in five years. This does not count the saving in loss due to cuts for inferior quality. A cut of one-sixteenth of a cent a pound for heated cheese would more than pay the interest on the money invested.

In order to be well within the limit let us say that the shrinkage due to lack of a cool curing room is one pound a box and value cheese at 10 cents a pound. On 1,000 boxes, for five years, the shrinkage would be 5,000 lbs. This would be worth $500. And the shrinkage is more apt to be two lbs. than one. A premium of one-sixteenth of a cent a pound for higher quality would give 10 per cent interest on an investment of $500.

An opportunity to get back capital in five years with good interest right along is too good a thing to miss. At the same time, our cheese industry would receive a great impetus due to the greater demand which would be sure to follow improved quality.

Sociable.—A regiment of soldiers were in camp, and a young Scotch recruit was put on sentry go outside the general's tent. In the morning the general rose, looked out of his tent and said to the young man in a stern and loud voice: "Who are you?" The young man turned round smartly and said: "Fine! oo's yersel'?"

BAILEYISMS.

Peterborough, Nov. 24, 1911.

Sir.—Permit me to say, in reference to the correction re the "aged woman charged with insanity," in the civil, medical, legal or any other juris-prudence, in England or any other country but Canada, there can be no charge of insanity, simply because there is no such thing. Sanity is like density, or purity, a question of degree, requiring all the skill and exactness of the chemist, and not knowing the functions of the organs of the brain, it is impossible to separate physical manifestations from mental. And who can judge of what so little is know? The symptoms of hunger, thirst and disease may be delusions, but are quite natural and sane.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"I was surprised the other day to hear the lady-who-always-knows-somehow speak slightingly of a certain kind act on the part of a neighbour of ours.

Molly also noticed the unaccustomed tone in the lady's remarks.

"Why, that isn't like you, big sister," she commented.

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow flushed up a distressed pink. "I shouldhope it wasn't," she said, "I am ashamed of myself. I have a confession to make, and this is a good chance to make it. I don't like that woman and I can't seem to be just to her. I know she is kind hearted, wonderfully clever, well educated, agreeable and everything estimable; yet I see everything she does through blue glasses. I know I ought to admire her and like her, yet I can't. I try to control my feelings and hide them, but every once in a while they break out in something like what I just said. Won't you please consider it unsaid?"

I wonder how many people could say in all honesty that they never felt towards anyone just as the lady-who-always-knows-somehow confessed she felt towards this person.

Not many, I fancy.

'Fess up, now. In all your acquaintances, isn't there some excellent and worthy persons to whom you feel an unaccountable dislike and to whom you know in the bottom of your heart that you do not do justice?

You hear of so me kind act of his and you catch yourself looking f or an unworthy ulterior motive.

When someone expresses a liking or an admiration for this person, you feel a quick pang of hurt as if the eulogizer had said something unkind or detrimental to you.

You hear of some mistake made by somebody with which this person is connected, and you immediately assume that all the blame belongs to him.

You are told of some good fortune that has fallen to his lot, and at once you try to find a chance to suspect that he obtained it by undesirable means, or else you hunt diligently for a fly in the ointment, are not content until you find it, and point it out to others.

And yet none of these things is the least bit like you. You despise such feelings on principle and you never do feel that way towards anyone else.

What is it, then, that makes you feel this way? ?

I wonder.

If the lady-who-always-knows--somehow will pardon me, I'm going to make a suggestion. I'll frankly confess I found it by searching out the blackness of my own heart, so perhaps she will forgive me for asking her to share the stigma of the explanation.

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow admitted that her scape-goat was a most estimable and much praised person. I think, if you will examine, you will find that yours is of the same nature and never by any chance a generally disliked, discredited and worthless person.

How does it happen?

Aye, there's the rub. How does it?

Would it make it any easier for you to conquer and crush out this unreasoning dislike if you admitted to yourself that it had its deep, unacknowledged roots, not in the unavoidable queerness of human nature and your own particular eccentricity as you may have been flattering yourself—but right in two of the meanest, most hateful and most shameful of human passions—envy and jealousy?

If it wouldd, I am pretty certain you may give yourself that help.

Ruth Cameron

WHAT VICTORIA COUNTY COUNCIL THINKS OF PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

(Lindsay Post)

The Roads and Bridges Committee of the County Council met at two o'clock, Wednesday, Nov. 22, with Mr. Graham in the chair.

Discussion in connection with the Pigeon Creek Bridge was invited, after the finding of the Committee to view the bridge, was read.

Mr. Callan said in reference to the bridge that it was a dilapidated floating structure, about one mile and one eighth in length and over about eight feet of water. It benefitted but seven or eight people, who could go around by Cowan's bridge, a few miles farther up, if they desired.

Few in Victoria County could be benefitted, and yet Victoria County was to pay 3-10; County of Peterborough 3-10, and Peterborough 4-10th of the cost.

Mr. Cornell said it was a leading road and it would be a calamity not to build it. It could not be done away with. The raising of the water at Buckorn has made the water higher at the bridge and logs floated against it and had smashed it in several places.

Mr. Byng said it had repeatedly broken, particularly since the raising of the water.

Mr. Callan was sure that the raising of the water had caused most of the damages and therefore the government should be called on for some assistance.

Mr. Michael was present at the deputation and recalled how they had been sure the bridge should be built, yet they should reconsider it. Counting the cost which might be at least $100,000, which is the whole of our assessment for one year. Can we stand this for a few people ? The Government must be consulted, and it would cost to get an engineer's report. The Government should be urged to do it all.

The blockade of the bridge does not mean very much as town centres are near at hand.

Mr. Corneil was sorry that Mr. Michael had not objected before. Mr. Mulligan had been the only one previously. The estimate was twice too high, owing to the shallow water. When the bridge was broken, people had to go miles out of their way!

Mr. Michael said the cost of building from timber now and then was great.

Mr. Devitt said he was sure it was a very important piece of road and knew that there was a lot of traffic. As we have only a small part to pay (3-10), it should go ahead, and aid from the Government asked. Let the Government estimate the work, and save county expenses.

Mr. Graham—In case the Government don't give assistance, are you in favour of the bridge being built.

Mr. Devitt wanted to know the cost first .

Mr. Dobson wanted aid from the Government.

Mr. Mulligan—It is most foolish to build the bridge. It will cost $200,000 to build the 7,000 feet of bridge since the water has raised so high. He estimated that $5 a square foot would just pay for repairs, according to the traffic now going over it.

Mr. Corneil, said Mr. Mulligan's statements were misleading. Previously there was only a stream of 30 or 40 feet, and now it is over a mile, caused by the Buckhorn dam, so it is in order to interview the Government.

Mr. Michael moved to petition the Government without putting on the County Engineer. Peterborough City and Peterborough County are willing to join in the movement.

Dr. Vrooman advised that a delegation of the three municipalities go to the government. An engineer should be put on to get sufficient data on the matter, in order to be able to put the matter intelligently before the government. The government will take no steps unless some data or reasons are given.

The town should not help build the bridge for people to get away to Peterborough on. It should be put out of business. We can't claim a cent from the County to build a town bridge.

Mr. Michael thought some ingineer should get some data.

Mr. Dobson wished for the help of a solicitor to see if the Government could be forced to help.

Mr. Richman had approached the Government for damages in a matter and a valuator had been sent out. They would send one to see the damages caused by the raising of the water.

Mr. Corneil: The Government knows they are liable. The motion was then seconded by Dr. Simms and the Clerk of the County of Peterborough communicated with as to the result and he was gratified.

CASCARETS SURELY STRAIGHTEN YOU OUT

No Headache, Biliousness, Upset Stomach, Lazy Liver or Constipated Bowels by Morning

Are you keeping your bowels, liver and stomach clean, pure and fresh, with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway through these alimentary or drainage organs every few days, with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters.

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food, and foul gases ,take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

MUSICAL HITS

In connection with the free music that the Examiner is publishing for the benefit of its readers, it may be of interest to music-lovers to learn that in the near future a number of "big hits" will be published. One of these is the dainty song "The Manicure Girl," as sung by Miss Gertrude Quinlan, in Lew Fields' big production, "The Manicure Girl,". The topical song, "The Difference of a Drink or Two," from William Ziegfield's successful musical comedy, "The Girl in the Kimono," will be another in the series that will be published shortly. Still another is the beautiful chacteristic number, "Spanish Beauty" made popular by Arthur Pryor and his famous concert band, and featured on all the programmes of that famous organization.

Struck By The "Moonlight"

Mr. Millard Maybee of Bethesda, had a miraculous escape from death last night. While driving across the Midland tracks, near the Ontario House, his rig was struck by the freight train known as "The Moonlight" from Peterborough. Mr. Maybee was thrown headlong to the ground ,but fortunately, clear of the tracks, and escaped without injury. The buggy was smashed to matchwood, but the horse suffered no injury.

In the mix-up the animal got away, but was caught on Walton street. Mr. Maybee hired a rig from Tremouth & Jarrell and reached home none the worse for his exciting experience.—Port Hope Guide.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Peterborough had an opportunity to see Miss May Robson, in a new role last night, when the comedienne appeared in her new comedy: "A Night Out," which demonstrated itself in every way, a fitting successor to "The rejuvenation of Aunt Mary'. 'A Night Out" is peculiarly suited to give Miss Robson facilities for displaying her universally recognized ability as a comedienne, and is a sparkling cleverly-written comedy, with a logical and natural action, and delineating some well-known types. The dialogue is bright and snappy, and the comedy does not miss fire any place in the action.

Mrs. Winifred Woodbury, (May Robson), one of those fortunate women who never grow old, is passing the summer at her beautiful country place on the Hudson, not far from New York, her daughter, Mrs. Marie Haslem, and her two grandsons, Jack and Paul, are with her. Between Mrs. Haslem and "Granmum" (as Mrs. Woodbury is affectionately called), there is a strong contrast. Granmum is always merry, bright and full of life. Her daughter is solemn, strict and puritanical. The boys, as is often the case, by force of heredity, resemble in temperament and disposition, their grandmother. Mrs. Haslem rules them with a rod of iron, denies them the usual innocent pleasures of boyhood, and they naturally rebel. They have more than once gone to the city to visit "The Three Lights." Granmum, ever indulgent, and inquisitive into the pranks of the boys, discovers this and begs them to take her with them. She succeeds—but unfortunately the place is raided on the night of their visit. With the aid of Metza, the dancing girl, they manage to evade the police. Arriving home early in the morning and finding the house closed, they are compelled to climb up the ivy to the balcony. Granmum is a wreck, her hair disordered, dress torn and her hat in tatters. They retire to their rooms congratulating themselves upon their lucky escape, but in the morning the daily paper gives a full account of the raid, with the names of the boys, stating that they were accompanied by their mother. Troubles now follow for Granmum and the boys. A thousand dollar bond has been stolen from Granmum's safety deposit locker in the local bank. As she entrusted the keys to the boys and to no one else, it seems as if one of them must have taken the bond. Complications now ensue and suspicion is directed to the two boys. How it is all finally cleared up and the two boys again enjoy the confidence of Granmum, and gain the love of two charming girls, furnishes a strong and humorous story. An amusing sub-plot is furnished by an alliance formed by Granmum and the two boys to save Marie from a palavering old fortune hunter who believes Mrs. Haslem to be rich.

Miss Robson made the part of Granmum appealing and realistic. Granmum's great love for her grandsons, her desire that they should be manly and frank young men, whose liberty should not be interfered with by their puritanical mother, were most successfully presented. Nothing funnier than Miss Robson's work in the second act, when the party return from their experience at the "Three Lights," could be imagined.

Her company won fresh laurels by their intelligent co-operation with the star. Jack Storey and Paul Decker gave a splendid characterization of the roles of the grandsons, the incidental music by the former being an appreciated feature. Faye Cusick and Margaret Boland were girlish and likeable, as the boy's sweethearts. The balance of the cast was above the average.

The comedy is elaborately staged, the first setting being a particularly effective piece of stage-craft.

WHAT PUNY CHILDREN NEED

More food, better blood, those are the two things that pale, delicate children need most.

"But they won't eat," says the anxious mother. Yes they will if you give them our delicious tonic, Vinol.

Its the greatest thing we ever saw to create an appetite. It makes the blood rich, too—builds up weak children (and grown folks as well) and makes them strong and rosy.

Mrs. W. O. Strother of Raleigh, N. C., says: "My little girl, Hazel, has been taking Vinol to build her up after a severe spell of sickness. It has done so much good by restoring her appetite and building up her strength that I think Vinol is the finest tonic ever prepared and I am telling everyone about it."

Children like to take Vinol, the taste is so pleasant. It is not a strong medicine and there is not one harmful thing in it. We will give back your money if Vinol disappoints you.

WEDDING BELLS

DUNBAR—VANCE.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Vance, youngest daughter of Mr. Robert Vance, to Mr. Lorenzo H. Dunbar, took place on Saturday in St. John's church, Cavan, the Rev. Canon Allen performing the ceremony.

As the bridal party entered the church, Mrs. William Cartwright Allen played Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a gown of white silk corline trimmed with pearl fringe and ornaments, with veil and Orange blossoms and carried a shower of white roses, lily of the valle, and maiden-hair fern.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Lottie Vance, wore a gown of pink silk voile and black Beaver hat, and carried a sheaf of pink carnations and maiden-hair fern. The flower girl, little Miss Gwendolin Lough, was dainty in pale blue voil and blue satin bonnet. The groomsman was Mr. Arthur Vance, and Mr. Louis Winslow and Mr. Warren Dunbar were ushers.

Each received a pearl tie pin from the bridegroom, whose gift to the bride was a piano. The bride's present to the bridesmaid was a gold bangle, and to the flower girl a pearl bar pin.

After the ceremony the guests drove to "Pine Grove," where a reception was held, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar left for their home in Montreal ,the bride travelling in a suit of grey serge, with grey furs and hat to match.—Millbrook Reporter.

CAN YOU AFFORD HANDICAPS?

During digestion the stomach requires nine times as much blood as when it is not active.

Heavy, indigestible food takes energy from your working capacity.

Mental "dullness" and that "logy feeling" usually comes from poor digestion.

Don't be " dozey" during business hours—the wide-awake man, with good digestion and a clear brain will pass you—sure!

Grape-Nuts

is practically pre-digested food, and contains the natural food elements from wheat and barley—albumen, phosphate of potash, etc., that keep body and brain in perfect repair.

Grape-Nuts is a concentrated food, and its rich nourishment is easily and quickly absorbed by the blood with but slight tax upon thedigestive organs.

One can be strong, well and brainy.

REASONED IT OUT

And Found a Change in Food Put Him Right.

A man does not count as wasted the time he spends in thinking over his business, but he seems loth to give the same sort of careful attention to himself and to his health.

And yet his business would be worth little without good health to care for it. A business man tells how he did himself good by carefully thinking over his physical condition, investigating to find out what was needed, and then changing to the right food.

"For some years I have been bothered a great deal after meals. My food seemed to lay like lead in my stomach, producing heaviness and dullness and sometimes positive pain. Of course this rendered me more or less unfit for business, and I made up my mind that something would have to be done.

"Reflection led me to the conclusion that over-eating, filling the stomach with indigestible food, was responsible for many of the ills that human flesh endures, and that I was punishing myself in that way—that was what was making me so dull, heavy and uncomfortable, and unfit for business after meals. I concluded to try Grape-Nuts food to see what it could for me.

"I have been using it for some months now, and am glad to say that it has given me entire relief. I do not suffer any longer after meals; my food seems to assimilate easily and perfectly, and to do the work for which it was intended. I have regained my normal weight, and find that business is a pleasure once more—can take more interest in it, and my mind is clearer and more alert."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

In packages of Grape-Nuts there is a little book, "The Road to Wellville," and it's worth a careful reading.

FROM SHAKESPEARE'S GARDEN

The Central Park mulberry cannot be the result of a cutting from the tree planted by William Shakespeare in New Place gardens, but it may be a direct descendant. In the New Place gardens to-day are two mulberry trees, one of great age, a mere broken stump with a few green shoots each year, and the other young and vigorous, grown from a cutting from the first named.

The older tree and one in the grounds of the grammar school are said by old tradition, going back before the time when there was any particular reason to "manufacture" such a story, to have been grown from cuttings of the original "Shakespeare" tree. To get true perspective it is well to remember that these trees had no sentimental value when planted; that they were for purely utilitarian, fruit growing purposes (King James' original silkworm feeding plan had failed), and that it is at least likely that the owner of an old tree, wishing to replace it by a new one, would take his own cuttings rather than go to some distance to beg cuttings from someone else. It is also reasonable to suppose that the planter of the tree in the grammar school grounds would get his cutting from the next door garden rather than go to the other end of the town or to some other town.

Why should we suppose that a common gardener, wanting to grow mulberries, should give himself needless inconvenience to find a tree that was not descended from the one he tended daily, in order to deceive some enthusiasts who were to come a century later and of whom and of whose enthusiasm he never dreamed?—H. Snowden Ward in New York Evening Post.

TELESCOPIC MASTS

A mast eighty feet tall that can be shut up like a telescope and carried about by a couple of men is plainly a handy thing to have wherever a temporary observation tower or wireless station is needed. In fact, the military use of wireless telegraphy has practically demanded something of the kind, so it had to be devised. Europe has produced it. The qualities required in such a device are that it must be rigid, tall, easily reduced to small compass, and quickly put in place. The new mast may be used for many purposes, even for a derrick.—Literary Digest.

IN DREAD OF CROUP

AN ACCOMODATING CANNIBAL

I am going to win your heart, brother," said the missionary to the cannibal King.

"All right, doctor," replied the King. "That suits me. They say the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. Would you prefer to be roasted or broiled?"—Harper's Weekly.

AEROPLANES ON THE RANCH

We have already seen the aeroplane used in Texas for herding cattle, but here is another proposition from the Lone Star State of even more interest. Colonel James Lambert, owner of the Pecos Ranch, representing himself and eight or nine associates, plans to use an aeroplane to rid their ranches, which cover an area of several thousand square miles in Brewster, Pecos, Jeff Davis and Reeves counties, of wolves, panthers and other wild animals that last year caused losses of $35,000. Every border ranch employs men to hunt beasts of prey. But in the brush and cactus country the animals find hiding places. With an airship built for two it is believed the hunters can pick off the wild animals even in the jungles and that the expense will be less than half what it is now. The aeroplane will receive a thorough test.—Boston Transcript.

JUSTICE IN AUSTRIA

A business man named Max Trinczes has been condemned to a month's imprisonment at Lemberg on the charge of having defrauded the post office of four cents. In Austria every one has the right to return letters which are not acceptable to the sender without paying any extra postage. Herr Trinczes had received four post cards from a firm announcing that they had sent goods ordered by him. As he had not ordered anything, he wrote on the margin: "Return to the sender, nothing ordered," and threw them into the letter-box. The postal authorities regarded the words "nothing ordered" as a new communication, but instead of asking for the double postage they prosecuted him on a criminal charge. The first court regarded the offence as merely formal and inflicted the minimum sentence of twenty-four hours, but the public prosecutor appealed, and the higher court increased the penalty to one month's hard labour.—New York Evening Post.

CITY SEWAGE AS FERTILIZER

Solution of the problem, how to dispose of sewage, has been attempted at several places in the Amsterdam district by distributing it over fields and gardens as a fertilizer, instead of running it into canals and other waterways, which is the practice to some extent. What area of land should be allowed for the sewage of a city is a question answered by the statement that this can be regulated by the percentage of fertilizing properties contained in the sewage, the amount of fertilizer needed for the particular crops to be grown, and the natural richness of the soil. If the sewage lacks any desired fertilizer it can be added.

Experts who have scientifically analyzed the sewage of Amsterdam, with a population of 578,000, believe that it would fertilize about 5,000 acres of land devoted to crops of the most soil-impoverishing character. The area, however, would vary somewhat with the kind of soil to be fertilized.—Consular Reports.

THE INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCES

"You are old, Father William," the young man said,
"Your courage is vanishing quite,
Your blood is no longer a valourous red,
No more you delight in a fight!"

"Your diplomats seem to be weak in the knee,
Your chancellor's simply a bore;
I want to go out on a wild jamboree
I want to see oceans of gore."

"Come hither, Young William," the Emperor smiled,
"I fear I am misunderstood."
And he laid the mailed fist on his beamish young child,
In a place where it did the most good.—Evening Post.

The Williams Piano Co. Limited,
Oshawa, Ontario.

Gentlemen:—

As Rubenstein once said when asked to designate the three most important qualities in a piano, "The first" he replied, "is tone", "The second, is tone, and the third, is tone", and is the New Scale Williams you have given the public a piano that fulfills its ideals.

After using your instrument at all my recitals in Canada on my farewell tour, and giving them a thorough trial, I do not hesitate to pronounce the New Scale Williams a beautiful piano.

Sincerely yours,
V. de Pachmann.

Chambers' Wife

A Short Story

B. J. B. Q.

I attended Mrs. Chambers in her last illness. She died clutching Chambers' hand and saying, "Promise me you'll put no one in my place, Oliver—promise—promise!" and as her capacity for speech lessened, "promise."

Chambers, who combined most of the virtues with enough caution to nearly but not quite swamp them, hedged, "Oh, Annie dear," he protested, "as if I should ever want to!" and non-committal things like that.

I don't think they satisfied Mrs. Chambers (who was at all times a wearing woman), because just before the end she rose up quite straight in bed, and without clipping her words or gasping, cried out very distinctly, "If you do—I swear she shall not stay here. . . . Wherever I am I will come back to guard my own. I——" Then she fell back as even wearing women only fall once in their lives, and in due time I got Chambers away. He really was very cut up. Mrs. Chambers had had her points, she was quite handsome, though she spoilt her looks by showing the gums above her upper row of teeth when she smiled; and a fidgety habit she had contracted of continually pushing back a curl which came down low over her eyebrows got on one's nerves. She had been large, and of a skim milk complexion, and her face was garnished with enormous watchful eyes. Without a shadow or suspicion of doubt she had adored Chambers.

As I have said, he mourned her quite sincerely, and he took a voyage home to get over his sorrow. In England he met a certain Tessie Northam (at a country vicarage tennis party, I believe), and perhaps because she was the exact opposite of his late spouse, being pink and white and gumless and restful he fell frenziedly in love with her, and I told her so. Miss Northam, though she returned his love, refused him tentatively—that is to say, she would not be bound, because duty chained her to a mother, whose invalidism and declining days were made hell by a drinking husband (Miss Northem's stepfather). Owing to this stepfather, Miss Northam had conceived a great prejudice against second marriages, and Chambers therefore suppressed the late Mrs. Chambers; and I don't think I blame him.

Unable to shake the girl's decision, he returned to Jamaica, with the understanding that if ever a time befell when she was free to come to him she would not hesitate. They corresponded constantly.

Perhaps you will wonder how I unearthed all this. Well, Chambers confided it to me—bit by bit between whiles during a ride here, over cigarettes and rum and cocoanut water there—once specially during a hurricane when the bananas snapped like charred twigs, and Nature generally seemed distraught. Confidences—even the confidences of the cautious—are not so difficult in the tropics as at home.

After Chambers' return to Jamaica, four years elapsed, and no striking events punctuated them. He wrote ardent letters periodically to his lady love, hustled soporific negroes who dozed among his sugar canes, and possessed his soul in patience and loneliness.

And then quite unexpectedly I became enmeshed, as it were, in the threads of his Fate without my own volition. It happened like this. One night in springtime I was riding home along the wide red road which stretches between pimento orchards from the King Edward Hotel to the common at Mandeville. Suddenly my horse shied at something limp and white in the hedge. At first I thought it was washing, for I could only see the flutter of linen. A moment later I discovered it was an English girl—a strange English girl in a swoon.

It is not usual to find English girls swooning on a West Indian bank, when the heavens are alive with stars, and the fireflies hold high carnival in the hibiscus bushes. To begin with, it is unhealthy, and so I told this particular transgressor, when, after some rapid first aiding, her lips quivered, and she sat up and asked where she was. I gave her the desired information—a bit irritably it may have been—for I was tired, and she had delayed me.

She thanked me and retreated at once several leagues into her shell. But there was something heavy on her mind. I was certain of it. She looked so ill and shaky and dazed as she got up to walk away that I caught her arm and said: "Look here, you don't know where you're going, and anyway you aren't fit to go wherever it is. I'm Dr. Lowe of this place. My bungalow's round the next bend. You'd better come and let my sister attend to you a bit." She came in the end submissively enough, and that evening her story tumbled out. Here it is:

She was Tessie Northam—Chambers Tessie—and she had followed hot foot on a letter she had written which informed him that her mother was dead, and that she did not intend to spend another night under her stepfather's roof. She had acted no impulse and iwthout telling a soul had come straight off to Jamaica, according to compact, to marry the man she loved whenever it should be convenient. "I landed at Kingston early this morning," she told us, "and finding there was no one to meet me, I felt certain my letter had miscarried or that I had arrived before it. So I came straight up to Mandeville, meaning to apprise Oliver of my arrival, and to stay in the hotel or any place he might choose till arrangements could be made." At this point in the narrative she stopped, and her face worked painfully.

"Come," said my sister very kindly, "come dear. Perhaps you would rather not——"

"Oh, yes, Miss Lowe. Oh, yes. I must, or my head will burst. I loved Oliver Chambers—I believed in him. I didn't think any man would deceive a trusting woman so—"

"What do you mean?" I asked sharply, for Chambers was my friend. Miss Northam turned her heavy eyes on me. I was obliged to shoot a horse with a broken leg once; his expression had been very similar. "He isn't a single man at all, doctor; he's—he's got a wife!"

"Then he's got her since yesterday," I shouted. And I thumped the table which stretched between us till the fern pot in the centre rattled, and my sister caught my arm and said, "Don't Dick."

Miss Northam started and looked at me wide-eyed through the wavering lamplight. "Oh, no, indeed, he must have been misleading you all. I saw her, I say. She—she is quite—his—established wife, I am sure—quite respectable, and all that—a large white woman who sat with her hands folded and never took her eyes off him." Sister made a sound in her throat—I believe it was a scream cleverly suppressed, and turned very pale. I bit in half a sentence I was about to offer, and leant forward, staring at the girl.

"How did you see her?" I asked; "how?"

Miss Northam moved her hands wearily. "I lost my way, and got to Mr. Chamber's bungalow after dark. I found myself on the veranda looking at a lighted window. I knew it was his place, because he was sitting there, doing things with cards; and this other person—she had small teeth and a good deal of gum when she smiled—and her hair would get into her eyes, and she kept pushing it back with a wedding ringed hand and—" I stood up. There are situations when the sitting position is a burden. My sister moved back her chair, but her raised finger, though it shook, advised caution.

"You—you must not misjudge Chambers," I stammered. "I will see him about it—it may have been just a friend, you know."

But she shook her head, and smiled as they smile who face cold steel or the cannon's mouth and want to die game. "It's very kind of you," she said, "but it's of no use."

We got her to bed later on; she was quite docile, but if ever a woman's heart broke at a given instant, that woman was Tessie Northam. After my sister had borne her away I saddled Carroway and rode out again, tired as I was, to Blaneath (which is the name of Chambers' abode), because the thing oppressed me beyond all endurance, and I wanted to sift it to the very dregs. I found him playing patience with an open book beside him. I'm afraid my manner must have puzzled him a good deal, if it did not definitely suggest alcohol.

"Had a late case—saw your light—and thought I'd look you up for a few minutes," I jerked out.

"Awfully glad to see you," responded Chambers; "have a ——?" then he stopped and seemed embarrassed. He thought I'd had enough as it was. I know he did, for he is of prudish make.

"Fancied I saw some one, ha-ha, sitting with you," said I, plunging. "Have you been entertaining tonight?" His expression did not change by so much as a flicker."

"No, dead solitude," he said, with a sigh. "More solitude than usual, for I haven't heard from my little girl this mail," and I perceived by his eyes that he still diagnosed alcohol. So I smoked frantically and talked desultorily for a quarter of an hour, and then rode home. Later on I sat with my sister, discussing the mystery, and trying to decide how to cope with it, until the stars withdrew themselves, and a glimmer of red dawn peered out above the ponciana tree. Then I slept fitfully for a couple of hours, and the dreams which garnished my slumbers made them less restful than wakefulness.

But when we went to call Miss Northam there was no voice nor any that answered. She had risen and gone. She must have stolen softly away soon after we left her. We decided—perhaps you won't agree with us—that as things were, it was better not to try and find her and better not to tell Chambers that there was any reason to look.

The letter heralding her arrival never came, and Chambers, after making frantic inquiries in all directions and receiving blank answers, mourned her as dead—far more passionately than he had mourned her predecessor. I believe his idea was that she had committed suicide after the long strain of her mother's illness, for the terrible stepfather to whom he applied could only say that she had left home without a word of explanation. I should have been tempted to make a clean breast of the whole affair to Chambers, uncomfortable as it was, but for the fact that his wife had been such a very wearing woman. It would have been difficult, maybe, to make him see that any fate which might have overtaken Tessie was preferable to sharing Blaneath with Mrs. Chambers.

WAS SO RUN DOWN

Thought She Was So Far Gone Nothing Could Cure Her.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS Made Her Strong and Healthy.

Many women get run down, and are unable to look after their household duties, owing to their nervous system becoming unstrung, and when this happens, the heart starts to work in sympathy with the nerves. In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself. Mrs. F. McFadyen, Brookside, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received from using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. This spring I was so run down I could not do any work, and one day a neighbor advised me to try your Pills. I told her that I thought nothing could cure me, as I was too far gone. But she told me to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I did, and before I had finished them, I began to improve, and when I had finished the one box I was as strong and healthy as any person. Anyone who is suffering from heart or nerve troubles should take your Heart and Nerve Pills and they will soon discover their worth."

OBITUARY

VIOLA MAY COOLEY.

Viola May Cooley, aged three years and three months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Cooley, 498 Aylmer street, passed away at her home, this morning, after an illness of some duration.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the above residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

GEORGE FRY.

There passed away early this morning, at his late residence, Carlisle Avenue, a widely-known city resident in the person of Mr. George Fry.

The deceased was 65 years of age, and a life-long resident of Peterborough. He was, in creed, an Anglican, and a member of St. John's church. His naturally charitable disposition rendered him beloved of all those who were intimate with him, while there was not a portion of the city where he was not more or less known. His illness extended over a period of two months and his end, therefore, was not altogether unexpected. The relatives have the sincere sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Fry, who never married, is survived by a brother, John, living at home, and another brother in Michigan. Two sisters also lament his passing in the persons of Mary Isabella, both living at home.

The funeral announcement will be published later.

JOHN THACKERAY, J. P.

In the death of Mr. John Thackeray, J.P., of Roseneath, Alnwick township, the district loses one of its most substantial and most highly respected residents. The late Mr. Thackeray has occupied a prominent position in the community for the past half century. He has been a Justice of the Peace for forty years, and for twenty-eight years has efficiently and satisfactorily discharged the duties of Indian agent. He has been in ill health for some time of a heart affection, and died on Saturday, November 17th, at the age of 77 years. He leaves behind him to mourn his loss a wife and four sons, The sons are Eldridge and Corelli of Roseneath; Barton E., of St. Marys, and William M., of Peterborough.

HERBERT BOOTH.

The death occurred at 9.30 last night of Mr. Herbert Booth, of 535 Albert street, aged fifty-six years. His end came with tragic suddenness. He was walking along King street on Tuesday night when he was seized with a paralytic stroke and succumbed last night as stated.

The deceased was born in Sheffield, Eng., and came to Canada in May, 1910, locating in Peterborough. He has been employed in the carpenter shop of the C.G.E.

Mr. Brooks is survived by a sorrowing wife, four sons and three daughters, namely, Arthur, Cephas, Henry, Sydney, Eleanor and Edith, all living in the old country, and Mrs. Lily Fell of 535 Albert street, city. A father and a brother, Arthur, both living in the old country, also mourn his demise.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 to-morrow at the Little Lake cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS

SHARMAN—WATSON.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. John's church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 22, when Miss Mary Loretta Watson, eldest daughter of J. N. Watson, 426 Chambers street, became the bride of James Walter Sharman, late of Sheffield, England. The bride was attended by Miss Phyllis Edwards, and the groom by Mr. James Simonite.

After a dainty wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Sharman went to their home at 38 Stewart street, where they will reside.

REGISTRATION COMMENCED TO-DAY

Registration of Manhood Suffrage voters for the Provincial elections, was commenced this mornig, and, according to the reports from the different booths, received by the Examiner, there has been no great rush for the first morning. At 12 o'clock, only six had registered in Ward No. 1 and at 1 o'clock there were 19 added to the list in Ward No. 3. It is expected that the big rush will take place to-morrow afternoon and evening. The registration booths are as follows:

Ward No. 1—Van Every's, 204, Rubidge street.
Ward No. 2—Council Chamber.
Ward No. 3—Police Court.
Ward No. 4.—Lee's shop, Smith St.
Ward No. 5.—Old Town Hall.

All supporters of Mr. Hall should see that their names on on the lists.

Clean Within!

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Purify the Blood and Prolong Life

Figures taught at 70 due to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

If as much intelligent care were given to keeping the body clean and pure within as well as without we would see more healthy, vigorous old men and women. The daily bath does its part by keeping the pores of the skin open so that they throw off much of the body's impurities, but it is even more important that the bowels and kidneys should be kept regular and active.

If the bowels fail, as they often do late in life, to move regularly at least once a day, the waste matter from the food accumulates, decays, poisons the system and upsets the stomach.

If the kidneys are sluggish the impurities which they should filter from the blood remain and cause rheumatism.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills regulate the bowels, stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. The result is a body clean within—pure, red blood—good digestion—and a hale and hearty old age.

Three generations have proved the value of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and their sale is steadily increasing all over the world.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Toronto Ball Club's Prospects For Next Year

BALTIMORE, MD., NOV. 21. — Manager Joe Kelley, of the Toronto club, is busily engaged arranging his plans for next season. Joe has fixed March 17 or 18 as the reporting time for his men, and Macon, Ga., will again be the training place.

Some of the players will go direct to Macon, but he expects the majority of them to meet him in Washington, and go from there to Georgia. He says Outfielder Burch, turned over to him by Brooklyn, was turned back and that the Dodgers sold him to Columbus. Kelley took Outfielder Jack Dalton, instead, as he believes he will be of more use to him. He looks upon Dalton as a sure hitter, and a heady player. He does not believe that Secondbaseman Amby McConnell will be retained by the Chicago White Sox, as he says he is on Toronto's reserve list.

Manager Kelley, however, is on the lookout for a good man who can play either second or short, and claims to have his eye on a big leaguer, but will not divulge his name. He still has "Tony" Smith, but Galveston, Texas, has made an offer for him. Kelley says he has not as yet decided what to do with him. Fitzpatrick will remain with Toronto as utility man, and Mullen's fate is undecided.

"My contracts will be sent out the first of the year," said Kelley, "and in the meantime I will have a talk with President McCaffery in New York during the big league meeting next month. We will then get down to business, and decide on the fate of some of my men."

Britons Are Preparing For Olympic Games

At the general committee meeting of the Amateur Athletic Association of England held recently in London, a number of items were acted upon, one being in connection with the payment of athletes' expenses. The proposal was that in future clubs may pay the expenses of their first claim athletes only.

Part of the resolution touched on the expenses of athletes who wanted to travel outside of the British Isles, and the clause reads that they may accept second class hotel and railroad fares. This would mean that if the English athletes should care to come to America their expenses could be paid by a club here or if they should take a trip to the continent they might receive expenses from a club no matter where. There was a long discussion over the resolution, which was finally referred to a sub-committee with power to act.

The scheme of founding a school for training the athletes for the next Olympic games was received favourably and its outlines will be put into effect right away. The first step towards a preparation for the games is due in December, when a combined team of Oxford and Cambridge athletes will meet the pick of the Amateur Athletic Association. This means that the latter body is at liberty to pick the men from all quarters. The suggestion for the meet came from the college men, who say that they will help the British Olympic Committee in bringing out the best material possible.

At the present time it is the plan of the English A.A.A. to hold the Olympic try-outs about the third week in May and the annual track and field championships early in June, the latter at some place in the south of England. It has been customary to hold the championships in or around the first week in July, but as the Olympic games will open on July 6 the Englishmen could not be at Stockholm if they stuck to their original fixture.

It was decided to admit school clubs to membership in the A.A.A. and they will be exempt from sanction dues, that is provided the prizes do not exceed the sum of $5 a prize. In the case of adult clubs there will be a fee of 10 shillings where the prize exceeds $5, but where no first prize reaches a cost of $5 the sanction fee will be 2 shillings and 6 pence.

There was some correspondence over the row between the Irish A.A.A. and the Gaelic A.A., and though the English A.A.A. favours the Irish A.A.A., no action was taken in the matter. A number of athletes in the old world would like to see the split fixed up before the arrival of the Olympic games.

The profits of the last year's championship meet amounted to $1,900.

Mack's Pitching Outfit Expected To Go Back

While it is conceded by many that the Athletics will win the American League pennant, and possibly the world's championship, again next fall, it is well to remember the fate of the Chicago Cubs and, going still further back into the misty past, that of the Boston Red Sox, each of whom had prospects just as bright as those of the Athletics to-day.

Back in 1904 the Red Sox had won their second championship, and accomplished the feat so easily that it did not look possible for anything else in the league to even come close to them. But the grand old team that Jimmy Collins had at the Hub simply went to pieces and finished fifth, 108 points behind the Athletics, who had been in fifth position the previous year. In Boston's case, however, it was a case of the in and outfield disintegrating. The pitchers held up fairly well, but the players behind the hurlers failed to deliver the goods, most of them being veterans who had seen their best days.

A more recent example is that of the Cubs. After winning the National League pennant in 1906, '07 and '08, and the world's championship the last two years, it did not look as if there was anything in the country that could beat the grand machine built up by Frank Chance. In the post-season series of 1908 they made the Detroit Tigers look like amateurs, and the Detroit team was some club at that. Brown, Reulbach, Ludgren, Pfeister and Fraser composed a wonderful pitching staff; Kling was conceded to be the best catcher in the land, while the infield was touted as the brainiest ever assembled.

Then came the explosion. Kling refused to play in 1909 and the Cubs lost the pennant to Pittsburg. They came back in 1910 and won out, but the erstwhile grand pitching staff was grand no longer. It wabbled throughout the National League race, but the run-getting ability of the men behind and the great work on the mound by King Cole pulled them through. They met the Athletics, and were humbled.

To-day sees only the remnant of that great team of 1908 left.

What has happened in Boston and Chicago may happen in Philadelphia. Bender and Plank cannot go on for ever. They pitched great ball all year and especially in the world's series. So did Brown and Reulbach and Overall in the fall of 1908. When a pitcher goes back, he goes back suddenly. He's either very good or he's very bad.

Aside from his pitching staff, Mack has no cause for worry.

REV. J. D. MORROW HAS LOST NONE OF HIS SPEED

The following from the Toronto Star will be read with interest by Rev. Mr. Morrow's many friends here:

When it comes to getting the coin for his new church, Rev. J. D. Morrow will do anything except highway robbery. He pulled a new one last night. It was 11.15 and Rev. Mr. Morrow was en route home in a Bathurst car. He was wheezing and sneezing with a cold, when a "has-been" sprinter clunbed aboard.

"Say, 'J. D.', remarks this chap, "you should don the old running togs and do a little training and you would not have these colds and ills."

"Well! I haven't had 'em in years but I can beat you any distance, any time, for anything," replied Rev. Mr. Morrow, the old-time fighting spirit coming up.

"And I can beat both you chaps," said a chap in the next seat.

"You're both on," said the athletic pastor, who is ex-champion quarter-miler of Canada.

"Make it 100 yards for a dollar sweep-stake," said the Has Been.

"The proceeds to go to my church fund," remarked the pastor.

"Right you are," replied his opponents.

The trio climbed off at Wells street, half the car load following, and all three dug up a dollar—just to make sure the parson held the stakes.

All three pulled off their coats, piled them up and lined up on the mark. Some one yelled "go" and they were off. Mr. Buttinski had five yards the best of the break, but 'J. D.' got him in two "jumps" and the Has Been Thundered along on his heels. He nailed the parson at 60 yards, and looked like a winner, but the parson needed those three dollars so he put on an extra ounce at the finish and won by inches.

Some galloping for a man who spent last spring in the hospital and under went a serious operation.

Toronto Rugby Fans Wait 42 Hours To Get Tickets For The Game

TORONTO, NOVEMBER 23. — The 42 hour vigil of the Rugby "nuts" for the tickets placed on sale to the public at Spalding's store, 189 Yonge street, is over.

In reality, it was 42 hours and 15 minutes for the first arrivals in that line, and all they got for their weary chilly wait was two bleacher reserved seats and two grand stand standing room tickets.

The doors were opened at 9.15. Think it over!

Can't Make Much.

If they were speculators, unless they had sales already arranged, the most they can make is $3—for the bleacher seats were being sold in a few moments after those on sale were exhausted at $2.00 each, and the "S. R. O." pasteboards at $1.50 each.

There were 262 people in that line-up at nine o'clock this morning, and some of them had been in that line without reliefs for over thirty hours. In that line-up were Varsity boys wrapped up in two or three sweaters, caps over their ears, and with blankets for their knees, standing knee to knee with out-of-work men in skimpy clothes, who were holding their places in the line at so much per place. In that line, too, were 3 or 4 little Yiddish boys of not more than twelve years of age—half-clad little chaps, who proved their stamina by standing the cold exposure and hunger for 24 hours. They were blue with the cold, but game to the core, and seized their seats and scampered away tickled to death.

"How much will you make on your tickets?" one of the little Jew boys was asked.

"I am to get two dollars for all my tickets," he said, "I make $4."

"How long were you in line?"

"Since six o'clock yesterday morning," was the reply.

800 Seats Sold.

In all about 800 seats and 1,000 standing-room tickets were put on sale this morning.

They outlasted the line-up, but were all sold out at eleven o'clock.

Inspector Alf. Cuddy personally supervised the policing of the line-up last night and this morning, and everything went off smoothly. There were a few attempts to butt into the line during the early morning, but the police had the regulars pretty well sized up and rustled the buttinskies out in short order.

There was a lot of fun during the night, and one of the newsboys in line was full of the "old pep" and he kept the wearied crowd going all night with his pranks and parodies. The line-up to-day was not one-third as long as the famous line-up three years ago for the 'Varsity-Ottawa game. Then the line extended from Spalding's, north on Yonge street, to Shuter street, and around the corner half way to Massey Hall—and half of them didn't get a crack at the seats on sale at all.

Argo Seats.

In the midst of all this criticism by the public it is just as well to state that if it hadn't been for the Argonauts the public would not have had a chance at the seat plan at all.

The Argonauts could have sold all the seats and "S. R. O." pasteboards they had to members and their friends and others who had claims on them for consideration.

Argos, however, refused and declared that the general public must have some consideration. All the tickets over this morning at Spalding's were Argo tickets, and in putting them on sale the Executive offended many members who wanted more tickets for their friends.

The only tickets which will be sold at the Stadium Saturday will be standing room at each end of the field on sloping ground.

"NEW" FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, NOV. 22.—Now that "new" football has been mastered, the casualty list is so small that one needs a microscope to read it. Football, as it is being played this fall, is a game that requires seventy-five per cent brains and twenty-five per cent speed and brawn. And where brains rule over beef in any game naturally there is less chance of injury.

The "new" game last season wasn't a success, but solely because the big elevens could not grasp it so readily. With the benefit of a season's work the coaches and players this year were greatly enabled to improve, and from the opening day of practice took up the "new" style of play.

And as a result there have not been over three or four deaths recorded this fall. A glance at the following figures is all that is needed to appreciate what "new" football has accomplished:

FOOTBALL'S TOLL

Year.	Deaths.	Injured.
1901	7	7
1902	15	106
1903	14	63
1904	14	296
1905	24	209
1906	14	160
1907	15	166
1908	11	304
1909	30	236
1910	21	491
*1911	3	42

*To date, unofficial.

Every fall, after the games are over, the delegates of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association meet and ask:

"Are the present football rules satisfactory?"

This year the unanimous answer will be:

"Yes."

Injuries and deaths under the new game have been greatly lessened and the game has become a sport where the minor college has nearly as good a chance as the bigger one. The new game has come to stay, and is, right now, as popular as that played when brawn and weight alone were the essential points of a player.

POPULAR APPOINTMENT

Secretary-Treasurer R. M. Glover, of the Peterborough Hockey Club, has appointed Mr. Arthur Perks, of the Bank of Montreal, as Assistant-Treasurer of the Club, and he has consented to assume the duties of the position. Mr. Perks is well qualified to look after the financial end of the season, and his appointment will be popular with the executive. There will be an important meeting of the Executive in the Examiner Office on Monday night, next, at 7.30 o'clock, for the purpose of making arrangements with Brock Street Rink, securing a trainer, and transacting other important business in regard to the coming season. All members are asked to be on hand sharp on time.

Opinions Of Different Critics On To-morrow's Final Rugby Game

Here are some of the expert opinions upon to-morrow's final game for the Canadian championship between Argos and Varsity:

Captain Ross Binkley of the Argonauts: "Of course, I look for an Argo win. All I am afraid of is their fast lining up and their combined end runs."

Captain John Maynard of Varsity: "We will have our team at full strength, and are glad Argonauts will be the same. We will do our best, and the boys hope that best is good enough to win."

Pete Campbell of Varsity: "If the team plays to form, I think we should beat Argonauts. The boys are in fine shape and confident."

Billy Mallett, Argo half-back: "I think we can do it. If we don't — Well! a beetter team beats us—that's all."

HAMILTON OPINIONS.

Dave Tope, Tiger manager: "I would like to see the Argos win, but think Varsity will be on top. Argos have the advantage on the line, but Varsity knows how to stop a buck, and will have no trouble in doing it. Varsity backs may be outbooted, but they will make this up in running the ball."

Dr. Carr, president of the Alerts: "Varsity may possibly win on a fast field, but I like the Argos. If the going is anything like it was last Saturday there will be nothing to it but the Oarsmen. They have a great wing line and should be easily able to smother Varsity's trick plays.

Russell L. Kelly, president of the Tigers: "It is going to be mighty close. I don't look for a difference of more than five points, no matter how it goes. I pick Argos. They have a splendidly balanced team, and I place reliance on Binkley's judgment. He is a great general, and Mallett is an immense punter."

Walter Marriott, manager of the Alerts: "Varsity should turn the trick on a fast field. It was the sloppy going that stopped our back division against Argos. On a day like last Saturday Argos should win."

Dr. McCann, Tiger scrimmager and ex-Queen's player: "It's going to be a tough match—the teams are so evenly balanced. It all depends on the weather. A sloppy field gives Argos the edge; a fast field should win for Varsity."

To Be Officials at Game.

Dr. Thompson, Coach Ballard, Captain Isbister, and Ben Simpson have all been asked to officiate on Saturday, and for this reason refused to express opinions.

Bobby Robinson, Spectator sporting editor, calls Varsity with their fast open play, unless weather conditions are so bad as to make open work impossible.

Walter McMullen, Herald sporting editor, likes Argos, but admits that it looks like Varsity on a fast field.

Controller Cooper, vice-president of the Alerts: "Argos for mine. Varsity has a weaker team than last year. Argos have as strong a team as ever they have played in the Inter-Provincial. Where does Varsity come in on this dope?"

MONTREAL DOPE.
Wally Hagar Hopeful.

W. C. Hagar, Vice-president Inter-provincial Rugby Union: "I figure a close game and I hope that Argos win. They have plugged along for years since the Inter-provincial was formed, and this is the first time they have got into the finals. I hope and expect them to win, though Varsity will certainly make things hum before the game is over."

Clarrie McKerrow, M. A. A. A.: "I pick Varsity. Varsity have had the benefit of Harry Griffith's coaching, and I don't think there is a man anywhere in the country who can turn out a team to beat Griffith's organization, barring accidents. Then there is the fact that Argos are up against a college team, and college teams, for whatever reason, always seem to have more vim and snap and to play with a whole-heartedness that admits no defeat. Sure thing, I pick Varsity."

Referee Like the Sphinx.

Phil McKenzie, Montreal: "As I am to referee the game I would not care to express any opinion."

Art Ross, coach, Montreal Rugby team: "Sure thing, Varsity, and the score will be about 15-8. Speed and aggressiveness will win for Varsity. Don't make any mistake about Varsity covering Lawson. If he turns out with Argos, they'll do that alright."

HOW OTTAWA SIZES IT UP.

Father Stanton, the clever young coach of the college team, when asked for his opinoin, said that he believed Varsity would win.

"I often hear it said that the Varsity backs of to-day are weaker than those of the past few years," said Father Stanton, "but let me assure those who are inclined to risk their money on Argonauts that the Varsity back line of to-day is one of the greatest that they have ever had. The Varsity system will win the game. It hasn't been changed in four years. It was good enough to beat Ottawas, Hamilton and us, and it will down Argonauts. Why, those Varsity backs, if the field is dry, will run rings around the big men on the Argonaut line."

Said Captain "Silver" Quilty: "I believe that the Argonauts have a wonderful back division, but they cannot be better than Varsity, for Maynard is a great general and Greene and Ramsay are two of the best men in the game. Campbell, as a quarter, has never been excelled. I think that Varsity will win mainly through their speed and tricks. They will be off under the ball before the Argonauts get set to scrimmage it."

Said Manager Jim Kennedy: "Much depends on the weather. If the field is dry Varsity will win, if the weather is rough and the fiel l slippery Argonauts may turn the trick. Varsity has the best team in Canada, and under ordinary conditions would win by a wide margin. Lawson will find it impossible to elude those deadly tacklers."

Bert Gilligan: "Varsity will outplay Argonauts. Their line is the fastest playing to-day, and their backs will gain twice as much ground with their running-passing game than will the Argonauts on their punting."

Tom Clancy: "Argonauts have the best team that has ever played in the Inter-Provincial. Binkley and Mallett will kick out a victory."

Fred Chittick: "Why shouldn't Argonauts win? Their line is better than that of Varsity and their backs are the finest in the country. They will tear the Varsity defence to pieces."

Marty Walsh: "Argonauts are a mighty fine team, and I look to them to carry off the championship. Lawson, Binkley and Mallett, given good protection will turn the trick."

Ed. Elliott: "Unless Varsity are fully as good as last year Argonauts will give them a sound drubbing. The Oarsmen are slow scorers, but it is next to impossible to score against them."

Jim McCuaig: "I called Varsity last year and was right. This time I fancy Argonauts. They are a far better aggregation than they are being given credit for. Lawson is a while team in himself. Wigle and Lawson will play havoc with the Varsity defence."

Martin Kilt: "I like Argonauts this time. They are a great all-round team."

Eddie Phillips: "My money goes downon Argonauts. I think we can concede them a little superiority in all the departments."

Jack Williams: "Argonauts are my choice. I don't think Varsity will be able to hold that line, behind which Binkley, Lawson and Mallett will do great damage."

RUGBY

Wonder if Jack Maynard and Pete Campbell remember that autumn day back in 1907 when they brought home the first "Little Big Four" championship to Trinity College school. The final game was played at Upper Canada College that year and they won, making a string of three straight victories. Pete was captain and quarter that year and Jack was on the half line. Pete found a hole in the U.C.C. line and went through for a thirty yard run and the try and won the game.—Toronto News.

Great Results At Our Clearing Sale

OUR store was crowded to its full capacity on the opening of our Great Clearing Sale. People were astonished at the values we were offering in High Grade CLOTHING, FURNISHINGS and HATS. A customer remarked, when a salesman quoted a King hat at $1 95, that he had never bought a King hat before for less than $2.50. Then again, another instance—regarding Overcoats, we are selling a Coat at $18.00 which another house is asking $26.00 for. Values like this in every department is what makes people talk. Don't make any mistake, we have the best Clothing manufactured to-day and are selling it at bargain prices. We handle nothing but the best. Don't expect to get anything here but goods of merit backed up by our guarantee.

An Enjoyable Event. — The "No Name" Hunt Club entertained a number of their friends at an enjoyable little game supper last evening in the Peterborough Lunch. Partridge, wild duck and other delicacies that had fallen before the trusty weapons of the club formed the bill-of-fare and the guests did ample justice to the array of good things. Music and story helped to make the event a memorable one and the thanks of those present is due Messrs. E. H. Howson and H. W. Cookson, who had the arrangements in charge.

Patronize Home Industry.—There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store-fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship are of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wallcases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade should send in their order as soon as possible, before the rush begins and not leave everything to the last two weeks.—W. THEOBALD, manager; Factory, 709 Wafer St. Telephone 922.

Mistaken Identity.—One of the best known men on the London Stock Exchange got the shock of his life not long ago. He and his wife had spent their holiday motoring, and when they arrived in one town for lunch the man was, to put it mildly, rather dusty; and, since he has never been one to pay much attention to his clothes, his appearance was distinctly "seedy." Entering the hotel, he asked the waiter where they could have lunch. "The lady will lunch in here, sir," replied the Knight of the Napkin, and then, with a contemptuous glance at the man's rig-out, "you lunch with the other servants in the kitchen."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Peterborough County and Its Townships---(By Roy Gilray)

Peterborough County, which, at the time of the Union Act of 1840 was known as the north riding of Northumberland ,takes its name from the town of Peterborough, formerly called Indian Plains or Scott's Landing.

In 1825 Col. Peter Robinson of Newmarket (a brother of Sir John Beverley Robinson) was sent out by Earl Bathurst in charge of 2,000 emigrants. He conducted them from the south of Ireland to Indian Plains, where they subsequently settled in the neighboring townships.

At a dinner party which Col. Robinson gave in his tent one day the question arose what name to give the future town. In deference to their host the guests suggested that it should be called Peterborough, after Col. Robinson. The Colonel was so pleased he presented each of his guests with a town and park lot. The land upon which the town now stands was valued at one dollar per acre. Among those present at the dinner were Hon. Thomas Stewart, Mr. Alexander McDonald, and Dr. Reid; no doubt our streets bearing these names were called after these gentlemen.

The fifteen townships into which the county was divided about the year 1825 were named for the most part by Sir Peregrine Maitland, and were derived from various sources.

NORTH MONAGHAN takes its name from a county in Ireland, same as South Monaghan in Northumberland County.

OTONABEE is an Indian word meaning "mouth water," so called from the place where the Oonabee River empties into Rice Lake through a delta.

ASPHODEL is a Greek word meaning a plant of the lily family, like the daffodil, which probably abounded there.

ENNISMORE, formerly known as Emily Gore, was named after William Hare, Viscount Ennismore. Possibly the village of Ennismore, in the county of Kerry, Ireland, had an influence on the selection.

SMITH was named after Sir David William Smith, Surveyor-General, who made a map of Upper Canada in 1798. He managed the affairs of the Duke of Northumberland in the county of Northumberland with great ability; no doubt his presence influenced the naming of this township.

DOURO was named after the Duke of Wellington, who achieved the brilliant exploit of crossing the River Douro in the face of the French army under Soult, and driving them with loss from Oporto and beyond the limits of Portugal. Sir Peregrine Maitland served under the Iron Duke.

DUMMER was called after Hon. William Dummer Powell, born at Boston, 1755, Chief Justice of Upper Canada for a considerable period previous to 1825. He, in conjunction with Rev. Dr. Strachan, practically administered affairs in Upper Canada. During his term of office he acquired large tracts of Crown lands.

BELMONT means beautiful mountain. There is a Belmont House in the county of Kilkenny, Ireland.

HARVEY was called after Sir John Harvey, who was appointed Deputy Adjutant-General in the Army in Canada. He planned and took part in the battle of Stoney Creek, June 5th, 1813.

BURLEIGH was named after William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, for forty years a leading Minister under Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth.

"Here lives in state and bounty
Lord of Burleigh, fair and free;
Not a lord in all the country
Is so great a lord as he."
—Tennyson.

METHUEN, named in honour of the Duke of Richmond, Baron of Methuen. The village of Methuen in Scotland is six miles from Perth.

GALWAY, called after the county of Galway in the west of Ireland. The town of Galway was formerly the emporium of Ireland, and its commerce with Spain was considerable.

CAVENDISH, named after Henry Cavendish, a gentleman of great wealth and high intellectual attainments in chemistry and physics. Among other things he measured the density of the earth and discovered the composition of water.

ANSTRUTHER, chosen after a group of two or three towns in Fifeshire, Scotland, bearing the name of Anstruther. This place was the residence of the renowned Maggie Lauder (not Harry), commemorated in the popular song of that name.

CHANDOS. "Duke of Chandos" was one of the titles of the Duke of Buckingham, formerly Richard Granville, who in 1796 married Lady Anne Eliza, daughter of James Brydges, third and last Duke of Chandos.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

The generous and polite man has a pleasant recognition and cheerful word for all he meets. He scatters snubeams wherever he goes. He paves the path of others with smiles. He makes society seem genial and the world delightful to those who else would find them cold, selfish and forlorn. And what he gives is but a tithe of what he receives. Be sociable, then, wherever you go, and wrap your lightest words in tones that are sweet and a spirit that is genial.

* * *

A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything; he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that every one has a hand in it. A sterling character is one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks; he is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive and active. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enemies used to remark: "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will go out of themselves."

* * *

Thousands of young men who have comfortable homes—whose parents are willing to supply them with books and papers—instead of availing themselves of these advantages, spend their long evenings either in idle lounging around corners or in company with frivolous associates, male or female. Thus, winter after winter passes away, each one bringing them nearer to the age of manhood, but not fitting them for the proper discharge of the duties that a full manhood requires. They enter upon the busy stage of life with none of those safeguards which a cultivated intellect throws around its possessor.

It is the folly—and nothing less than folly—that characterizes the conduct of far too many parents in regard to their children, and especially their daughters, who, in some weak moment have behaved indiscreetly, and possibly shamefully. A child is a child, and no act of a parent can make it otherwise. Disinheritance; anger, unkindness, and abuse only aggravate such matters, and what might have been kept a private family sorrow, becomes a public scandal, so crushing the helpless victim that not even a whole lifetime of remorse and repentance can succeed in washing out the blot on her reputation.

Spend some of your evenings at home with your wife and children. If you have an amiable, gentle wife, surely your home must be a pleasant one; but if, from increasing cares or other reasons, she has grown fretful or sullen, who knows but a little more attention or kindness on your part might do a great deal towards the return of the amiability you so much admired in her girlhood. If you would stay at home oftener evenings, treating her with something of the old tenderness, making her believe, at least, that you are not wholly indifferent to her happiness, you would soon see a change for the better in your household.

As birds sing oftener on lowly roofs than palace domes, and roses love best to climb o'er lowly window sills and cottage eaves, so to the poor God's blessings come, freighted with dearest wealth, and to the humble heart his love is sweetest. They who have oftenest bowed to earth with deep afflictions are nearest heaven; and as the rose never gives forth all its sweetness until it is crushed, so human hearts need the good Father's hand to press the blossoms of purity, and love and faith, that He may not have imparted to them their heavenly fragrance in vain.

Many a child goes astray, simply because home lacks sunshine. Many a wife esteems death her best friend, because he who swore before God to "love, honour, and cherish" has forgotten his vows.

Why not be polite at home? Why not use freely the golden coin of courtesy? How sweet they sound, those little words, "thank you," or "you are very kind." Doubly, yes, trebly sweet, from the lips we love, when heart-smiles makes the eye sparkle with the clear light of affection.

* * *

Don't harp on past troubles. When we see a pale nervous woman in the midst of her friends preferring to entertain them with a list of the racking pains she has suffered to a saunter in God's free air and sunshine, we cannot wonder that the rose returns not to the blanched cheek.

* * *

Boys and girls, what is it you can never catch, though you chase after it on the wings of the wind? You can never catch the word that has once left your lips. Once spoken, it is out of your reach; do your best you can never recall it. Therefore, take care what you say. Never speak an unkind word, an impure word, or a profane word.

* * *

In almost every neighbourhood there are invalids, and so accustomed are we to their being sick that we may oftentimes seem indifferent to their suffering and confinement. But to them it never grows old, and much is the good, right here, that we can do. Many and varied are the ways we can help them, these unfortunate ones. In fact, anything which we may do for them in love will be sure to be appreciated and will be seed sown in good ground. A bunch of flowers, a new book or magazine,, a dainty morsel from our table, all of these are trifles, but may brighten up their dreary lives; and then we should visit them, or if they live at a distance we should write them a tender, sympathetic, though cheerful, letter.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLE VANISHES

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

THE STAIRCASE TEST

If You Cannot Pass It Your Health Is Failing

When you suffer acute palpitation of the heart, dizziness or faintness every time you go up stairs; when exertion of any kind leaves you breathless and trembling, it is a warning that your blood is defective—that you are anaemic. If these warnings are neglected worse disorders will follow—perhaps decline and deadly consumption. If you are in this condtion you need the new, good blood of health that has been given to thousands of sufferers by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills banish all the ailments arising from poor blood, tone up the system and make weak men and women well and strong. Miss Elizabeth Campbell, Almonte, Ont., says: "I was living in Pembroke at the time my health failed me. I kept growing weaker every day until I at last grew so weak I could not walk up stairs without help, and I could not go down street without sitting down and resting. My mother got quite anxious about me and took me to a doctor who said he was quite sure he could restore my health. He gave me a bottle of medicine, and I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, but instead of getting stronger I was growing weaker all the time ,and was only a mere shadow of my former self. My parents believed I was in a decline and could not get better. My mother had heard so much about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that she decided I ought to try them. I did not notice much change until I had taken five or six boxes, when a decided improvement set in, and from that on I grew stronger and stronger each day, until through a continued use of the pills I was back to my old-time health and strength. I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best remedy on earth for sick people,, and cannot too strongly urge other weak girls to give them a trial."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LUCINDA'S BUNGALOW

A Short Story.

She stood on the stone doorstep watching the cloud-drifts sweeping leisurely across the blue sky.

That sort of sky always set Lucinda dreaming of days when she had reveled in exhilarating sea breezes and basked in the sunshine and freedom of open field and fragrant woodlands—happy without knowing it.

It was before her father and mother had died and left her to the care of her grandparents, who, in turn, passed away and left her the old ancestral cot buried in the loneliness of the country hills. And the neighbors said: "Lucinda's 35 if she's a day."

If her face and her thoughts had not been turned skyward Lucinda would have seen a singular vehicle halt at the front-yard gate. It was the semblance of a miniature cottage, broad and low, and wonderfully pretty, and on one side of it—the side next to Lucinda—glared obtrusively the word "Bungalow." But the first consciousness of its presence broke in on Lucinda's meditations through the click of the front-yard gate latch, and the figure of a stout, cheery-looking man coming up the old worn path toward her.

"Good morning," and he lifted his hat as he spoke, revealing a slightly bald head.

"Good morning," responded Lucinda, glancing indifferently from the man to the advertising wagon.

"Like to buy one?" he ventured smilingly.

"What is it, a breakfast food, sewing machine or silver polish?" she asked flippantly.

"None of them, nor life insurance, nor the latest dictionary," he said, catching her mood, and his genial smile expanded into an appreciative "ha! ha!" "A bungalow is a one-storied house, much like what you see there," and he pointed to the advertising wagon, "and is suitable for any location. Some of my customers build at the shore, some prefer country life. Wherever one chooses to settle, that is the best place to put a bungalow. Now here are plans to suit every person's fancy," and as he spoke he came confidentially to Lucinda's side and unfolded a collection of blue-print designs.

A little later a neighbor passed by and carried the news all along that Lucinda Harris was "a-sittin' on the front-door steps a-lookin' at pictera with a peddler feller."

Lucinda, like light brigades that move with dispatch and act with effect, was not incumbered with distrust. Having arrived at a decision she acted promptly, which frequently laid her subject to criticism among her neighbors. Her life had been thrust into this colorless environment and, too, a certain unrest had always appealed to her—a vague longing for change, and the bungalow proposition appealed to her. It meant, though, turning her cottage into another form of home. Mr. Jackson generously offered to help her accomplish this, and to select a site, and putting full faith in the man, she eagerly accepted his offer.

She wrote to her brother—not for advice, for her mind was fully made up—but simply informing him of her determination to build a bungalow by the sea. In reply she received an angry remonstrance, denouncing her imbecility in trusting a stranger in the disposal and reinvestment of her small property; but not a whit dismayed, Lucinda went with Mr. Jackson, who proved to be the manager of the Bungalow Building Association, and together they selected a spot at the shore.

The journey, enlivened by picturesque scenery and the society of a travelling companion assiduous in his attentions to her personal comfort seemed short. He talked of his business ventures, his 40 years of "ups and down" of travel and adventure in mining camps, and of the various whims of Fortune's wheel, which luckily turned in his favor at last and he came home to "settle down."

But he confidently told Lucinda that settling down didn't mean much unless one had a home in which to "settle." Lucinda listened and trusted him.

Lucinda's old "front room" took on that redolent atmosphere of home as from time to time Mr. Jackson found it necessary to consult her in relation to the building of the bungalow. Under the soft glow of the hanging lamp business often merged into personalities, and personalities developed into mutual confidences.

In midsummer Lucinda took possession of her new home, and not till then, and after due reflection, did she vouchsafe an answer to her brother's letter.

"Dear brother," she wrote, "even had not Mr. Jackson happened along when he did, I was resolved to leave the old place with its sad memories. I have now my bungalow by the sea and all frets and unpleasant associations are behind me and the great, thrilling ocean is the foreground of my future. I am happy and assured of the wisdom of my investment, for the 'agent' who has conducted my business has asked for my humble self in payment for the bungalow, and we are to be married next week.

"Will you not come to my quiet wedding in the bungalow? In order to set at rest your brotherly anxiety, I will add that he is a respected member of society and has an income adequate to all our needs, irrespective of the Bungalow Building Association.

"Your loving sister,
"LUCINDA."

THE IRISH MOTHER

There's a humble little cottage far away in Tipp'rary,
Where a little Irish mother sits torlorn by the door;
And she's thinkin' av the childre'
while the heart av her is wairy,
With the watchin' for the sight av
thim, the eyes av her are sore.

Ah, poor little Irish mother, sure 'tis
you that's sad an' lonely,
Since they left you, like the wild geese in the spring time fly away;
Though they sind you goold in plinty, sure 'tis thum you're wanting only
Just a glimpse av thim returnin' home across the winthry say.

Sure you're waitin' that returnin' since the day they wint an' left
you,
'Tis that lonesome by the turf-fire through the dhrairy winther
night,
Without wan av thim to spake to,
just as though the death bereft
you
But praised be the Son av Mary,
sure whate'er He wills is right.

Ah, poor little Irish mother far away
in sweet Tipp'rary,
'Tis av you the boys are thinkin'
as in foreign ways they roam,
And between their work they're prayin' to the lovin' Son av Mary,
That He'd sind the ship to bear thim back to their Tipp'rary home.

CONCERNING ACCESSORIES

Quite astonishing is the vogue of decorating the waist with an ornamental belt. Whether it be the high waist or the low one, some kind of belt or sash is necessary as a finishing touch and almost bewildering is the variety of its decoration.

Bands of embroidery on cloth satin an inch and a half wide are among the most effective belts, and give the necessary vivid touch of colour to a neutral tinted gown. Square motifs of Indian embroideries, in soft and beautiful colours, are joined together to form a waist belt for the modish gown of brocaded cloth, and from these hang jewelled fringed tassels.

Sashes of satin ribbon are added with a panel-like effect to many of the new afternoon frocks, with the invariable finish of silk fringe. A charming effect is gained also when the sash is formed by the two long ends of a fichu or shot taffetas, edged with Persian ribbon, which is brought round the waist in the usual fichu manner, and then hangs almost to the hem of the gow.

One of the new notes in the decoration of the waist is to finish the corselet skirt of satin with twists of ribbon in three different colours. Thus a gown of mauve satin has an artistic arrangement of pale rose, azure blue and Nile green ribbon twisted gracefully round the top of the skirt ending in a chou of the united ribbons.

Flat "pump" bows are used to finish some of the new sashes that end at the belt line, as well as buckles or soft knots composed of ribbon. Tiny ruffles of ribbon trim many of the velvet sashes, which are tied at the back of the waist in a long flat bow.

Belts of black ribbon accompany not a few of the smartest coats of the season. They are simply arranged in a three-inch-wide band round the waist, and are finished at the left side with two long ends with fine black soutache and completed by black silk fringe.

The novel point about these belts is that there is no knot or rosette of ribbon at the waist, but the long ends of silk are simply passed over the belt, as though the ribbon or silk had been carelessly tucked through the waistband.

Coloured patent leather belts, with ornamentations of steel and silver buttons will have a great vogue this season for the tailor-made skirt, and these are modish in finger-nail widths for the purpose of merely outlining the waist.

Q. What is astigmatism of the eye?

A. Astigmatism is an uneven curvature of the eye and causes a double focus. As the eye always strives for clear vision, this double focus annoys the brain, and causes headache and nervousness. We make lenses called cylinders to correct astigmatism.

Q. What causes double vision?

A. Double vision is caused by the eye not being in line, that is, one may turn up or have a tendency to do so, or both may turn in, a weak muscular system is the cause, a weak nervous system is back of it all.

We would be pleased to have you call and let us fully explain how such conditions can be relieved by glasses.

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Continued from Friday.

"She relies upon me to procure it for her,' she said.

A rare smile flashed from Wrayson's lips.

"You can't imagine what a relief her sex is to me!" he exclaimed.

"I don't know why," she answered pensively. "Do you know anything about the north of France, Mr. Wrayson?"

"Not much," he answered. "I hope to know more presently."

Her eyes laughed across at him.

"You know what I said about the third person in Paradise?"

"I can't admit your Paradise," he said.

"You are a heretic," she answered. "It is a matter of sex, of course."

"Naturally! Paradise is so relative. It may be the halo hrown round a court in the city or a rose garden in the country ,any place where love is'"

"And may I not love my friend?" she demanded.

Wrayson nodded. His thoughts were travelling fast.

"You may love me,' he answered, the passion suddenly vibrating in his tone. "I will be more faithful than your friend. I will build Paradise for you—wherever you will! I will build the walls so high that no harm or any fear shall pass them."

She waved him back. Something of the old look, which he hated to see, was in her face.

"You must not talk to me like this, Mr. Wrayson," she said. "Indeed you must not."

"Why not?" he demanded. "If there is a reason I will know it."

She looked him steadily in the eyes.

"Can't you imagine one for yourself?" she asked.

He laughed scornfully.

"You don't understand," he said. "There is only one reason in the world that I would admit—I don't even know that I would accept that. The other things don't count. They don't exist."

She looked at him a little incredulously. She was still sitting, and he was standing now before her. Her fingers rested lightly upon the arms of her chair, she was leaning slightly forward as though watching for something in his face.

"Tell me that there is another man," he cried, "that you don't care for me, that you never could care for me, and I will go away and you shall never see my face again. But nothing short of that will drive me from you."

He spoke quickly, his tone was full of nervous passion. It never occurred to her to doubt him.

"You can be what else you like," he continued, "thief, adventuress—murderess! So long as there is no other man! Come to me and I will take you away from it all."

She laughed very softly, and his pulses thrilled at the sound, for there was no note of mockery there; it was the laugh of a woman who listens to hidden music.

"You are a bold lover," she murmured. "Have you been reading romances lately? Do you know that it is the twentieth century, and I have seen you three times? You don't know what you say. You can't mean it'"

"By Heaven, I do!" he cried, and for one exquisite moment he held her in his arms. Then she freed herself with a sudden start. She had lost her composure. Her cheeks were flushed.

"Don't!" she cried sharply. "Remember our first meeting. I am not the sort of person you imagine. I never can be. There are reasons—"

He swept them aside. Something seemed to tell him that if he did not succeed with her now, his opportunity would be gone for ever.

"I will listen to none of them," he declared, standing between her and the door. "They don't matter! Nothing matters! I choose you for my wife, and I will have you. I wouldn't care if you came to me from a prison. Better give in, Louise. I shan't let you escape."

She had indeed something of the look of a beautiful hunted animal as she leaned a little towards him, her eyes riveted upon his, her lips a little parted, her bosom rising and falling quickly. She was taken completely by surprise. She had not given Wrayson credit for such strength of mind or purpose. She had believed entirely in her own mastery over him, or any such assault as he was now making. And she was learning the truth. Love that makes a woman weak lends strength to the man. Their positions were becoming reversed. It was he who was dictating to her'

"I am going away," she said nervously. "You will forget me. You must forget me."

"You shall not go away," he answered, "unless I know where. Don't be afraid. You can keep your secrets, whatever they are. I want to know nothing. Go on exactly with the life you are leading, if it pleases you. I shan't interfere. But you are going to be my wife ,and you shall hot leave London without telling me about it."

"I am leaving London," she faltered, "to-morrow."

"I was thinking," he remarked, calmly, "of taking a little holiday myself."

She laughed uneasily.

"You are absurd," she declared, "and you must go away. Really! The Baroness will be home directly. I would rather, I would very much rather, that she did not find you here."

He held out his arms to her. His eyes were bright with the joy of conquest.

"I will go, Louise," he answered, "but first I will have my answer—and no answer save one will do!"

"She bit her lip. She was moved by some emotion, but he was unable for the moment to classify it.

"I think," she declared, "that you must be the most persistent man on earth."

"You are going to find me so," he assured her.

"Listen," she said firmly, "I will not marry you-"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"On that point," he answered, "I am content to differ from you. Anything else?"

She stamped her foot

"I do not care for you! I do not wish to marry you!" she repeated. "I am going away and I forbid you to follow me."

"No good!" he declared. "I am past all that."

She held up her finger, and glanced backward out of the window.

"It is the Baroness," she said. "I must go and open the door."

For one moment she lay passive in his arms—then he could have sworn that her lips returned his kiss. She was there when they heard the turning of a latchkey in the door." With a little cry she slipped away and left him. The outer door was thrown open, and the Baroness stood upon the threshold.

CHAPTER XX.

The Baroness recognized Wrayson with a little shrug of her shoulders.

"Ah! my dear Mr. Wrayson," she exclaimed, "this is very kind of you. You have been keeping Louise company, I hope. And see what droll things happen! It is your friend, Mr. Barnes, who has brought me home this evening, and who will take a whisky and soda before he goes. Is it not so, my friend?"

She turned around, but there was no immediate response. The Baroness looked over the banisters and beheld her escort in the act of ascending.

"Coming right along," he called out cheerfully. "It was the cabman who tried to stop me. He wanted more than his fare. Found he'd tackled the wrong Johnny this time."

Mr. Sydney Barnes came slowly into view. He was wearing an evening suit, obviously too large, a made-up white tie had slipped round underneath his ear, a considerable fragment of red silk handkerchief was visible between his waistcoat and much crumpled white shirt. An opera hat ,also too large for him, he was wearing very much on the back of his head, and he was smoking a very black cigar, from which he had failed to remove the band. He frowned when he saw Wrayson, but followed the Baroness into the room with a pronounced swagger.

"You two need no introduction, of course," the Baroness remarked. "I am not going to tell you where I found Mr. Barnes. I do not expect to be very much longer in England, so perhaps I am not so careful as I ought to be. Louise, if she knew, would be shocked. Now, Mr Wrayson, do not hurry away. You will take some whisky and soda. I am afraid my young friend has not been very hospitable."

"You are very kind," Wrayson said. "To tell you the truth, I was rather hoping to see Miss Fitzmaurice again. She disappeared rather abruptly."

The Baroness shoo her finger at him in mock reproach.

"You have been misbehaving," she declared. "Never mind. I will go and see what I can do for you."

She stood for a moment before a looking-glass arranging her hair, and then left the room humming a light tune. Sydney Barnes, with his hands in his pockets, flung himself into an easy chair.

"I say," he began, "I don't quite see what you're doing here."

Wrayson looked at him for a moment in supercilious surprise.

"I scarcely see," he answered, "how my movements concern you."

Mr. Barnes was unabashed.

"Oh! chuck it," he declared. "You know what I'm thinking of. To tell you the truth ,I've come to the conclusion that there's some connection between this household and my brother's affairs. That's why I'm palling on to the Baroness. She's a fine woman—class, you know, and all that sort of thing, but what I want is the shino! You tumble?"

Wrayson shrugged his shoulders slightly.

"I wish you success," he said. "Personally, I think that you are wasting your time here."

"Perhaps so," Barnes answered. "I'm taking my own risks."

Wrayson turned away, and at that moment the Baroness re-entered the room.

"My friend," she said, addressing Wrayson, "I can do nothing for you. Whether you have offended Louise or made her happy, I cannot say . But she will not come down. You will not see her again to-night."

"I am sorry," Wrayson answered. "She is going away to-morrow, I understand?"

The Baroness sighed.

"Alas!" she declared, "I must not answer any questions. Louise has forbidden it."

Wrayson took up his hat.

"In that case," he remarked, "there remains nothing for me but to wish you good-night!"

* * * * * *

There was a cab on the rank opposite, and Wrayson, after a moment's hesitation, entered it and was driven to the club. He scarcely expected to find anyone there, but he was in no mood for sleep, and the thought of his own empty rooms chilled him Somewhat to his surprise, however, he found the smoking-room full. The central figure of the most important group was the Colonel, his face beaming with good nature, and his cheeks just a little flushed. He welcomed Wrayson almost boisterously.

"Come along, Herbert," he cried. "Plenty of room . What'll you have to drink, and have you heard the news?"

"Whisky and soda," Wrayson answered, sinking into an easy chair. "and I haven't heard any news."

The Colonel took his cigar from his mouth, and leaned forward in his chair. He had the appearance of a man who was striving to appear more grave than he felt.

"You remember the old chap we saw dining at Luigi's to-night—Bentham, I think you said his name was?"

Wrayson nodded.

"Of course! What about him?"

"He's dead!" the Colonel declared. Wrayson jumped out of his chair.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean it, Colonel?"

"Unfortunately, I do," the Colonel answered. "He was found dead on the stairs leading to his office, about ten o'clock to-night. A most interesting case. The murder, presuming it was a murder, appears to have been committed——"

Wrayson was suddenly pale.

"Murder!" he repeated. "Colonel, do you mean this?"

The Colonel, who hated being interrupted, answered a little testily.

"My dear Wrayson," he expostulated, "is this the sort of thing a man invents for fun? Do listen for a moment, if you can, in patience. It is a deply interesting case. If you remember, it was about nine o'clock when we left Luigi's; Bentham must have gone almost straight to his office, for he was found there dead a very few minutes after ten."

"Who killed him, and why?" Wrayson asked breathlessly.

"That, I suppose, we shall know later," the Colonel answered. "The police will be on their mettle this time, but it isn't a particularly easy case. He was found lying on his face ,stabbed through the heart. That is all anybody knows."

The thoughts went rushing through Wrayson's brain. He remembered the man as he had seemed only a few hours ago, cold, stonily indifferent to young Barnes' passionate questions, inflexibly silent, a man who might easily kindle hatreds, to all appearance without a soft spot or any human feeling. He remembered the close of their interview, and Sydney Barnes' rash threat. The suggested idea clothed itself almost unconsciously with words.

"I have just seen young Barnes," he said. "He has been at the Empire all the evening."

The Colonel lit another cigar.

"It takes a man of nerve and deliberation," he remarked, "to commit murder. From what I have heard of him, I should not imagine your young friend to be possessed of either The lady whom he was entertaining, or rather failing to entertain, at dinner——"

"I have seen her since," Wrayson interrupted shortly. "She went straight to the Alhambra."

The Colonel nodded.

"I would have insured her against even suspicion," he remarked. "She was a large placid woman, of the flabby order of nerves. She will probably faint when she hears what has happened. She might box a man's ears, but her arm would never drive a dagger home into his heart, especially with such beautiful, almost mathematical accuracy. We must look elsewhere, I fancy ,for the person who has paid Bentham's debt to society. Heneage, here, has an interesting theory."

Sciatica AND Lumbago

Suffered for Twenty-five Years and Could Get No Relief

Now Tells of the Wonderful Results Obtained by the Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Sciatica, neuralgia and sciatic rheumatism are the result of a run-down nervous system. For this reason all treatments must necessarily fail which do not build up the nervous system.

Mr. Collins suffered for twenty-five years and never was able to obtain satisfactory treatment until he began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. While the Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the exhausted nervous system, the Kidney-Liver Pills invigorate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont., writes: "It affords me pleasure to be able to speak favourably of two of Dr. Chase's medicines—the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a sufferer for twenty-five years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried almost all the medicines I could hear of, without one particle of benefit, until I commenced to use Dr. Chase's. I noticed an improvement before I had used two boxes, and the benefits obtained by continued use have been wonderful. I have so much confidence in these two medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends, and I have yet to hear of a single case in which they failed to give satisfaction."

Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SAVED FROM THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

"Fruit-a-tives" cured Appendicitis

NEWBURGH, Ont., Feb. 12th, 1910.

"Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years) was taken with terrible pains in the right side. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation. We took her to a Hospital in Kingston where she was again immediately examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once, if we wanted to save her life.

"Luckily for us and for her, an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health".

TAX ON CATS

Bavaria is Probably Leading the World Against the Feline Tribe.

The people of Bavaria and especially of Munich are nothing if not original and they show their originality in a number of ways. They are for instance, about to put a tax of $1.35 a year on cats, probably the first tax of this kind in the world. Furthermore they have given up using matches and have gone back to the flint, steel and tinder, not because they consider this method of producing fire but to avoid paying a new imperial tax of 400 per cent. on the use of matches. As another way of showing their disapproval of the Imperial government's way of putting on taxes the Bavarian Diet has permitted the soldiers of Bavarian regiments to use their spare hours to manufacture cigars for their own use, thus avoiding the internal revenue duty on manufactured cigars.

EXPOSED THE ALPS

The Heat of the Past Summer Affected The Ice Fields.

One of the most remarkable results of the intense heat and drought of the past summer and fall was its effect on the Alps due to the melting of vast snow and icefields. In many cases the altitude of certain ridges was actually lowered, and great stretches of rock were exposed for the first time for many years.

This has been especially true of the Matterhorn, where the snow and ice disappeared entirely, leaving the famous peak naked from top to base, and giving it a totally unfamiliar aspect.

ORIGINAL BURGLARS

How They Operate in the Stores in Paris.

The French have always prided themselves on their originality and inventiveness, and it would seem from the newspapers that these precious qualities are full shared by the national thieves. Some burglars hid themselves in the Rue du Temple, a busy street near the Halles, or central markets, Paris. It was easy enough to break open the door of a jeweller's workshop on the fifth floor and appropriate $750 worth of goods, but less resourceful people might have found it hard to get out of the house unless foreseeing this difficulty, had provided themselves with a rope 80 feet long. Having carefully greased it with a tallow candle, they let themselves down to the third floor balcony, broke a window, forced a cash-box, and took $1000, after which they slid down to the first floor balcony, again made a burglarous entry with profitable results, and, once more using the rope, reached the street and decamped.

THE SMOTHER FLY

Great Damage by The Pest in Two English Counties.

Farmers in Notts and Lincolnshire lost quite $1,000,000 by the ravages of the aphis, known locally as the "smother fly," which ruined over 60,000 acres of turnips and other root crops. In addition to this, it is estimated that the sheep in the two counties, numbering over a million, have decreased in value owing to the shortage of roots, bringing the total loss to $8,500,000. The drought was blamed for the aphis plague.

Police Stop a Funeral.

A ship's fireman, Alfred Sharples, was remanded at Preston on the charge of causing the death of his wife.

Mrs. Sharples died the previous Wednesday, and the funeral was fixed for Saturday afternoon, but in consequence of allegations by neighbors the police intervened and stopped the funeral, the body being removed to the mortuary. At the inquest on Monday night the jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against the husband.

BRONCHITIS,

Huskiness, Throat Catarrh

Delightful Cure Discovered That Cures Quickly.

Old-fashioned remedies were administered through the stomach only, but as it is impossible to swallow anything into the lungs, little benefit ever resulted.

Strong drugs, such as opium, chlorodyne and cocaine, were resorted to, but did more harm than good.

Nowadays, when a doctor meets a case of catarrh — finds the throat filled with mucous—sore all the way down, he prescribes Catarrhozone because he knows it goes direct to the disease.

Catarrhozone cures by antiseptic balsams that are carried by the air you breathe direct to the source of the trouble.

It aids expectoration — clears away the phlegm—carries health-laden vapors to the sore, irritated tissues.

In one minute you experience decided relief with Catarrhozone and invariably it does cure every type of Catarrh, Bronchitis, irritable throat and hoarseness.

Just think of these sure cure without noxious drugs—one that is guaranteed and delightfully pleasant as well. Catarrhozone only, complete for two months' use, $1.00; small (trial) size 50c. at all dealers.

CATARRHOZONE A SURE CURE.

Skin All Covered With Eruption

N. Henri Tardif.

Tried Many Remedies 3 or 4 Years. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

A Quebec man, N. Henri Tardif, of St. Casimir, writes in a letter dated Mar. 31, 1911:

"I had a very bad skin, all covered with eruption, eight years ago. I have had all of both my shoulders covered with it, and the high part of my arms, and my face, but it was the worst on my shoulders. I tried many different remedies to cure it, but nothing was any good. At last I went to an apothecary. He asked me if I had ever used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I told him no, and I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, but I am glad of the same, for Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me of my skin eruption. I spread the Cuticura Ointment on all my sore parts, and I think that in washing my face with the Cuticura Soap, it hindered my eruption from itching and burning. I tried many remedies during three or four years but Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) N. Henri Tardif.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. Address Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 50 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

A GORGEOUS CAFE

New Restaurant in Berlin Where There Will be Continual Music.

Berlin, the city of cafes and music, is shortly to have another palatial establishment in which visitors may sip their coffee or light German beer and listen to the music of well trained orchestras any hour in the twenty-four. The new popular palace, situated in the Potsdamer Platz, in the heart of the city, is to be called the Piccadilly, and some idea of its gigantic size is is afforded by the fact that the proprietor will pay a yearly rental of $80,000 for his premises. The interior furnishings will be of the most luxurious description. Each single chair, of which there will be hundreds in the building will cost $15.00 and will be modelled after the furniture of a well-known royal castle. No fewer than 160,000 electric lamps will illuminate the great building at night, and four orchestras, playing in relays of six hours each, will render never ceasing music for the enjoyment of patrons.

WHAT HE EXPECTED.

The other day, while a minister was walking down the street, his attention was attracted to a boy who was very anxiously eyeing one of the large melons which were in a fruiterer's window. It seemed a good opportunity to sow some good seed in the lad's mind, so, motioning the boy to him, he said:

"My lad, wouldn't you like to steal one of those melons and run off?"

"Yes, sir!" was the prompt reply "I am sorry to hear that," said the good, man.

The boy scratched his head, and then said:

"Well, I 'spect the thing 'ud be green all the way through, so's I couldn't eat it."

QUACKERY IN INDIA

Preparations and Remedies Imposed on the Unsuspecting Natives.

An Indian correspondent has sent to the "Lancet" some pages from a price list issued by a native medicine in Cawnpore. He remarks that it is an example of the extraordinary and uncontrolled quackery that rules, and that it shows the type of remedy for which there is a demand in India. The 480 or so preparations which are all compounded under the eye of "a very able doctor," are guaranteed to be infallible remedies for almost all the ailments and disabilities to which mankind is heir. A charm for removing snakes and scorpions can be bought for the same price as a specific for small pox marks which "removed the complexion." With reference to condensed milk, at 13 annas the tin, "the public is informed not to be deceived by buying cheap milk." Prophylactic bangles and lockets cost only two or three rupees each and effectually ward off "cholera weakness, cold, thinness, fever, cough, inflammation of the eyes, erysipelas, indigestion, smallpox, impurity of the blood etc, and many other diseases to which children are subject. A plaster which has cured hopeless cases will "heal any old man of obstinate ulcer," while if tooth oil is used intelligently the user for the rest of his life, "will have a set of unshaken teeth." Jawahar Mohra, (or tone restorer), "makes a man patient," and Sukha cures "infants who pine away and ultimately die." Although "the inflammation of the kidney is fatal," there is a remedy which never fails to cure it, and the price of a box is two rupees.

POVERTY IN GERMANY

The High Cost of Living Causes Distress Among the Poor.

The high cost of living, general all over Europe, has made itself felt to such an extent in Germany that the various municipal authorities are doing their utmost to find means of alleviating the distress of the poorer classes. Some of these endeavors have been directed towards granting special increase of wages to municipal employes, policemen, postmen, street cleaners, etc., and this example has been followed by some of the larger large firms, one or two of the big German banks having granted their employes special "teurung" (high living cost) increases of salaries, a distinction being made between unmarried men and those who have a family to support. The first experiment in actually providing the masses with cheaper food has, however, been made by the Berlin City Council. This is to be accomplished by making Berlin a city of fish eaters. The authorities will buy sea fish in large quantities at the fishing harbors and sell at low prices through specially appointed fishmongers in the Berlin markets. It is a significant fact that, although fish is, of course, to be seen on the tables of the middle class and upper classes in Berlin, fish consumption, with the exception of the smoked and dried variety, is almost unknown among the working people. Municipal placards of the official red, surmounted with the picture of a fish, have been posted throughout the city calling attention to the new food, and indicating the different markets at which the fish may be obtained.

GAVE AWAY MILITARY SECRETS

A German Sentenced at Leipsic to Six Years in Prison.

A man, named Kreber, has been sentenced at Leipsic to six years' imprisonment, the loss of civil rights for ten years, and to police surveillance during this period, for attempting to deliver military secrets to a foreign Power. It is said that the accused who was a non-commissioned officer at Metz up to September last year, himself in need of money, he approached a French agent with a view to handing over to France the plans of two forts as well as the designs of the fortification's enclosure. His attempts to sell the plans were unsuccessful. As the accused had not shown any repentance for his act, but, on the contrary, had manifested regret because his project had failed, the court deemed it necessary to increase the punishment demanded by the public prosecutor.

Swindler and "Revivalist."

At Llangollen William Rowlands, a gentlemanly-looking young man, was sentenced to six months' hard labour for obtaining money, board and lodging from the Waverley Hotel by false pretences. Margaret Jones, the proprietress of the hotel, said the prisoner took rooms there, saying his parents were to join him in a week. He gave the name of an Anglesey farm owned by his father, from which letters were returned "not known." A long list of previous convictions for similar offences, in some of which the prisoner had masqueraded as a woman, was quoted. During his stay at Llangollen, Rowlands appeared at Calvinistic Methodist chapels, announcing he had an inspired message to deliver, in one instance taking charge of the service and imitating revival methods.

Terrible Night on Mountain.

A young farm servant, Thomas Owen, of Caeglas, Merioneth, went up Moelwyn Mountain to look round the sheep. As he did not return it was thought he had stayed with some relations at Croesor Village for the night. A party went in search, and found the young man in a sad plight. It appears that he tried to climb a wall, which fell upon him, and he passed the night [illegible]

Low Closet for Pots and Pans

The Peerless Peninsular

a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences

You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door — a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

The Peerless
is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.

Grates Easy to Remove

At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel — an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

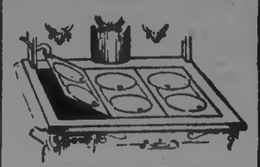
These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

Those unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves — honest stoves — are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good—the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

All modern conveniences have been embodied in the Peerless, too.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.



Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"

illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

TAX ON CATS

Bavaria is Probably Leading the World Against the Feline Tribe.

The people of Bavaria and especially of Munich are nothing if not original and they show their originality in a number of ways. They are for instance, about to put a tax of $1.25 a year on cats, probably the first tax of this kind in the world. Furthermore they have given up using matches and have gone back to the flint, steel and tinder, not because they consider this method of producing fire but to avoid paying a new imperial tax of 400 per cent. on the value of matches. As another way of showing their disapproval of the Imperial government's way of putting on taxes the Bavarian Diet has permitted the soldiers of Bavarian regiments to use their spare hours to manufacture cigars for their own use, thus avoiding the internal revenue duty on manufactured cigars.

EXPOSED THE ALPS

The Heat of the Past Summer Affected The Ice Fields.

One of the most remarkable results of the intense heat and drought of the past summer and fall was its effect on the Alps due to the melting of vast snow and icefields. In many cases the altitude of certain ridges was actually lowered, and great stretches of rock were exposed for the first time for many years.

This has been especially true of the Matterhorn, where the snow and ice disappeared entirely, leaving the famous peak naked from top to base, and giving it a totally unfamiliar aspect.

ORIGINAL BURGLARS

How They Operate in the Stores in Paris.

The French have always prided themselves on their originality and inventiveness, and it would seem from the newspapers that these precious qualities are full shared by the national thieves. Some burglars hid themselves in the Rue du Temple, a busy street near the Halles, or central markets, Paris. It was easy enough to break open the door of a jeweller's workshop on the fifth floor and appropriate $750 worth of goods, but less resourceful people might have found it hard to get out of the house until foreseeing this difficulty, had provided themselves with a rope 80 feet long. Having carefully greased it with a tallow candle, they let themselves down to the third floor balcony, broke a window, forced a cash-box, and took $1000, after which they slid down to the first floor balcony, again made a burglarous entry with profitable results, and, once more using the rope, reached the street and decamped.

THE SMOTHER FLY

Great Damage by The Pest in Two English Counties.

Farmers in Notts and Lincolnshire lost quite $1,000,000 by the ravages of the aphis, known locally as the "smother fly," which ruined over 60,000 acres of turnips and other root crops. In addition to this, it is estimated that the sheep in the two counties, numbering over a million, have decreased in value owing to the shortage of roots, bringing the total loss to $8,500,000. The drought was blamed for the aphis plague.

Police Stop a Funeral.

A ship's fireman, Alfred Sharples, was remanded at Preston on the charge of causing the death of his wife.

Mrs. Sharples died the previous Wednesday, and the funeral was fixed for Saturday afternoon, but in consequence of allegations by neighbors the police intervened and stopped the funeral, the body being removed to the mortuary. At the inquest on Monday night the jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against the husband.

BRONCHITIS, Huskiness, Throat Catarrh

Delightful Cure Discovered That Cures Quickly.

Old-fashioned remedies were administered through the stomach only, but as it is impossible to swallow anything into the lungs, little benefit ever resulted.

Strong drugs, such as opium, chlorodyne and cocaine, were resorted to, but did more harm than good.

Nowadays, when a doctor meets a case of catarrh — finds the throat filled with mucous—sore all the way down, he prescribes Catarrhozone because he knows it goes direct to the disease.

Catarrhozone cures by antiseptic balsams that are carried by the air you breathe direct to the source of the trouble.

It aids expectoration — clears away the phlegm—carries health-laden vapors to the sore irritated tissues.

In one minute you experience decided relief with Catarrhozone and invariably it does cure every type of Catarrh, Bronchitis, irritable throat and hoarseness.

Just think of it—a sure cure without noxious drugs—one, that is guaranteed and delightfully pleasant as well. Catarrhozone only, complete for (two months' use), $1.00; small (trial) size, 25c. at all dealers.

CATARRHOZONE A SURE CURE.

Skin All Covered With Eruption

N. Henri Tardif.

Tried Many Remedies 3 or 4 Years. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

A Quebec man, N. Henri Tardif, of St. Casimir, writes in a letter dated Mar. 31, 1911:

"I had a very bad skin, all covered with eruption, eight years ago. I have had all of both my shoulders covered with it, and the high part of my arms, and my face, but it was the worst on my shoulders. I tried many different remedies to cure it, but nothing was any good. At last I went to an apothecary. He asked me if I had ever used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I told him no, and I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, but I am glad of the same, for Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me of my skin eruption. I spread the Cuticura Ointment on all my sore parts, and I think that in washing my face with the Cuticura Soap, it hindered my eruption from itching and burning. I tried many remedies during three or four years but Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) N. Henri Tardif.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. Address Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 50 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

A GORGEOUS CAFE

New Restaurant in Berlin Where There Will be Continual Music.

Berlin, the city of cafes and music, is shortly to have another palatial establishment in which visitors may sip their coffee or light German beer and listen to the music of well trained orchestras any hour in the twenty-four. The new popular palace, situated in the Potsdamer Platz, in the heart of the city, is to be called the Piccadilly, and some idea of its gigantic size is is afforded by the fact that the proprietor will pay a yearly rental of $80,000 for his premises. The interior furnishings will be of the most luxurious description. Each single chair, of which there will be hundreds in the building will cost $15.00 and will be modelled after the furniture of a well-known royal castle. No fewer than 160,000 electric lamps will illuminate the great building at night and four orchestras, playing in relays of six hours each, will render never-ceasing music for the enjoyment of patrons.

WHAT HE EXPECTED.

The other day, while a minister was walking down the street, his attention was attracted to a boy who was very anxiously eyeing one of the large melons which were in a fruiterer's window. It seemed a good opportunity to sow some good seed in the lad's mind, so, motioning the boy to him, he said:

"My lad, wouldn't you like to steal one of those melons and run off?"

"Yes, sir!" was the prompt reply.

"I am sorry to hear that," said the good man.

The boy scratched his head, and then said:

"Well, I spect the thing 'ud be green all the way through, so's I couldn't eat it."

QUACKERY IN INDIA

Preparations and Remedies Imposed on the Unsuspecting Natives.

An Indian correspondent has sent to the "Lancet" some pages from a price list issued by a native practitioner in Cawapore. He remarks that it is an example of the extremes to which uncontrolled quackery can run, and that it shows the type of remedy for which there is a demand in India. The 480 or so preparations which are all compounded under the eye of "a very able doctor," are guaranteed to be infallible remedies for almost all the ailments and disabilities to which mankind is heir. A charm for removing snakes and scorpions can be bought for the same price as a specific for small pox marks which "improved the complexion." With reference to condensed milk, at 1s annas the tin, "the public is informed not to be deceived by buying cheap milk." Prophylactic bangles and lockets, costing only two or three rupees each and effectually ward off "cholera weakness, cold, thinness, fever cough, inflammation of the eyes, erysipelas, indigestion, smallpox, impurity of the blood &c, and many other diseases to which children are subject. A plaster which has cured hopeless cases will "heal any old man of obstinate ulcer," while if tooth oil is used intelligently the user, for the rest of his life, "will have a set of unshaken teeth." Jawahar Mohra, (or tone restorer), "makes a man patient," and Sukha cures "infants who pine away and ultimately die." Although "the inflammation of the kidney is fatal," there is a remedy which never fails to cure it, and the price of a box is two rupees.

POVERTY IN GERMANY

The High Cost of Living Causes Distress Among the Poor.

The high cost of living, general all over Europe, has made itself felt to such an extent in Germany that the various municipal authorities are doing their utmost to find means of alleviating the distress of the poorer classes. Some of these endeavors have been directed towards granting special increase of wages to municipal employes, policemen, postmen, street cleaners, etc., and this example has been followed by some of the larger large firms, one or two of the big German banks having granted their employes special "teurung" (high living cost) increases of salaries, a distinction being made between unmarried men and those who have a family to support. The first experiment in actually providing the masses with cheaper food has, however, been made by the Berlin City Council. This is to be accomplished by making Berlin a city of fish eaters. The authorities will buy sea fish in large quantities at the fishing harbors and sell at low prices through specially appointed fishmongers in the Berlin markets. It is a significant fact that, although fish is, of course, to be seen on the tables of the middle class and upper classes in Berlin, fish consumption, with the exception of the smoked and dried variety, is almost unknown among the working people. Municipal placards of the official red, surmounted with the picture of a fish, have been posted throughout the city calling attention to the new food, and indicating the different markets at which the fish may be obtained.

GAVE AWAY MILITARY SECRETS

A German Sentenced at Leipsic to Six Years in Prison.

A man, named Kreber, has been sentenced at Leipsic to six years' imprisonment, the loss of civil rights for ten years, and to police surveillance during this period, for attempting to deliver military secrets to a foreign Power. It is said that the accused who was a non-commissioned officer at Metz up to September last year, himself in need of money, he approached a French agent with a view to handing over to France the plans of two forts as well as the designs of the fortification's enclosure. His attempts to sell the plans were unsuccessful. As the accused had not shown any repentance for his act, but, on the contrary, had manifested regret because his project had failed, the court deemed it necessary to increase the punishment demanded by the public prosecutor.

Swindler and "Revivalist."

At Llangollen William Rowlands, a gentlemanly-looking young man, was sentenced to six months' hard labour for obtaining money, board and lodging from the Waverley Hotel by false pretences. Margaret Jones, the proprietress of the hotel, said the prisoner took rooms there, saying his parents were to join him in a week. He gave the name of an Anglesey farm owned by his father, from which letters were returned "not known." A long list of previous convictions for similar offences, in some of which the prisoner had masqueraded as a woman, was quoted. During his stay at Llangollen, Rowlands appeared at Calvinistic Methodist chapels, announcing he had an inspired message to deliver, in one instance taking charge of the service and imitating revival methods.

Terrible Night on Mountain.

A young farm servant, Thomas Owen, of Cneglas, Merioneth, went up Moelwyn Mountain to look round the sheep. As he did not return it was thought he had stayed with some relations at Croesor Village for the night. A party went in search, and found the young man in a sad plight. It appears that he tried to climb a wall, which fell upon him, and he passed the night [illegible]

The Peerless Peninsular

a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences

You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door — a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.

Grates Easy to Remove — an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves — honest stoves — are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good—the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

All modern conveniences have been embodied in the Peerless, too.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.

Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"

illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

THE RECORD on the SCREEN

An Adventure of Peter Crewe—"The Man with the Camera Eyes."

By Harold Carter.

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.)

The case against Sanford certainly looked black enough. He had been arrested upon the charge of having murdered his wife, and the evidence against him was as follows:

His wife, a vaudeville actress, had left him the preceding spring and had refused to return to him. The principal cause for this separation appeared to have been his inability to support her in comfort, so that she preferred independence, with the certainty of a moderate income through her own efforts, to the tiresome routine of household duties in the home of a man earning a clerk's salary. During the unreasonable months of July and August she had earned a livelihood by posing for moving picture plays. Sanford had repeatedly visited her at her apartment to beseech her to return to him. He had been heard to utter threats in case she remained obdurate. On the occasion of his last visit previous to the tragedy, his wife had been heard to order him out of the house, and she had forbidden him to molest her further.

One week later, at nine o'clock in the morning, the maid who came in daily to clean the apartment found Mrs. Sanford lying dead in a chair with a deep stab wound immediately beneath the right arm. Death had evidently been almost instantaneous, for there was no sign of a struggle, and the woman's face was as tranquil as though she had flung herself down upon the cushions for a brief rest after the labors of the day.

The chief witness against Sanford was the woman who rented the apartment adjacent to Mrs. Sanford's. She testified that she had met Sanford upon the stairs on the preceding evening, had seen him enter his wife's apartment, and subsequently heard the sounds of a violent altercation, after which Sanford left the house in a condition of intense excitement. Two hours or so later she heard him return and ring Mrs. Sanford's bell. She heard voices raised in altercation in the apartment and heard Sanford again leave, but in a stealthy and secretive manner wholly unlike his usual method of departure. She heard [illegible] and listened at the wall, but could make out no further sound next door. Doubtless the murder had already been accomplished.

The weapon with which the murder had been committed was found in a contiguous building lot next day. It was a Malay kris, a knife with an incredibly keen edge, which Mrs. Sanford had owned, and the murder had been committed with an upward thrust. Upon the right side of the ivory handle, when the blade was held edge upward, were the blood-prints of four gloved fingers.

When called in for the defense I asked Sanford to plead guilty to manslaughter. I told him there was every reason to hope that he would escape with a sentence of fifteen or twenty years. In the first place, the fact that he had worn gloves, in the second the fact that the weapon had been taken from Mrs. Sanford's wall, where it had hung, clearly indicated absence of premeditation; while the jury would show every consideration to a man whose wife had deserted him. But Sanford obstinately insisted that he was innocent. He admitted that he had called on Mrs. Sanford the evening before the tragedy to induce her to return to him. She had refused, he said, and taunted him with the story of a rival for whose sake she intended to obtain a divorce.

I was only half convinced, in spite of the vehemence of Sanford's denial. I have heard criminals assert their innocence most convincingly, only to admit their guilt after conviction.

"Have you any theory as to who the murderer was?" I asked.

"The man she taunted me about," cried Sanford. "He had been pestering her for weeks to divorce me and marry him, had threatened her with death unless she consented. She pretended to me that she intended to comply; but I know in my heart that she always loved me. If I had only earned more money she would have come back to me. Do you think I should have hung round her for months without some reasonable hope? I tell you she hated that fellow; she just tried to play each of us off against the other."

Sanford insisted that this man had been the second visitor on the night of the murder, and had slain Mrs. Sanford in a jealous rage when she finally refused to marry him. But he had never seen him and knew nothing of his identity.

That was all I had to go upon. The woman in the apartment next to Mrs. Sanford's admitted that she had not actually seen Sanford return on the night of the murder. She was convinced, however, that the second visitor was he. She had no reason for this conviction, but she was all the more certain of it.

I was willing to believe that Sanford had had a rival for Mrs. Sanford's affections, and that he had frequently visited the woman. Probably she had been holding off both men until she could decide to which one it would prove more profitable to attach herself. In fact, Mrs. Sanford had had frequent visitors; she was an attractive woman, and it was not hard to believe that some of them must have fallen in love with her. But that any of these had murdered her seemed quite unlikely. The particular rival of whom Sanford spoke was quite unknown to Mrs. Sanford's acquaintances; if such an one existed, his identity had been skilfully concealed. To discover him seemed an impossibility. There was no letter, no shred of evidence, pointing to such a man.

In my perplexity I turned to Crewe. If anyone could help me run down this mysterious suspect I knew this man could. He had solved many a perplexing problem for me through the aid of his wonderful visualizing powers. No image that passed before the camera-like eyes of Peter Crewe was ever forgotten.

"Let us begin by assuming that such a man exists," said Crewe, when he had heard my story attentively. "Are there any photographs of men in Mrs. Sanford's apartment?"

There were dozens of photographs of both men and women. In fact Mrs. Sanford had had a hobby for collecting photographs of all her acquaintances. The apartment had been sealed by the police, but, upon obtaining an order from the authorities, we were enabled to enter. We found photographs all round the sitting room.

"If it is one of these," I said, "nobody knows which one."

"That is immaterial, so long as it is one of them," said Crewe, focussing his eyes upon each in turn. He remained thus for several seconds in front of each photograph, as though some time were needed for the action of the light to impress the images indelibly upon the retina.

"Now," said Crewe, "the probabilities are that she met him in the moving picture company for which she posed. Actresses and actors generally form a close corporation, and we may almost take it for granted that they belonged to the same trade. By the way, Langton, the photograph that we are looking for is probably not here."

"Not here?" I ejaculated.

"No," he said, pointing to the velvet mantel cover. "Do you see anything strange there? Surely you must, for it is almost impossible to keep a secret from velvet."

"I see some dust," I said.

"Look here—and here—and here," said Crewe impatiently. "Do you see that faint line along the nap of the velvet? That is where a photograph stood for several weeks, but stands no longer. Observe that there is an edging of dust on either side of it. And here, and here, these photographs beside it once stood, but they were recently moved up about an inch and a half closer. Langton, the murderer undoubtedly took away his photograph and moved up the photographs on either side in order to cover the gap left by the removal. It was ingenious, and would have baffled the police. But velvet tells its own tale, and all the rubbing in the world would not have erased those creases in the nap. We are, then, bent upon the search for a man whose photograph is not here—Mrs. Sanford's only friend whom we have not seen. It simplifies matters enormously!"

"How?" I asked.

"In the first place it bears out your theory as to the existence of such a man, whom we have hitherto only assumed to exist. Secondly, we know all Mrs. Sanford's friends but him. Consequently, when we see him in the moving pictures we know him instantly. But it is essential, in order to verify certain suspicions that I entertain, that we should see the knife."

"That can be done," I said. "It is in the custody of the police, but I have the right of inspection. Let us go round to police headquarters immediately."

No demur was made to our examining the weapon, although a detective remained at hand while we looked at it. It was a formidable affair, and one which had evidently been put to use by its Malay owner before it crossed the seas to become the property of the luckless actress. Its blade curled in a succession of waves, and it was as keen as the finest razor. Upon the right side, when held blade upward, appeared the bloody glove-prints.

"If them was only finger prints, now," said the detective, "we'd know who done it instantly. Fingers is never the same, but gloves baffles us."

"On the contrary," said Crewe, "I think we shall run the murderer to earth with equal facility."

"You've got him, that's why," said the detective, chuckling. "Gents, it's as clean a case against the accused as we're handled this year."

"Not if he knows how to pitch quoits," said Crewe, sharply.

"What's that you say?" asked the detective.

"I said, 'not if he knows how to pitch quoits,'" said Crewe. "Come, Langton, this is a very important point. We must stop in at a sporting shop and get some quoits. I suppose the prisoner will be allowed to pitch them in the prison yard?"

I was lost in amazement at this new scheme of Crewe's, but I knew that it was useless to ask for an explanation until the unfolding of the plot. We purchased a half dozen quoits and took them to our prisoner, to whom I introduced my companion. Sanford was inclined to be sullen at first, and demurred when requested to pitch the quoits.

"Sanford," I whispered, "there's more in this than you or I know. Don't be obstinate. Mr. Crewe has got men out of worse troubles, and apparently by just such aimless means."

"You can't hand him those things, gentlemen," said the jailer, "without a special order. I'm sorry, but that's the strict rule."

"Well, then," said Crewe, "let me see you pitch them in imagination. Now, here is the board. You have a quoit in your hand. Now heave it."

Sanford complied in a reluctant manner. Though his action was not very graphic, it evidently satisfied Crewe.

"Excellent, Langton," he commented. "I have learned all that it was necessary to know. And now we have to find Mrs. Sanford's friend whose photograph was removed from the mantel."

"And that," I said, "is the beginning of the whole difficulty. We seem to be no nearer that than at the first."

"If we can find the identity of the man," said Crewe, "the rest will be easy. Now the probabilities are strongly in favor of his having acted in the same company with her. In such event we shall find him upon the screen at some moving picture show."

"But," I interpolated, "how will you know it is the man? Will you suspect every actor whose photograph was not among Mrs. Sanford's effects? It seems to me you are stretching your point very far. I confess I do not know what your clue is."

"Patience, Langton," said Crewe, smiling. "If I were to tell you I should cease to be a mystery and become a very ordinary mortal in your eyes. I confess that I enjoy the role of enigma."

The company for which Mrs. Sanford had posed was at this time advertising a new play daily. It controlled some three or four dozen moving picture theaters in town, and as the plays grew stale they were sent out into the country districts. To find the man we were seeking, it would therefore be necessary to make a careful and methodical investigation of all the theaters which this company controlled. We spent nearly a week of nights in our search before we found what we were looking for.

It was at a little cheap theater in a slum that had grown up among a maze of shops that catered to the needs of the residents in a new district of high flats and ostentatious, if overblown, wealth. The play was a typical southern drama. In a cell crouched the negro, arrested upon a charge of murder. Outside collected the mob, infuriated with liquor, thirsting for the prisoner's blood. With ropes and pistols in their hands they demanded that the sheriff bring out his prisoner.

Then the sheriff's daughter came out to persuade the crowd to abandon its intentions. As the girl tripped forward across the screen Crewe and I recognized Mrs. Sanford.

Awed for an instant, the mob quickly regained its courage. It demanded that the sheriff come out in person. Among the leaders of the crowd I recognized several of the originals of Mrs. Sanford's photographs. Evidently Crewe's theory was correct—that she selected her friends from among her own profession.

Suddenly the jail doors flew open and the sheriff came out in person. He strode forward, tall, scowling, menacing. In one hand he held a revolver, and, as he came to a stop, he pointed this at the breast of the mob leader.

"There is our murderer," Crewe whispered to me, in the moment of tense interest and silence that followed the denouement.

The scene ended and a long-drawn sigh went up from the audience in the little theater. Single-handed, the sheriff had defied the crowd; with his menacing revolver he had driven them from the jail precincts. What next? The interval was long and tantalizing, and every shadowy profile in the audience seemed to disclose a mouth that gaped for some sensational climax.

"That is our man," repeated Crewe with sure conviction.

I was conscious of a sensation of rising anger. It angered me to be made the butt of his fantasies, to sit beside him and hear him calmly announce his conclusions while my mind was striving painfully to pass from one inference to the next.

"Well, I won't dispute your statement," I rejoined. "But even if it is—I see no reason why it should be, but even if it is—how are you going to locate him? His photograph may be doings stunts on the screen while the man in person is well on his way to Alaska or South America, or Timbucktoo."

"They always come back," said Crewe.

"Why, the first instinct of any murderer is flight."

"Not in crimes of jealousy," Crewe answered. "And then there is the thrill of seeing an innocent man arrested and likely to suffer the penalty for the crime. No, no, Langton, our friend is not very far from this city. I should not be surprised to come upon him any day, in the court, the street. Besides, you must remember that no photograph of him exists; he thinks he is secure."

"And yet I'm willing to wager," said I, "that, granting your theories are true, which I do not for the moment admit, the original of that sheriff is not within a thousand miles of us at this moment."

A new scene was thrown upon the screen. The gaping mouths opened wider; the audience settled down for its further installment of thrill. And then—I think my hair verily stood upon end—as if by some magnetic compulsion my eyes turned toward a man seated upon the end bench immediately across the aisle. There was the original of the sheriff in the play, seated with folded arms, but staring as if hypnotized at that phantasm of himself that strode and swore and played the hero by the side of his trembling daughter, while the mob menaced them, yet impotent before the revolver which he held in the crooks of his strong right arm.

I turned to Crewe. I caught his arm. "Look! Look!" I whispered, pointing.

For once my companion appeared to lose his self-possession. His eyes shifted alternately from the play-actor upon the screen to the man on the bench and back again.

"Langton," he said, "for once you get the better of me. Fool that I was, I was so absorbed in theorizing that I didn't look. I didn't dare to hope it might be true. Watch him and, when the act ends, we will take seats on either side of him. You sit on his left and keep your eyes on his hand—his left hand."

We took our places accordingly as soon as the moving figures faded from the screen. The man never stirred as we sat down beside him. His gaze was fixed singly upon the screen, and he waited for the final act of the drama. All round us rose the excited hum of voices. Crewe touched our man upon the arm, and he started in his place and leaned toward him nervously.

"Keep quiet," said Crewe in a warning voice. "After this act I want you to come with me and explain about the murder of Mrs. Sanford."

Quick as a flash the man's left hand went down toward his hip pocket. I caught it and compressed it firmly between my own.

"Well done, Langton," said Crewe in a whisper. "Now, sir, will you come quietly?"

A shiver ran through our captive's frame. He turned his eyes from one to another of us. Then he seemed to break down and he collapsed in his seat limply.

"I killed her," he muttered. "Do what you like with me. I meant to give myself up anyway. Every day I have haunted the district, hoping that I might be arrested, intending to confess, but I hadn't the nerve. I am glad it's over."

"Will you come now?" said Crewe.

"Let me see the last act," he pleaded. "My God, you don't know what it means to realize that I shall never see her face again in life, except upon that screen. I've come here nightly to look at her. Let me wait till the end."

"On one condition," said Crewe. "Langton, take the pistol out of his left hip pocket."

"What I still fail to understand," I said to Crewe, "is how you came to associate this man with the murder. Even if his photograph were not among Mrs. Sanford's effects, still there must have been many of her acquaintances who were similarly absent. To me it all seems like a happy guess."

"The only guess," said Crewe, "was in the assumption that the murderer had been an actor in the same company. And that was rather a probability than a fortunate hypothesis."

"But what enabled you to feel so sure that you were able to charge the man directly with the commission of the crime?"

"Let us go back a way," Crewe answered. "The wound, if you remember, was immediately beneath the woman's right arm. The murder had been committed while she lay back in her chair."

"Yes."

"Did it occur to you that the murderer must have stood in a very cramped position to inflict the wound in such a location? And that it would be almost impossible to drive home the steel forcibly enough to cause immediate death?"

"I confess that it did not. The evidence against Sanford seemed so convincing."

"When you saw the knife, did you deduce anything from the fact that the finger-prints were on the right side of the blade?"

"Where else would they be?"

"Take out your pocket-knife. Open it. Hold it edge upward. So. Now on which side are the finger prints?"

"On the left side," I said, much chagrined.

"Then the inference is—?"

"That the murderer was left-handed."

"Exactly; and this accounts for the position of the wound. If he held the weapon in his left hand the blow would fall most naturally where it did. Many people, Langton, are partly left-handed; that is to say, having been trained to the use of the right hand, they revert to their natural instinct in moments of excitement. Our murderer was doubtless one of this large class; therefore it is not necessary to suppose that he used his left hand habitually, in which event he would have left traces that would have aroused the attention even of the stupid police. Well, then, when I went to the moving picture show I was looking for an unknown man with a left-handed instinct. Did you notice nothing in that scene with the mob?"

"He held his pistol in his left hand!" I exclaimed.

"Yes. But you saw it and let it slip through the gates of memory."

"One more question? Why the quoits?"

"Merely to ascertain beyond a doubt that our friend Sanford was not left-handed himself," said Crewe.

Quick as a flash the man's left hand went down toward his hip pocket.

PEOPLE WHO NEVER EXISTED

Immense Circle of Acquaintances Created for Us by Minds of Great Writers.

An epthalast's dictionary of the novels of Sir Walter Scott informs us that there are no less than 2,536 characters in his stories. These figures serve to make us realize how surprisingly large is the circle of purely imaginative acquaintances whose names and characteristics and stories the lover of literature and art stores in his memory in the course of a lifetime, and how cosmopolitan the company is.

In infancy we are introduced to the early racial circle of acquaintances whom we inherit from our earliest ancestors—fairies good and wicked, heroes of many climes, imaginary people whom we never forget and do not allow to be forgotten by those who come after us. Then follow the giants of childhood—Robinson Crusoe, Christian the Pilgrim, Don Quixote, Gulliver. Passing acquaintances, once liked, but readily forgotten, we pass over. And now the circle widens suddenly. The companions of a lifetime come trooping out of the past and present—Homer's heroes and heroines, King Arthur's court, Canterbury pilgrims, Shakespeare's immortal company, the men and women Thackeray drew, a few of George Eliot's characters, Dickens' unforgettable types, and from abroad, Dumas' swashbucklers, Balzac's crowded human comedy, some of Daudet's personages, Tolstoy's Anna, Kipling's Soldiers Three and jungle folk, Hester Pryune, Meredith's great creations, Anatole France's M. Bergeret and his contemporaries.—New York Tribune.

Peace Wave Swept Ancient Egypt.

Until Cambyses with his Persian myriads swept across defeated Khem, and Phoenicia and Greece, adopting her stored-up wisdom, added thereto the graces of a more artistic ornamentation and aggressive commercial enterprise, Egypt led all nations in the arts of peace and the accumulation of wealth by peaceful trade. And while it is true that individual enterprise was largely hampered by the royal control of foreign trade, it must be remembered that the king acted largely as a trustee for his people and that the Egyptians under most of their sovereigns probably suffered less from plague and famine and were more justly ruled than most of their contemporaries.—"Nobility of the Trades—The Merchant," Charles Winslow Hall, in the National Magazine.

No Servant Puzzle in Japan.

"Give me beautiful Japan, with its rest and quiet, its peace and comfort, where the maid does not disturb one's good humor by announcing her departure at a crucial moment, and where a woman does not have to deny herself a new hat to pay the cook," said Mrs. Harry R. Shattuck of Chicago, who recently returned from Japan to settle an estate left her by her sister, Mrs. F. Pine.

"If the women of the United States were all aware of the idyllic conditions prevailing on the servant problem in Japan, they would cease worrying about the influx of the Japanese into this country and would find reason to worry about the probable exodus of American households.

"The best Japanese servant obtainable commands only $10 a month, and there is always that peaceful knowledge that if she quits there is another to take her place."—Washington Herald.

Quarter—World.

A Parisienne objected to being called a demi-mondaine by a certain French journalist. In his next article he referred to her as a quart-de-mondaine. Even then she wasn't contented, it is said.

WOMAN'S COURAGE IS HIGH

English Sociologist Advances the Theory That This Is Due to the Maternal Instinct.

In high police circles woman's trait of courage that exceeds their physical strength is regarded as no new manifestation in the proverbially weaker sex.

"Ever since I became associated with police work," said one experienced officer, "I have noticed that women seemed always ready to help any one in apparent difficulties. Perhaps because they are weak themselves they are disposed readily to help the weaker side without thought of consequences to themselves."

A highly interesting explanation of this undoubted bravery in women was vouchsafed by J. W. Slaughter, the eminent English sociologist, who assigned female courage largely to the maternal instinct. "Nothing on earth can be more ferocious, more dangerous male animal defending her young. The maternal instinct in woman is in itself an inspiration to courage. You will never see a woman on the edge of a crowd taking the side of the upper dog. Women, moreover, act more directly than men. They are more impulsive and less calculating.

"We are accustomed to think of women as afraid of this or that, but it is because they have not really had experience. Courage is, after all, a matter of experience. One is not afraid of things one is used to or knows how to deal with.

The Man Under the Bed.

Miss Melissa Impson had regularly looked under her bed for—odd years. In all that time she had never found a man under it. People often laughed at her, but she did not care and went on looking under her bed each day.

Years went by without the expected happening.

Then, on this day, she went into the bedroom of her luxuriously furnished home and was standing at the window when she heard an unmistakable sound. It was under her bed and just the sound she expected. Without a sign of fear she turned on the lights and walked over to the bed, turned up the draperies.

"How are you getting along?" she called out without a quiver.

"I'm almost through," came back a muffled voice.

"That is good," she returned calmly and walked out of the room.

For it was housecleaning time, and the man was operating a vacuum cleaner.—Judge.

WILL NOT POSE AS HEROINE

Anna Bromley, Given Carnegie Medal for Saving Man, Declares She Was Frightened.

Anna O. Bromley, the pretty sixteen-year-old student at the Margaret Morrison Carnegie schools, at Washington, who has been voted a bronze medal and $2,000 for education by the Carnegie hero commission for life-saving, does not like being called a heroine and being slapped on the back. She said so today: "Instead of being very brave and all that, when I went into the water after Philip Fackenthall, I must confess that I was scared to death," stammered the little heroine. "I've been a good swimmer since I was ten years old, and I don't think I did anything so wonderful. I heard the man scream and I saw his scared eyes, and I was out of the boat diving for him before I thought. Maybe, if I had stopped to think I would not have done it; but I didn't have time to think. I didn't have time to even get frightened until after I was was fighting with Mr. Fackenthall to keep him from climbing up on my shoulders." Miss Bromley is studying cooking at the Margaret Morrison schools. She will go to the home of her father, a Uniontown, Pa., minister, and ask whether she shall accept the award.

The Remnant.

This world is full of people whose whole happiness and inner salvation depend on their doctrine and practice of the remnant. We have referred already to the decay and obscurity of later life. But the position is equally true of multitudes in their prime. With them also the fragment is all that seems left. They have lost the thing which made life desirable. Their fortune has gone, or their friend, or their health. Passion has wrought disillusion. The man or woman on whom they had staked their affections is not what they thought. The cup which brimmed and sparkled has turned into a draught of bitterness. Is this, then, life's defeat? Not unless we so choose. There is no loss of fortune, no wreck of personal affection, no disaster in the sphere of the visible but can be turned by the soul's inner energy into some higher phase of the living.—J. Brierley.

Pays for itself in fuel saved

Don't allow a few extra dollars to prevent you from taking the perfect-cooking, sure-baking, easily-regulated Pandora in place of a cheaper stove. In a season or two Pandora will pay the difference in the fuel it will save—and it will keep on saving until it has paid for itself.

Pandora special flue construction makes fuel do double duty. Wide fire box is another fuel economizer. The steel oven heats quicker than a ca[illegible] thus saving still more fuel. Further economizing features will be explained by the McClary Agent.

MINISTERIAL FACTS

Religion and Nationality of the New Members

The aggregate age of the eighteen Ministers in the Borden Government is 963 years, and the average age 54 years. Hon. Geo. E. Foster, with his 64 years, is the oldest member and the only one of previous experience with the Cabinet Council room. Hon. W. T. White is the baby member both in point of years and in point of experience of public life. He is 44 years old and young in active politics. Next to him comes Hon. Robert Rogers, who is 47 years old. Mr. Foster is the only sexagenarian. The other fifteen are all between fifty and sixty. Premier Borden is fifty-seven, just two years older than was Sir Wilfrid Laurier when he assumed the Premiership. Compared with the Laurier Ministry at its birth, the new Ministry is of practically the same average age. Hon. Clifford Sifton, then only 35 years old, was the baby of Sir Wilfrid's original Cabinet, and Hon. Richard Scott, with his 71 years, was the oldest veteran. Sixteen members of the new Cabinet are Canadian born; one member, Hon. Martin Burrell, was born in England, and another member, Hon. George H. Perley, was born in New Hampshire. Not a single one of the eighteen Ministers is of undiluted Scotch stock. Hon. Mr. Cochrane had a Scotch ancestry on his father's side, but his mother was Irish. Hon. Messrs. Borden, Rogers, Hazen, Burrell, Foster, Kemp and Crothers are of English stock. Hon. Messrs. Doherty, White, Reid, Lougheed, Roche, and Hughes are of Irish stock. Hon. Messrs. Nantel and Pelletier are of French stock, and Mr. Monk of Anglo-French stock, and Mr. Perley of Welsh stock. The Scotch, who have hitherto always furnished a notable proportion of the nation's rulers, are mysteriously missing from the Borden Cabinet. And by the same token the Presbyterians are almost reduced to the vanishing point. The Macdonald and Mackenzie Cabinets averaged about one-third Scotch and one-half Presbyterian. In Sir Wilfrid's Ministry there were always three or four good Scotch names, with an extra Presbyterian or two. Presbyterians are not likely to object because there are seven Anglicans, four Roman Catholics, and four Methodists in the Cabinet, compared with only two Presbyterians—Hon. Messrs. White and Reid. The Anglicans are Hon. Messrs. Borden, Rogers, Hazen, Burrell, Lougheed, Roche and Perley. The Catholics are Hon. Messrs. Monk, Nantel, Pelletier and Doherty, and the Methodists, Hon. Messrs. Kemp, Crothers, Hughes and Cochrane. Hon. Geo. E. Foster is the lone Baptist.

FOUR TUNNELS

Difficult C.N.R. Construction Through British Columbia

A piece of railway construction that is almost unique is now under way on the British Columbia Division of the Canadian Northern Railway. It is a three-mile stretch between Spence's Bridge and Walhachin, located at a point about an equal distance from the towns of Lytton and Ashcroft, and in that strip of right of way four tunnels are to be built. One will be fifteen hundred feet in length, another a thousand feet, and the two others five hundred feet each. Recently six hundred men were employed there, but this number will probably be doubled in the immediate future. Owing to the anxiety of the Canadian Northern to complete the entire section of their line from Edmonton to Vancouver, it is probable that construction work will be proceeded with during the winter. This, however, should prove in no sense a hardship, because of the mellow climate of the coast province and of the fact that this underground cutting will place the men employed beyond the interference of conditions obtaining outside.

In addition to this section of heavy rock work, there are two other tunnels to be built in this mountain district that are even of greater size. One of these, which is located near the town of Yale, is to be almost half a mile long, or, to be exact, 2,070 feet. The other bore is to be made in the Black Canyon close to the town of Ashcroft. Already the contractor in charge is busy at work on the Yale tunnel, and a very large staff of men is employed. The portals have been driven at both ends, and the drillers are hard at work. The job will be pushed forward as vigorously as possible, and there seems to be no scarcity of white labor.

IRON NEAR PRINCE RUPERT

What is said to be one of the finest iron properties yet found in the Prince Rupert district has been located on one of the islands within a few miles of Prince Rupert. As soon as further investigation of the property has been made development will proceed. Indications of iron followed up by surface investigation by expert prospectors lead to the certainty that a large lead of ore exists on the spot. From the quality of the samples submitted to test it is estimated that the iron deposits represents the finest of ore.

POWER FOR FARMERS

The machinery purchased in Europe by Hon. Adam Beck will be used throughout the province by a staff of demonstrators sent out to show the farmers and their wives the many varieties of labor-saving methods the hydro-electric scheme makes possible. Electric milking machines will be demonstrated. Some of the machinery will be installed at the Ontario Agricultural Farm at Guelph and there will be an electric exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition next year.

THE NEW CAMPBELLTON

There are in Campbellton, N.B., very few traces of the great fire. Substantial residences are taking the place of the old shacks, and public buildings are rapidly nearing completion. The new town is much better laid out than the old one, and the buildings of a much better character. There are no idle men in the town, and the general condition of affairs is said to be prosperous.

COMPRESSED FUEL

A New Industry Which Has Been Established at Winnipeg

A new plant has been built at Winnipeg to carry on the manufacture of compressed fuel. The plant represents an expenditure of $100,000. The method employed in the manufacture of these briquettes is very simple. The dust is finely ground through a set of heavy rollers, and is then mixed with a small proportion of pitch so as to make the particles blend together. There are various other ingredients used. After the mixing process is completed, it is submitted to a great pressure and passed through a set of rollers which contain a large number of small cups; from these cups it is discharged on to a long travelling belt, about 750 feet in length. The reason for using this length of belt is that it allows the bricks to cool off before being emptied into the bin, which holds about 1,200 tons. The special advantages claimed for this fuel are that it burns more freely and kindles quicker than hard coal; it leaves no clinker, and is as free from dust as hard coal; it will hold a long heat when only a small quantity is in the fire box; it is admirably suited to use in kitchen range, open grate, and furnace. It is selling at $9 per ton. A few hundred tons have been put on the market.

SARDINE FISHERIES

An Autumn Industry in New Brunswick that Pays

The fishermen along the coast of St. John and Charlotte counties in New Brunswick are busy taking sardine herrings, which are sold chiefly to the sardine factories in Eastport and Lubec, Me. By a strained interpretation of the American law, sardines which are taken into the Maine ports in American vessels with American captains are accepted as American fish; although they were taken in provincial waters by provincial fishermen. Therefore, vessels from Eastport and Lubec go along the shore and load up with sardines, paying from $4 to $6 per hogshead. These little fish are taken in enormous quantities. It is stated that in one weir near St. George in one night a thousand hogsheads were taken. These at $4 per hogshead would yield the fishermen $4,000. In four days the fishermen at Lepreaux took 2,494 hogsheads. Thus it will be seen that this fishery means much to the men along the shore, and the fish are found all the way from the Maine border up the bay into the harbor of St. John.

Lame Back Cured

Just rub the painful spot with Nerviline; not much rubbing, because Nerviline is made to penetrate. You'll not suffer long after Nerviline is applied, for it acts like lightning, swift and sure. Nerviline is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for—wherever there is pain. Apply Nerviline and the pain disappears.

No remedy so thoroughly cures lame back, stiff joints, sore muscles, lumbago, and cold in the chest as

Nerviline

The farmer, the mechanic, the man who works at hard labor, is subject to the baneful influence of dampness, fog, and inclement weather. It's hard for him to escape pain. What he needs a home is a bottle of Nerviline, which gives instant ease to every kind of pain.

Nerviline is about four times as strong as the ordinary liniment. It gets right at the core of pain and cures it as no other remedy can. So strong and concentrated is Nerviline that one application is always as good as six ordinary rubbings with other liniments. Try a large 25c bottle. Sold everywhere.

Bridgetown, Nova Scotia.
Gentlemen.—Last year I got from you some clothing, and afterwards wrote for spring and summer samples. I might now say that after fifteen months' experience with your clothing I am better satisfied with it than I was at the beginning, if possible. The tweed suitings have worn wonderfully well, retained their colours and shape, and after fifteen months of "strenuous life," they look almost as good as new.
I would now like samples of some steel grey worsteds and light-weight summer and spring cloths, and also some for raincoats.—I remain, yours truly,
(Signed) M. E. ARMSTRONG.

JEAN BART'S PIPE

A Short Story

Jean Bart was from Dunkirk, a cold and damp district, where the pipe is not only a companion, but a stove. He was the grandson and nephew of pirates, and was himself a pirate until Louis XIV. called him to the navy. At this time he was 41; too old to change his ways. Still, people may be perfectly certain that, when Jean Bart lit his pipe in the royal ante-room it was not from ignorance of Versailles etiquette, but from the wish to attract attention to the point of expulsion from the palace. Now, as after all, he was commander of the fleet, and his name was Jean Bart, it was not easy to turn him out nor to inform Louis XIV. that in the next room was a man smoking. (Louis hated odours, and was very punctilious). Everybody knew Jean Bart was going to ask the king for a favour—a favour twice refused already. Nobody could convey to the king Jean Bart's request for a hearing; Jean Bart had to take the royal closet by surprise.

He laid aside his splendid clothes of cloth-of-gold lined with silver, which were making a great sensation in Paris parlours, donned his simple naval uniform, hung round his neck a gold chain which the king had given him for his exploits, and presented himself in the ante-room of his majesty as if he had a card of admission.

"Monsieur le captaine," said the chief usher. "Monsieur le captaine, have you your cards?"

"My card!" said Jean Bart. "Why, I am surely well enough acquainted with the king for no need of such nonsense between us. Tell him Jean Bart asks an audience, and it will be all right."

"Until you have a card of admission," the usher replied, "no one can announce you."

"Very well! If I must be announced, why cannot I announce myself?" And he started toward the inner door.

"You canot pass, officer," said the musketeer on duty.

"Is that the order?" asked Jean Bart.

"That is the order," replied the musketeer.

"Respect the order," said Jean Bart. Then, leaning against the wall he took from his hat a pipe, filled it with tobacco, struck a steel and lit it. The courtiers looked on with amazement.

"I must tell you, Monsieur le Captaine," said the usher, that people do not smoke in the royal ante-room."

"Then why make me wait here? I always smoke where I am waiting."

"Monsieur le Captaine, I shall have to make you leave."

"Before speaking with the king?" said Jean Bart, laughing. "Ah! I dare you to do it!"

And, indeed, as has been said, it was no easy matter to turn Jean Bart out of doors. Of two evils, smoking and disorder, the usher, especially the less dangerous, the usher went and told the king. "Sire, in your ante-room there is a naval officer smoking, who dares us to put him out, and declares he will come in in spite of us." Louis XIV. did not even take the trouble to ask.

"I bet it is Jean Bart," said he. The usher bowed.

"Let him finish his pipe," said Louis XIV., "and have him come in."

Jean Bart did not finish his pipe. He threw it in the fireplace and sprang to the royal closet. But he stopped on its threshold, saluting respectfully his king.

Jean Bart had carried his point. In the king's presence he had the same skill which he displayed before hostile fleets. He led the conversation past rocks and through channels to the goal; that is—having begun by getting himself paid plenty of compliments on his sally from Dunkirk, where he was closely blockaded by the English, on the burning of more than 80 hostile ships on the high seas, and finally upon His descent upon Newcastle—he put knee to earth and finished by asking the pardon of his sailor, Keyser, condemned to die for killing his man in a duel.

The king hesitated. Jean Bart, whom the brotherly affection he bore Keyser made eloquent, entreated, adjured, prayed. "Jean Bart," said Louis XIV., "I grant you what I refused Tourville."

"Sire," replied Jean Bart, "my father, two of my brothers, 20 other members of my family, died in your majesty's service. To-day you give me the life of my sailor. I acquit you of those of the others." And Jean Bart left, crying like a child, and shouting at the top of his voice, "Vive le roi!"

He was surrounded straightway by all the courtiers, who desired to show civility to a man who had had more than half an hour of private audience, and not knowing how to get out of this living circle, which was beginning to stifle him, he profited by the question of a courtier:

"Monsieur Jean Bart, how did you get out of the port of Dunkirk, blockaded as you were by the English fleet?"

"Do you want to know?"

"Yes, yes!" they all cried in chorus. "It would be extremely gratifying."

"Eh, well! You will see. I am Jean Bart. You are the English fleet; you blockade me in the king's ante-room: you hinder my leaving. Eh, well, vlif vlan! piff paff! This is how I get out!" And at each exclamation, lunging with foot or fist at the one before him and sending him headlong on his neighbour, he opened a passageway to the door. Once there, "Gentleman," said he "that is how I got out of Dunkirk."

And he left the ante-room.—Springfield Republican.

A WARNING TO MOTHERS

No mother can expect her little one to escape all the ills of childhood, but every mother who accepts fair warning as to the treatment of these little ills can save her baby such suffering. Thousands of mothers of young children keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house — all mothers should do so. The Tablets are a never-failing cure for all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood. They can be given with perfect safety—they always do good; never harm. Constipation, indigestion, colic, simple fevers, colds, etc., all rapidly disappear under treatment with the Tablets. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Things We Talk About

Last summer on a railway journey I frankly confess that curiosity got the better of me and I shamelessly listened to a conversation carried on by two men just ahead of me.

The din of the cars carried away much of their talk, but enough was heard to give the assurance that it was unusual.

They touched upon religion a bit, then drifted to a discussion of a magazine article each had read, and finally were well launched on a serious and a right interesting talk regarding the work of schools, their influence, what they are doing and what they might do.

And the strange part of it all was that it was so unusual as to make, not one, but two listeners interested to know who they were and why they were not discussing politics, business, high finance, even sports or the weather.

But they talked still longer—and then we knew.

It was their work of which they spoke, and as they happened to be college professors it was easy to understand the why for the drift of their talk. If they had been financiers probably the conversation would have been sprinkled with bits of information regarding stocks, bonds, gilt-edged investments and the like. If lawyers, some big suit that was under way; if clerks, their aspirations, troubles and all; if plain workmen, some echoes from their trade.

And if women—well, if housekeepers they have woes all their own, and they do like to talk about them, naturally enough, since that is their profession.

Not that ordinary conversation is limited to the small boundaries of our work, but it is amazing how narrow and how dull it often is—how narrow and how dull we scarcely realize until chance permits us to listen to something different. And then we grow big-eyed and curious, just because it is so very marked.

As one thinks about it, it is strange, the topics that pass back and forth between folk who really have depths to draw upon. The same things over and over—things that concern money-making and money-spending, the merest trivialities of what we do and how we do it, business, fashions, personalities, the weather and that very long-drawn out, wearisome subject of physical ills and family health.

A stray bit of talk drifted my way awhile ago, and it was quite impossible not to be amused, though there are times when most of us must confess to a fellow being. Chance brought a man and a woman together for half an hour or so, and they simply did not know what to talk about. It generally happens that the woman comes to the rescue at such times, and she plunged into the subject of amusements. Had he seen this drama, and what did he think of that actor? He was not over-enthusiastic, and as each play was disposed of there was a long pause, only broken by another query concerning another production — did he like it? The last one happened to be grand opera, and the poor man hadn't seen it. Her courage waned, but the last I heard was, "Don't you like to go to New York in the season?"

He is a solid man of affairs, who thinks and acts; and she a woman whose time is occupied with pursuits other than amusement—but neither seemed to find anything worth while in the storehouse where topics for talk were kept. And it made one think of the poor girl who thought and thought of something to say, something that would interest her first man-caller. History, she thought, ought to prove common ground, and so, after a pause a bit longer and more oppressive than usual, she solemnly said:

"Wasn't it awful about poor Marie Antoinette?"

Don't you believe that most of folk think better than they talk, more interestingly and more widely? They reserve the commonplaces of weather, personal affairs and the like for conversation and let their thoughts drift away to larger matters, keeping them all in a sort of "holy of holies."

Or perhaps they wait for the inspiration of congenial souls, for there is a mighty difference. Some talk commonplaces and inspire no more; and others draw out the very best that is in one. Life is so short that it seems an endless pity that friendships and the closer ties are not more often founded upon genuine, lasting attraction with an enduring background of common likes, common interests and ways of looking at things, rather than upon the fleeting, elusive things of chance and otherwise that draw folk together, and sometimes let them drift apart because of the flimsy, unsubstantial basis.—Francesca, in Rochester Times.

Let Us Enquire.—A travelling menagerie, while visiting the Scotch Highlands, had the misfortune to lose their gorilla. They didn't trouble to bury it, but when night came and they were on the move again, they threw it out on the roadside in a lonely part of the country. Here it was discovered early next morning by a couple of shepherds, who had never seen the like before. "Puir chap!" exclaimed one, "whoever can it be?" "I dinna ken," replied the other, "but it certainly isna a MacGregor, nor a MacIntosh." "Nay, an' it isna a Campbell, either. Let's gang up to the Castle, an' inquire if ony o' the English visitors are missin'."

How Many Commandments?—A Sunday school teacher had occasion to catechise a new pupil, whose ignorance of his Testament would have been appalling to any ordinary scholar. One Sunday she asked the little fellow how many commandments there were. To her great surprise the lad answered glibly enough, "Ten, ma'am." "And now, Sammy," pleasantly continued the teacher, "What would be the result if you should break one of them?" "There'd be nine!" triumphantly answered the youngster.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.

DECEMBER

Oh, the bare old trees in their sweeping grays,
And the gleam of the sapphire sea,
And the sun and the tang of these brilliant days
Are bread and wine to me!

Oh, the firm white road beneath my tread
And the stubble, pinkish-brown,
And the hills in their wonderful purple-red,
And the clear-cut distant town—

And the stately glow in the orange west
Still and lingering—
Have brought to weary hearts more rest
Than all the balms of spring.

—By Ethel Hobart, in the December (Christmas) Scribner.

COATED TONGUE HEADACHE
DIZZY SPELLS

Your overworked stomach is on strike. It refuses to secrete pepsin enough to act upon the food. Refuses also to secrete acid enough to enable the peptic secretion to do its work.

What's the result?—dyspepsia, headache, sick all over.

Give to the stomach the assistance it requires—or in other words try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which cure more weak stomachs than any other medicine you know of.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills put the kind of life into a weak stomach that enables it to digest and assimilate all kinds of food.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills
Cured Mr. William Martin, a Well-Known Lumberman in Parry Sound.

"I consider that Dr. Hamilton's Pills make the best all round medicine. My stomach got disordered and all kinds of complications set in. My blood grew thin, my color got pale, and I had the worst kind of headaches. The food I ate all disagreed with me and I was constantly bilious and suffering from acute dyspepsia. A wonderful change took place when I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they gave me appetite and strong digestion. I had no more bad dreams, no sick stomach or headache. I was in fact like a new man, and will always recommend and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sure to benefit at once. Try them. 25c per box, at all dealers, and insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. In yellow boxes only.

A Warm Bathroom
PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Every mother should be careful that the children take their baths in a warm room. The chill of a cold room is dangerous after coming out of the hot water.

A Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater brings bathroom or bedroom to just the degree of warmth you want in five or ten minutes. All you have to do is to touch a match.

The Perfection Heater burns nine hours on one filling and is always ready for use. You can move it anywhere it is needed. There is no waste of fuel and heat warming unoccupied rooms. Just the heat you want, when and where you want it.

The Perfection is fitted with an automatic-locking flame spreader that prevents the wick being turned high enough to smoke and is easy to remove and drop back when cleaning.

Drums finished either in turquoise-blue enamel or plain steel; light and ornamental, yet strong and durable—suitable for any room in any house.

—the record which plays twice as long

THEN you will understand why so many good songs, so much good music of every character never appeared in record form until the Amberol Record was perfected.

Then you will understand how, when you own an Edison Phonograph, you can now have all of the very best entertainment of every kind.

Then you will understand how this one advantage alone makes the Edison Phonograph the greatest sound-reproducing instrument as well as the greatest musical instrument—even if it had no other advantages. But it has: the sapphire reproducing point, that does not scratch or wear the record and lasts forever—no changing needles; exactly the right volume of sound for your home; home recording—the ability to make and reproduce your own records in your own home. Any Edison dealer will demonstrate these great Edison advantages to you.

British Records—French Records

In addition to our regular monthly list of Edison Standard and Edison Amberol Records, we issue regularly a number of British and French Records. Our British and French record catalogs contain the completest list of these selections, published in record form. Be sure to get them from your dealer when you go to buy your Edison Phonograph—and ask to have the new Record Supplements mailed you free every month.

JIMMY'S RISK

A Short Story

By F. C. Bates

Jimmy Mudge had got a new overcoat and, at the surprising revelation the office to a man shammed convulsions. Even to the oldest amongst them the shabby blue, now forever discarded, had always been associated with old Jimmy's outdoor appearance. The sight of him in his smartly cut covert of the fashionable green brown shade—came as a staggering shock.

"Where was the fire, Jimmy?" "Been dabbling on the market, Mr. Mudge?" "Was it the long odds on the three o'clock, old man?" The good humoured banter assailed him from all sides like a bombardment.

Jimmy had not the gift of repartee. He was accounted slow. Put him on some routine job, such as ledger work, and he would do it accurately; but for rush work, Jimmy, in the succinct phrasing of H. C. Tims, the astute manager, was N. G. "It was impossible to ginger the beggar up." For that reason, Jimmy, at thirty-three, was earning a modest twenty dollars a week, and, apparently, was thankful to hold his billet.

He was not only slow, he was undersized and altogether insignificant. Until the startling appearance of the covert he had always looked shabby. His face was sallow, his cheek bones prominent, and, from much stooping over the desk his right shoulder distinctly fell off below the level of the other. For the rest, he was quiet and unassuming, and a pattern of punctuality. On the ground of time-keeping Jimmy never gave the slightest opportunity for complaint. His fellows had found a nickname for Jimmy. They alluded to him as "The Rabbit."

"Not quite the correct length, James," observed Briggs, who prided himself on knowing. "You don't mind my telling you?"

"It'll be long enough before he gets another," remarked Dabbs.

Jimmy's slow working mind caught the joke when the others had stopped laughing, and he grinned appreciatively. Charlie was a smart chap. He wished he could think of witty bits like he did. The beggar ought to have been on the boards. He was down on the programme of the entertainment they were holding that night to sing some comics. The presence of the bosses wouldn't make the slightest difference to Charlie. He would have 'em holding their sides. If only he had the nerve of Dabbs!

From these musings his mind switched naturally to the man of the evening, in whose honor the beano had been arranged by the workpeople—the gentleman invariably alluded to as "H. O. T.," the general manager. H. O. Tims would that day boast twenty-five years' service with the firm, and the staff and workpeople were marking the occasion by a little presentation.

A bright idea struck Jimmy suddenly that to-day offered an unusual opportunity for making a request he had often wished to put. H. O. T., in view of the celebration and the honor, would, if ever, be caught in an amenable mood. The day would afford the crucial moment to strike the hot iron. He found himself trembling at the bold thought.

Jimmy found himself going hot all over at the boldness of the thought. For five years his life outside the office had been bound up in a certain tired looking anaemic girl, who regarded him with affection. The little woman went out working, as he did, to her dressmaking, for the few dollars weekly, which, with a pension, maintained herself and a widowed mother. They were in like case, for his old mother depended on him alone for the maintenance of their modest home.

Minnie's mother was ailing. In a few months the tie would probably be broken. Another five dollars a week would mean that his own mother might find a devoted daughter. This thought and the belief that on this red-letter day the chief would surely be more approachable, urged his sluggish mind to decision. When presently the morning's correspondence had been distributed, and the manager had returned from his tour of the department, he ventured to follow him to his own room.

Mr. Tims shot a keen glance at him as he entered, and continued to jot notes on the open letter before him. He knew what the white face, the twitching hands, the constrained manner portended as well as if the request had been already urged. "Well?" he shot out.

"I've come up to ask if you could see your way to grant me an advance, sir," Jimmy managed to get out, wondering all the time at the strange sound of his own voice. "It's three years——"

"No!" snapped Mr. T., without any break in his writing.

"I've been seriously thinking of getting married, sir," resumed Jimmy after a few seconds of eloquent silence. "If you could——"

"Think some more and you won't," rapped out Mr. T.

"We've been waiting for five years," bleated poor Jimmy.

"Can't help your troubles," snapped Mr. T. "I said 'no.' What you get is all you're worth, and I suggest to you that you'd better look out for another job. You're in the way, and can't see it. There's nothing higher for you in this office, and you wouldn't be worth a gooseberry on the road. The juniors below you are all keen to get on, and your job's a stepping stone. I don't want to give you notice, and you can refer any firm to me. The sooner you do it the better for both of us." Jimmy walked out of the room.

Not until he was well on the way home had Jimmy any suspicion of his blunder. His head was full of the doings of the night. As he had left the hotel he had heard a foreman remark, with a laugh, that their little beano had been a thorough success. He supposed it had been.

Charlie had been in great form. His comics had proved quite to the taste of his audience. The adulatory speeches had been punctuated with much cheering. H. O. T. had been properly modest, and afterwards genially reminiscent. He had not failed to point the moral. The manager's popularity, if enthusiasm counted for anything, admitted of no doubt.

Somehow, the sugared compliments and the cheering had left him cold. At the toasting he had risen with the others, but his glass had been set down untouched. In his mind lingered the picture of the frowning face, the memory of a snarling injunction "Get out!"

For that reason and because he had a longish walk and the old lady would perhaps be anxious, he had slipped out quietly during the last song. No suspicion of his mistake entered into his mind until he was a couple of streets away from his home, and then the knowledge came like a thunderbolt to transfix him on the pavement. Chancing to thrust his hand into the pocket of his overcoat, he had happened on a pair of kid gloves. He did not want telling that the gloves were not his. He had never owned a pair.

For some moments he stood as if moonstruck, staring, vacantly before him; then his hand rose slowly to finger the texture of the garment. The discovery of a flat letter case in the breast pocket sent him stumbling towards a lamp. Slowly he withdrew his hand and gazed on the find, with consternation writ large on his face.

It was a neat Russia leather affair, carrying the initials of the owner, H. O. T. The gilt letters danced curiously in his vision as he glared wide eyed. At the enormity of his offence, his mouth came slowly agape. The next instant he had started back in his tracks at a run.

Breathless and perspiring, he reached the hotel, to find that the manager had left in his car but a couple of minutes earlier, without, apparently, having discovered the mistake; and, because he did not wish to court the chaffing of his fellows, he slipped away again without giving an explanation. In the street he stayed undecided as to whether he should follow the car, but the fact that the journey meant a walk of six miles, and the fear that his mother would be worrying at his protracted absence, finally turned him homewards. But Jimmy had said his last word.

He reached the office on the stroke next morning, to find the manager waiting for him. Mr. Tims usually arrived at 9.30. This morning he had turned up before the clerks. He had been making inquiries. Jimmy, with the coat over his arm, met his steely eye immediately on entering, and slowly advanced toward him, with a sheepish look on his face and a stammering apology on his lips.

"Come into my room, Mudge," commanded the manager. It was quite evident that he was controlling himself with some effort.

"Well, sir?" he remarked, with a sour smile, when the door had banged. "Perhaps you'll be good enough to explain." Jimmy placed the coat carefully over a chair. He had no doubt of what to expect. Apologies would be but wasted breath. He believed that his shrift would be very short, and a sudden sense of recklessness surged in him to stiffen his back. "Hang it, O. T." he said defiantly—but strictly to himself. He wasn't going to toady to a beast like him. Over another chair his own coat had been slung. He walked over and picked it up. When he turned the manager has his coat in his hand, and was feeling somewhat feverishly in the breast pocket.

"Identical, aren't they?" he said with a grin. "The mistake was quite excusable." Mr. Tims glared at him in amusement. This was a new Mudge. The beggar was actually leering. His hand came slowly out of the pocket with the letter case in it. Jimmy noted it, and continued to grin.

Mr. Tims opened the case, closed it again quickly, and slipped it in the pocket of the coat he was wearing. When he at last spoke, his tone was quite honeyed. "I've been reconsidering your request, Mudge," he said. "We'll see if better use can't be made of your services. From this week you get twenty-five a week." The coat dropped from Jimmy's hand, he looked at him in amazement, then burst out laughing. Mr. Tims shot round and brought his hand down in a tight grip on his shoulder. "You know how to keep your face shut?" he rapped out.

Jimmy became serious. "I think I can be trusted," he said.

"Very well," snapped Mr. Tims. "We quite understand each other."

Jimmy laughed and turned to go. "This means that the little girl will soon be Mrs. M., sir," he confided. "I don't know how to thank you."

"Umph," snorted Mr. Tims. And Jimmy went out.

The future Mrs. M. stared when he imparted the glorious news to her. "Seems they do value you after all, Jim," she observed.

"Only proves once again what a show of sturdy independence will do, Min," declared Jimmy, buttoning up his coat with a lordly air. "They're giving nothing away. You've got to ask for it, and let them see you mean to get it."

Not until several hours later did the astounding thought occur to him. It came suddenly, just after he had got in bed, to render him inert. While the alarm clock ticked away five minutes he lay thinking hard. Then gradually a grin overspread his features. "I wonder just what was in those letters, Jimmy?" he muttered drowsily.

WAS A GREAT SUFFERER FOR FIVE YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent troubles of civilized life, and thousands of people suffer untold agony after every meal, for nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. Mrs. Wm. J. Boyne, Lepreau, N.B., writes:—"I thought I would write and tell you of the good Burdock Blood Bitters has done me and also tell you how thankful I am.

"For five years I had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and tried different doctors and proprietary medicines, but could get no relief. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have much faith in it, but I thought I would give it a trial. To-day I am completely cured, and I will always recommend it."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about thirty-five years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

R. R. HALL'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH

In Which He Sets Forth His Platform as Justification of the Support of the Electors—To Safeguard Popular Rights and Promote Progressive Measures

GENTLEMEN:

As the unanimously nominated candidate of the Liberals of this Riding, it is incumbent upon me to suggest some of the considerations and features of policy I favour in order to justify me in soliciting your support. I therefore submit to you some of the main planks of the Liberal platform and my own on which I stand and if, as a result of your support, I am elected, I shall use my best endeavours to have them given effect.

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workman's Compensation Act should be radically remodelled, embodying the best features of the English and German Acts and extended so that full and ample damages may be given to a workman or his family on account of any injury he may sustain in the course of his employment and that without a law suit.

Moreover, the workman or his family under such a law should not be called upon to fight an expensive law suit in the courts with a wealthy corporation and be dragged from one Court of Appeal to another with the evident advantage in the long run to the longest purse, or else be compelled to accept a mere pittance for the injury he has sustained.

THE FACTORIES ACT

In order to prevent accidents to workmen, provision should be made for a more frequent inspection by competent inspectors, whose duty should be to see that dangerous machinery and places are properly guarded, fire escapes furnished, sanitary and ventilation facilities improved, and every step taken to protect and preserve the life, limb and health of employees.

Many accidents happen to employees due to working them too long hours. The employer should be made liable for this increased risk. He should either be compelled to give shorter hours to his employees or else be compelled to assume increased risk which follows in consequence of an employee being over-tired and over-worked.

EDUCATION

A more progressive and adequate educational policy is urgently needed. More liberal grants should be given in aid of primary education, in the promotion of industrial training and technical schools in urban and rural communities; and in the establishment of night schools for the benefit of those who have been forced to leave school at an early age to earn their own living. Model schools should be restored with a view of increasing the supply of efficient and qualified teachers.

Two great general principles should underlie our educational system in this English-speaking province which forms such an important part of this English-speaking continent, namely:

(a) Every child in the Province should have a thorough elementary education.

(b) Every child should have a thorough knowledge of the English language.

To attain this end, necessary laws and regulations should be passed and enforced and liberal aid should be given to provide further adequate training schools and a sufficient supply of competent and qualified teachers for every School Section in every part of the Province.

Were this done, tens of thousands of our fellow citizens would not be as they are now deprived of the opportunity of acquiring any knowledge of the English language.

AGRICULTURE

The rural population of Ontario is declining in this Province, which contains the richest and best farm lands on this continent. This state of affairs can be reversed by bringing about the active immigration into this Province of suitable people for settlement and employment upon our farm lands; by the building of good roads throughout Ontario, and thereby facilitating traffic and insuring quick delivery of farm and garden produce; by increasing the rural telephone service; by the location of a demonstrator in every rural riding, and by the establishment of suitable demonstration farms in each riding, and by showing to the farmers through such demonstration farms the results of successful experiments in every branch of agriculture.

NEW ONTARIO

New Ontario should be developed and settled and its railway facilities utilized and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway should be made to do service as a colonization road, and should be extended to the Hudson Bay, and branches should be built as the development of the country demands.

A speedy end should be put to the neglect to settle, and develop, the agricultural possibilities of New Ontario, such as has marked the past seven years. A government with an earnest desire to do something to develop the agricultural possibilities of this splendid farming region, would do something to facilitate its settlement which is now handicapped from lack of roads to give new settlers access to or egress from their premises. Without roads or the sympathic attitude of a government the settler in New Ontario is greatly handicapped and the settlement of the country is correspondingly retarded.

TAXATION

The Assessment Act should be so amended so as to permit a municipality, if it so desires, to exempt improvements from taxation, either in whole or in part, and to provide for the removal of the existing inequalities of taxation.

AID TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

The alarming prevalence of tuberculosis calls for the aid of the Provincial Government, which it is not now receiving, (and is rudely denied) to assist in the provision of facilities for curative or palliative treatment for those whose means prevent this. To this end I would favor amendment of the Succession Duties Act so as to impose an additional percentage of taxation on the estates of very wealthy men, say $250,000.00 and over, to provide a fund to be devoted to the maintenance of tuberculosis sanitaria and the aid of the work of the Children's Aid Society.

PROVINCIAL AID TO RADIAL RAILWAYS

Peterborough is particularly well located for the establishment of a system of radial railways in this district owing to the large number of water powers that would furnish cheap operation. These railways would provide the city with more of the necessaries of life at a cheaper rate; would furnish cheaper and better accommodation to farmers in bringing their produce to market; and attract tourists to our summer resorts. Aid should be given to attain this end, with a percentage of profits to be returned to the Province, after roads are in operation and earning reasonable dividends.

In addition to what I have above recited I shall feel it my duty to support any measure to meet the legitimate demands of a progressive people. If you think that I shall be able to give you valuable and effective, as it shall be my aim to give you, faithful service, I respectfully ask your vote and support.

As it will be impossible for me to personally call upon all the Electors, I trust that this means of communicating my position will meet with your approval and secure me the favour of your vote and support.

Yours respectfully,

R. R. HALL

Big Hall Rally in Committee Rooms To-night. Important Questions Discussed

STEAMER CAPTURED

British Vessel Falls into Hands of Chinese Pirates and Passengers Are Brutally Treated

CANADIANS BOTTLED UP

Special to The Examiner:

HONG KONG, NOV. 24.—After a desperate fight with the crew, in which Chief Officer H. B. Nicholson, an Englishman, was killed, Chinese pirates captured and looted the British steamship Shinon, near Kongmoon, according to a message received here to-day. The pirates brutally mishandled everyone aboard, lopping the legs from two Chinese prisoners in mere sport.

The English naval authorities are expected to take vigorous action immediately.

Suspend Steamship Service.

PEKING, NOV. 24.—At a meeting of the Ministers representing the foreign powers here, it was decided that it would be advisable to increase the legation guards.

Piracy on the West River is so rampant that the British steamboat companies of Hong Kong have been obliged to suspend their services.

Several of their steamers have been looted and some of the officers and passengers killed. Two British torpedo boat destroyers have left Hong Kong to patrol the West River.

More Missionaries Safe.

Shanghai, Nov. 24.—Returning missionaries are flocking to Shanghai on every boat. Some of them have been two or three weeks on the way. All tell the same story—general hatred of the Manchus, unrest abong the people, courteous treatment for foreigners, but many inconveniences and much suffering. They agree that danger to foreign residents in the interior is imminent, owing to the lack of control in the east and south.

People from the Province of Sde-Chuch, who have reached Shanghai report that 150 foreigners, mostly Canadians, have been unable to leave Chentu. The Governor is keeping the gates shut because he believes that the presence of foreigners within the city is his sole protection.

Robbed by Bandits.

London, Nov. 22.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Peking says that 19 missionaries, with women and children, and headed by the Swedish missionary, Dr. Blom, have arrived from Ho-Nan-Fu. They were attacked and robbed by bandits near Ho-Nan-Fu, and both Dr. Blom and his wife received knife cuts.

Why Republic is Best.

Paris, Nov. 24.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese reformer, has arrived here from England. He visited the Chamber of Deputies, where he had a lengthy conversation with several of the French sympathizers. He then left for Marseilles, where he embarks for Shanghai.

Dr. Sun made a statement that the object of the revolution was to establish a republic on the model of the United States. Any other form of government would be unsuitable, on account of the number of the provinces and the diversity of races. Certainly a Chinese monarchy would not be acceptable, for the revolution was purely a political movement, not a racial war.

YOU CAN HAVE HEALTHY HAIR

Use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, a Harmless Remedy That Makes the Hair Grow

What a pity it is to observe so many people with thin and faded hair and then realize that the most of these people might have a fine, healthy head of hair if they would but use the simple "sage tea" of our grandmothers, combined with other ingredients for restoring and preserving the hair. No one, young or old, need have gray hair, weak, thin or falling hair, dandruff or any trouble of the sort if they would but use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. On the contrary, it is possible to have healthy, vigorous hair, of perfect colour, by a few applications of this remarkable preparation.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly removes dandruff, leaves the scalp clear and healthy, promotes the growth of the hair and restores the natural colour of the hair which has become faded or gray. It is a clean, wholesome dressing, which may be used at any time and with perfect safety. Don't neglect your hair. Start to-day with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

THE SCHOOL POLICY A HUGE MISFIT WHERE IT ISN'T INSTEAD, A JOKE

How the Whitney Government Has Made Education Cheaper for the Rich and Dearer for the Poor —Easier for the Few and Harder for the Many—Mr. Hall's Meeting at Smith Hears Something About Electric Power.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Ripped it up the middle and down the back, clean across and clear through, was what R. R. Hall did to the Whitney government's education policy at Temperance Hall, Smith, last night. The electors who have had to listen to a lot of dreary equivocation on this subject, were corresponding grateful to Mr. Hall for the concise, intelligible way in which he presented the facts and figures.

Before discussing the larger issues of the campaign, Mr. Hall touched on a couple of local matters.

"I notice," said Mr. Hall, "that the Review and others are circulating a story that I have a campaign fund of $10,000. There is as much truth in the story that I have $10,000 to distribute in this election as it would be to say that Mr. Peck, my opponent, has 10,000 bottles of beer to give away from the brewery in which he is interested at Ashburnham. One story would be as ridiculous as the other.

Beck's Bluff Called.

"I also notice,' 'continued Mr. Hall, "according to to-night's Review, that the Hydro-Electric has obtained a foothold and will give Peterborough power at cost. It has secured Dams No. 4 and No. 8 and is ready for business. Mr. Adam Beck is presumably authority for the statement that Dam No. 4 will develop 3,000 horse power."

"I went to the trouble," said Mr. Hall, "of getting the Hydro-Electric report on Trent Valley water power made by Cecil B. Smith, the Hydro-Electric's own engineer six years ago. This report says: "Dam No. 4, 12 foot head, 1100 horse power."

"Adam Beck has had this report in his possession six years," said Mr. Hall. "He knows what can be done. And yet on the eve of an election he makes a misleading statement like that. What is his motive? What reliance can be placed on his words?

"As a matter of fact, Dam No. 4, deducting losses in transmission and transforming, can only develop 300 effective horse power. The whole Hydro-Electric bluff for Eastern Ontario is of a piece with the wild talk about Dam No. 4.

"The Ontario education system," said Mr. Hall, "is top heavy. To begin with the Education Department is overmanned. They have three people doing now, what two did before. They have a Minister of Education, a Deputy Minister of Education and a Superintendent of Education, whose salaries gobble up $15,000 a year among them. Evidently money is no object with the Whitney government when friends are to be provided for."

Where Three's Company.

"The Minister of Education," continued Mr. Hall, "is the Hon. Dr. Pyne—a wooden man, as his name suggests. He knew so little about education, but they had to get two men to make up his deficiencies. A Deputy Minister is the usual amount of expert assistance any other cabinet minister gets, but Dr. Pyne had to have a Deputy Minister and a Superintendent of Education to keep him straight. Even at that, he has made a mess of it. It's the old story of too many cooks spoiling the broth."

"As might be expected of a good, old hard-baked, George the Third autocrat like Premier Whitney," Mr. Hall continued, "his education policy favours the classes, at the expense of the masses. He boasts that Toronto University, which has 3,950 students, got last year from the government $488,000; during the same period the primary schools in the cities towns and villages of Ontario, numbering some 294,000 pupils, got $288,000. That is to say that every Toronto University student had $150 spent on him to $1 spent on the Public school pupil. His/her education for the few looms that much bigger in the Whitney government's mind than Public school education for the many."

Long Chances Against the Common People.

"As I have said before," commented Mr. Hall, "as far as education is concerned, the workingman's child is a 150 to 1 shot with the Whitney government."

"What we want is a more even break for the Public schools. Most of the people's money should get back to the common people. If some of this money that now goes on grand buildings and fat jobs for Toronto University could be spent on Public school necessities, we would get a

THE DEEP SEA MISSION

Dr. Grenfell's Great Work Before the People of Peterborough---Ministerial Association's Appeal

The people of Peterborough are addressed with regard to a matter which will surely have much sympathy and generous support.

The whole civilized world knows of the splendid work of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell among the deep sea fishermen of Labrador.

For years a number of interested citizens have held what was known as the Deep Sea Mission ball, in the month of December. As there will be no ball this year, the Ministerial Association has assumed the responsibility of appealing to the public to make up the usual sum without the festivity of former years.

Surely the Christian people of our city will respond promptly and gladly.

Never did the Mission require funds more than it does this year. Peterborough will not leave its share undone.

Contributions left at any of the newspaper offices will be acknowledged promptly by Mrs. James Wood, who has consented to act as treasurer of the fund.

MR. BURNHAM PLANTS ANOTHER PIN IN HON. PREMIER BORDEN'S SEAT

Contradicts Mr. Monk's Position That Sir Wilfrid Was Too Protestant

OTTAWA, NOV. 24.—The Nationalist-Conservative pendulum swung to the full extreme with startling velocity at the night sitting of the House of Commons. All afternoon the coalition ranks had cheered the charges that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been too Protestant. At night they devoted their approbation equally heartily to the charge that he had been too Catholic.

Mr. Burnham's Argument.

Mr. John H. Burnham, Peterborough, led the new line of attack. He charged that the late Government was responsible for the continued operation of the "ne temere" decree. This decree, he stated, was a type of all attempts on the laws of the country. "The question is: are we married or are we not?" he asked. "If we are, how dare anyone say we are not? If they do, we are entitled to protection by the laws of the country". Defiance of the law by people was punishable in other cases, and why not in this? It was an unjustifiable interference of outside bodies in the administration of Canadian laws. Mr. Burnham charged that the late Government, through Sir Alan Aylesworth, had failed to state its position, in response to Mr. Taylor's question on the subject, and must be held responsible for the continuance of the decree.

Has Government Power?

Mr. E. M. Macdonald inquired whether Mr. Burnham held that the Dominion Government had power to deal with it and legislate under the British North America Act.

Mr. Burnham replied that it certainly had the power. It was a question that Senates, Synods, Assemblies and Conferences had all taken up. It was a very important question in Ontario, and was one reason for the defeat of the Laurier Administration.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley asked if the question played a part in the speaker's riding in the last election and if it was used against the Government.

"Assuredly," was Mr. Burnham's reply. "The country demanded a Government strong enough and willing enough to enforce the laws of the country against all who would set them at defiance."

"May I ask the hon. gentleman," queried Hon. Mr. McLean (Halifax), "if in his judgment this question play ed an important part in the campaign conducted throughout Ontario, and, if so, what proportion of the result was attributed to it?"

Monk and Oliver Clash.

Hon. Mr. Monk said that the member from Halifax had no right to ask such a question, while Hon. Frank Oliver maintained that the question was quite in order, a warm exchange of words taking place between the Minister and ex-Minister. Mr. McLean meantime reiterated his question.

"I have no objection to answering it," finally declared Mr. Burnham. "The question certainly played a very important part in the election throughout Ontario. The people wanted the laws of the country vindicated and the people protected."

"It was made the source of a discreditable and untruthful attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier?" queried Mr. Macdonald, but he got no answer.

FARMERS' BANK DEPUTATION WAITS ON THE GOVERNMENT

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, NOV. 24.—A deputation consisting of shareholders and depositors o fthe, defunct Farmers bank waited upon the government to-day to see if they could not enlist the sympathy of the government, and secure the repayment of the deposits, that disappeared under the wreckage of the bank. A few of the new members, without experience, accompanied the deputation. The government patiently listened for some time to the arguments of the solicitor of the depositors. Hon. Mr. White, the new Minister of Finance and Mr. Borden, expressed great sympathy for those who lost, and handled the deputation very politely and smoothly. But a member said, the facts underlying the situation, were fully understood by the general public. It was another case of the "slick" high ning rod agent. The farmers had no business to give their notes to start the bank on false pretences, notes which Travers was able to, and, as a matter of fact, did, use improperly, buttressed by false statements under oath. Another member stated to-day that the farmers should be prosecuted for conspiracy in giving their notes, that were used for fraudulent purposes and that they would get off well if they were not arrested for conspiracy. Another member asked how depositors of the Farmers bank could be recouped, without, in fairness, relieving the shareholders of the Ontario bank of the double liability, which they have paid and borne the brunt without so much whining. He pointed out that other banks had gone to the wall in Quebec and Nova Scotia, and their shareholders and depositors had as much right to rank as beneficiaries of the government liberality as those of the Farmers bank, if misrepresentation and crookedness were to be the basis of sympathy. It is generally felt that the technicalities of the law were complied with by Hon. Mr. Fielding when the license was granted and others expressed themselves to the effect that the whole business was a lesson to farmers to be careful what they were signing. The government is not likely to take action to satisfy the demands of the deputation, which felt when it retired that the conditions were such as to preclude the probability of government action.

INSTANTLY KILLED

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 25.—Jonah Johnston, night electrician, was instantly killed in the power house this morning, coming in contact with a brass rod while throwing off the switch of the street lights current. K. Kunder was seriously injured while showing the coroner how Johnston was killed. Kunder may die.

ENORMOUS CROWD IN ATTENDANCE AT TO-DAY'S CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE

Varsity Start This Afternoon's Struggle With Argonauts for the Canadian Championship Slight Favourites---The Final Score Was 14-7.

TORONTO, NOV. 25.—This city is being blanketted this morning with a soft, heavy snow storm and the prospects are for rain if anything at all. Weather indications are puzzling. The rugby dopesters and prospects making guessing on the result of the Argonaut-Varsity battle for the Dominion championship are varied indeed. Experts in newspaper offices are much divided, some favouring one team and some another. The weather conditions certainly favours the Argos to oust Varsity out of the Dominion championship seat.

Varsity Stadium, Toronto, Ont., Nov. 25.—In the crucial rugby football struggle of 1911 Argos, Champions of the Big Four, and Varsity, champions of the Intercollegiate Union, faced each other to-day at the Varsity Stadium and battled it out for the title of champions of Canada. Both teams were absolutely at their best strength, and, win or lose, there are no excuses. Weather conditions were ideal at the start of the game. Overcast sky, with a moderate breeze from the south. Field conditions were remarkably good considering the adverse weather which prevailed right up to noon to-day. The field was as hard as a macadam road, and every hard tackle meant bruises, so stamina and grit were as big a factor in the game as speed and brain.

It is estimated that the entire crowd number about 18,000, making about the biggest bunch that ever witnessed a Canadian football game. Students made the usual noise, while the Argos certainly didn't lack supporters.

Murray	L. outside	Sinclair

Referee—Phil MacKenzie of Montreal.

Umpire—Frank Robbins of Hamilton.

First Quarter—Varsity 0, Argos 1.

Argos won the toss, and Varsity kicked off, north, with wind. Maynard kicked the ball to Mallett, who returned to Ramsay, who was downed on Varsity's territory, and Varsity lost the ball on offside; Argos bucked and also lost on offside; Greene kicked to Mallett, who returned to Ramsay, who fumbled, but recovered; Argos got the ball for interference, and kicked over Varsity's line, and Maynard was forced to rouge.—Argos 1, Varsity 0.

Maynard fumbled the ball in line buck, and Argos recovered; Mallet made a bad kick, and Varsity got the ball at their own 40 yard line. An end run gained 25 yards, and Greene punted to Binkley, who ran back. Mallett's punt was muffed by Ramsay and Argos got the ball. Wigle bucked 5 yards and put the play at midfield. On an exchange of punts, play was in the Argo territory. Binkley punted to Ramsey, who was thrown at his own side at midfield; Greene punted to Binkled who ran it back to his own 40 yard line. Wigle's buck failed; Binkley gained five yards through the line; Mallet punted to Ramsay, who fumbled and Argos got the ball. He punted again and Ramsay again muffed, but was lucky to recover the ball. This put the play on Varsity's quarter. Greene punted to Mallett, who was tackled in Argos' territory. Argos bucked for no gain, and Binkley kicked to Maynard who was downed at his own quarter. A fumble in the next scrimmage gave the ball to Argos, but they lost for interference. Pete Campbell rounded the end for a 30 yard gain; Ramsay punted to Argos' line, but Mallett ran it out. Gale bucked for a slight gain. Argos got 10 yards for Varsity's offside.

Varsity secured the ball on the next down, but failed to get in. Campbell, by mistake, passing to Referee, and Muray recovered the fumbled ball. Mallett kicked to Ramsay, who returned to Lawson, who gained 15 yards; Binkley punted to Ramsay, who returned to Binkley, and he was downed at Argo's 25 yard line. The ground is slippery and the tacklers are having difficulty in keeping their feet. Play at midfield followed by a mighty punt by Mallett, held play there, and Lawson rounded the end for 15 yards' gain. Binkley punted to Greene, who was downed on his own line by Smith. Greene punted out to Lawson 40 yards. Binkley punted over the line to Ramsay, who passed to Greene, who ran it out 35 yards; Varsity punted out to Mallett and play was at midfield when the quarter ended. Score, Argos, 1, Varsity 0.

Second Quarter.

Varsity tried a passing run, but Maynard missed the pass, and was lucky to recover with no lose. Varsity's buck was smothered at midfield In this buck Ramsay's head hit the ground, and he received a bad gash over the left eye. He was patched up and continued. He punted into the Argo's quarter and Argos tried a buckin game. Lawson was thrown back for a loss on an end run. The big fellow could not get started quick enough on the slippery field; a fumbled punt by Greene was recovered by Maynard and play was at midfield. Ramsay punted to Bingley, and he ran it back to his own quarter. Moore followed up a punt by Mallett and nailed Greene in his tracks, at midfield; German bucked for 5 yards; Ramsay tried to round the end on third down, but Murphy seized him by the arm and downed him. Argos got the ball, and punts drove it to Varsity's quarter. They killed Varsity's buck and forced them to punt to Binkley just beyond midfield. Murphy gained 3 yards in a buck and Sinclair was dazed in a collision. An onside punt was grabbed at midfield by Taylor. Varsity's big line man failed to gain on a buck, and they punted to Binkley at Argo's quarter. Lawson lost the ball in line play, and it was carried to the Argos' 20 yard line. Smith nailed Maynard for a loss on an end run, and Greene was forced to kick. He puted it high and Binkley fell when he tried to take it and knocked the ball into touch, giving Varsity possession five yards from Argos' goal line. Ramsay and Maynard bucked it over for a touch. It was converted.—Varsity, 6; Argos, 1.

After the kick-off Maynard gained 10 yards on an end and Campbell slipped through the line for 15 yards, putting play in midfield. An offside penalty gave 10 yards to Varsity and Ramsay kicked to Mallett close to the Argo line. Lawson was handed the ball and made a tremendous effort, but only succeeded in carrying it across the field. An exchange of punts put the ball at Argos 40 yard line, and it was punted to Binkley at his goal posts. He made a long pass to Lawson, who carried it out 15 yards. Gale and Wigle bucked for a gain of 5 yards. Argos punted to Ramsay and Varsity gained 25 yards on an end run by Campbell and Maynard's punt put Argos on the defence 10 yards out. Lawson was again downed for a loss when he tried to round the end. Binkley punted to Maynard at midfield and he was nailed by Murray. Argos got the ball at midfield for interference and Binkley punted to Green, who was downed at Varsity's quarter by Smith. Lawson almost got away when Binkley passed him a punt at midfield. Binkley's punt put play in Varsity's territory. Ramsay kicked to Binkley who returned to Greene and an end run by Ramsay gained 15 yards. He punted to Mallett who made the Argos' first muff. Mallett recovered and punted to Green, who ploughed through the Argo tackles to midfield. Half time, Varsity 6, Argos 1.

Third Quarter.

Sinclair kicked off a bounder to Greene and recovered it himself with a magnificent dive. He injured his hip, but gamely went back into the fray. Lawson bucked but gained nothing. Binkley missed a drop on goal, but the ball went into touch for a single point, Argos 2, Varsity 6.

On an exchange of punts Maynard was downed at his own quarter. Sinclair's injured hip bothered him and he retired, being replaced by George Wright. Varsity's buck was thrown back and Argos got the ball for offside. Wigle bucked for a small gain. A scrimmage buck gained nothing. Binkley punted to the dead line for single point.—Argos 3, Varsity 6.

An end run gained nothing for Varsity. Greene's bad punt gave Argos the ball at midfield; Mallett punted to Maynard, who made a flying punt and the ball went into touch at midfield. Ramsay took Mallett's punt 5 yards from his own goal line, dodged three tacklers, and looked to be clear when Mallett downed him with a magnificent tackle. On the next exchange Mallett's return kick was blocked, and the ball went sailing up the field with half the Varsity team driving at it, but it eluded them one and all, until it rolled over Argos' line, where Jeff. Taylor fell on it, but the ball was called back to Argos' 25-yard line, because it had been batted forward; Mallett punted to midfield; Maynard hammered one over Binkley's head; Greene chased him up, and when he fooled it behind the line pulled Bell out of the road, Lawson recovered it and failed by inches and a rouge resulted.—Varsity 7; Argos, 3.

On an exchange of punts at midfield, Varsity secured the ball. A punting duel occurred with no gain to either side. Maynard and Campbell tried the disappearing ball act at midfield and Maynard went through like lightning for a 30 yard gain. Mallet grabbed the ball when he tried to pass to Greene and saved a nasty situation. He punted into the Varsity territory where O'Connor recovered a loose ball. There was an exchange of punts and Argos had the advantage until a flagrant offside gave Varsity possession at midfield. On an exchange of punts Varsity sent a bounder over Argos' backs heads. Binkley picked it up at his own goal, but was tackled by Knox, who recovered the ball when he dropped it and rolled over for a try directly between the goal posts. The quarter ended in see-saw playing with lots of kicking on both sides. Varsity 13, Argos 3.

Fourth Quarter.

With a falling wind behind them, Binkley dropped a field goal from 35 yards out ten seconds after the quarter opened. Argos 6, Varsity 13.

A bad kick-off gave Argos the ball at midfield. Binkley punted to Ramsay, who was downed at his own 40 yards. Argos held Varsity, and forced Ramsay to kick to Mallett, who was down in his tracks. Binkley kicked a high one, which bounded from touch towards the centre of the field, and was recovered by Greene, who was down in his own territory. An exchange of punting followed. On the next scrimmage, Maynard broke through for a small gain. The next tandem buck completed a 10-yard gain. This was the first time either team had gained yards by bucking. The Varsity half-back run lost ground Greene punted into touch at midfield. Argos' buck gained nothing. Mallett punted to Ramsay, who fumbled, but Maynard luckily recovered. Taylor's buck gained 5 yards. Two more bucks failed to complete the 10 yards, and Argos got the ball 35 yards out. Binkley made a fizzle of the punt, kicking it almost straight up, and Mallett recovered it. He again kicked it over the line to Ramsay, who was forced to rouge by Smith.—Argos 7, Varsity, 13.

Varsity punted to Binkley at midfield. Mallett punted to Greene, who made a long pass out to Maynard, who ran it out 20 yards. Varsity failed on their bucks, and Greene kicked into touch just beyond midfield, putting play in Argos' territory for the first time in this quarter. Argos punted back and a Varsity half back run gave Ramsay a chance to shine, and he ran it back to midfield. A punt into touch gave Argos the ball and Gale bucked for 8 yards. The next buck completed yards for Argos. Binkley punted an onside kick which Mallett recovered at Varsity's 40 yard line. Binkley tried a drop kick, but was short on the next down. Ramsay rounded an end for 25 yards. Maynard broke through for the best run of the day, carrying the ball from his own quarter to Argos' 40 yard line. The game grew red hot right here and it looked as if there would be a battle of fists along the wind line, but peace prevailed shortly with two minutes to play. Ramsay punted to Mallett and he was downed 5 yards out. Binkley punted and the Varsity halves fumbled, but Maynard recovered the ball about midfield. Maynard punted the ball to Binkley over his own line. Binkley dropped the ball, but recovered it and was forced to rouge. Varsity 14, Argos 7.

Argos drove play back to midfield, but a punt into touch gave them possession at their own quarter. Binkley punted just beyond midfield and Maynard was downed with the ball. Varsity 14, Argos 7.

ATTACKS THE NE TEMERE

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—Rev. Canon Kittison, Rector of Christ Church Cathedral, which is attended by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, has published a strong reply to Archbishop Bruchesi's letter on the Ne Temere Decree, subjecting it to a seraching analysis of the rights which it is claimed were given the church in Quebec. Canon Kittson was himself a former Roman Catholic, and for several years lived in the province of Quebec. He chages Mgr. Bruchesi wit hdistorting the rights of Roman Catholics in Quebec province. He tells him it would be a sad day for him if he had received his orders from King Louis or Frontenac. He further says that the Archbishop's amazing statement of claims has been disproved repeatedly by evidence of treaties themselves and by records in Quebec or Paris and also Archives.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

SATURDAY, NOV. 25, 1911

TO-NIGHT'S RALLY.

Reminder is made of the rally to-night in Mr. Hall's committee rooms to-night. Among other important and live matters to be discussed are the Workman's Compensation Act and the Power Question. These matters very closely concern the electors of Peterborough, who are invited to be present.

THE BURNING QUESTION.

Mr. Roblin, premier of Manitoba, hasted home from Ottawa with the assurance of increased territory, by the way, precisely what Sir Wilfrid Laurier offered—but he probably land'd in Winnipeg with a hole burnt in his pocket. The burning question, the question of schools, was unsettled — and thereby hangs a tale. There's where the rub comes in. The Nationalist predominance in the Borden cabinet will insist on bilingual and separate schools for the French population, and what will Mr. Borden do?

SIR JAMES IS DODGING.

Even Sir James Whitney's political friends see that he is dodging on the bilingual school question Sam Hunter, the clever cartoonist of the World, represents Sir James in the act of answering Old Man Ontario's question on the subject. Thumping his desk, with the loud pedal turned on his biceps, the premier shouts:

"What am I going to do about bilingual schools? In the first place, sir, there are no bilingual schools. In the second place Dr. Merchant has been—not yet had time to get round them all all and—haw—make his report."

If Sir James is bold enough to be honest, why should he wiggle so, that even his own party friends notice it and comment on it?

TOO MUCH POWER

Some journals are criticising the character of the Ontario and Municipal and Railway Board. They make the absurd objections that the chairman has more power than the other two members of the Board, in fact that is a one-man board in which one man can over-ride his two colleagues and do as he likes. They call upon Sir James Whitney to end the anomoly by dismissing somebody. They are reckoning without their host. The Ontario Municipal Railway Board, with its one-man power, is a Board after Sir James' own heart. He is head of a one-man government, he is the head, body and bones of the Conservative government at Queen's park. He is all sufficient, and with good reason. He can officially be as rude, offensive and brusque as he likes, and he generally likes—because he has the backing of a big and subservient majority. If Sir James Whitney's government majority were cut down to eight or ten ,as the result of the present elections, he would become less domineering and would be inclined to concede that somebody besides himself had a right to say in the government of the province. He has altogether too large a majority now.

A WORTHY OBJECT.

In another column is an appeal by the Ministerial Association for generous support of a worthy object. In past years an annual event was the ball in aid of the funds of the Deep Sea Mission, nobly represented in our minds by the interest and sacrifices of Dr. Grenfell. No nobler work than that of Dr. Grenfell on behalf of the souls and bodies of the deep sea Canadian fishermen can be mentioned. We can fancy the sufferings, hardships and social and spiritual isolation of these hardy toilers of the sea, when Dr. Grenfell's work means ministration to their spiritual wants, and healing and care for their bodies, the healing of the sick and wounded in their hazardous calling with no other medical treatment than Dr. Grenfell and his staff supply through the medium of the periodical visits of his hospital ships. The material help of us fortunately-situated Christians is more than ever called for this year, through the recent shipwreck of Dr. Grenfell's hospital ship. What this loss means by way of calamity to the sick and suffering fishermen and their families is painful even to contemplate. It constitutes an emphasized ground of appeal to the liberality of the people of Peterborough and Canada at large. When the spirit of Christmas-tide comes upon us and the spirit of human brotherhood deepens, let us not forget the needs of Dr. Grenfell's noble work, the Deep Sea Mission.

RESTORE THE MODEL SCHOOLS.

Sir James Whitney has evidently no sense of humour. This is indicated by the method he proposes, says the Stratford Beacon, to adopt to secure a larger supply of properly qualified teachers for Ontario. It is said that there are eight hundred persons teaching to-day in the province who have not the recognized professional standing, a state of affairs that has been brought about by the abolition of the county model schools. Sir James throws the whole blame upon the rush of teachers to the West, and he is going to insist on normal school graduates teaching a year in Ontario before receiving their certificates. The Beacon prdicts that this will aggravate, rather than remedy, the present state of affairs. For, after all, what is a certificate? It is merely a printed statement telling that the holder has taken the prescribed course. If this little bit of paper is withheld, the student will still have the same training, and the same ability as if in possession of the precious document, and in the west, where red tape counts for nothing, he will have no difficulty in demonstrating that he has been properly educated. In fact, the demand for instructors in the prairie provinces is so great that many collegiate institute and university graduates secure good schools without professional training at all, and this condition will last while the growth of the West continues. The holding back of certificates will cause a percentage to give up the idea of a normal course altogether and the premier's difficulties will increase.

What Sir James should do is to frankly acknowledge he has made a mistke and restore at once the county model schools. This would make entrance to the teaching profession less difficult, and would place in Ontario schools a supply of teachers with the requisite training. The Whitney Government no doubt believed that they were making the right move in abolishing the models, but time has demonstrated that they made an error in judgment. To err is human, but it takes courage to admit one's self in the wrong. It takes a big man to frankly admit that he made a mistake, and Sir James Whitney evidently does not measure up to the standard.

ASSESSMENT REFORM.

Sir James Whitney seems to be opposed to any sort of reform. He is against law reform, for, after seven years of opportunity, he has made no attempt to carry out his pre-office promises, to that effect. He is against civil service reform, because he still practises the spoils system. He is against reform—improvement—of the Compensation Act, because he has shelved it by referring it to a commission. He is against assessment reform; and even opposes local option in assessment; that is, refuses to permit municipalities the privilege of deciding for themselves whether they favour a lower relative assessment of improvements and lands.

In other words, Sir James says that municipalities are not fit to govern themselves. He declares that the present Assessment Act is all right; that the only trouble arises from the stupidity of assessors, and the incompetency of civic authorities. Every ratepayer in Peterborough knows that Sir James is talking nonsense; every ratepayer knows the injustice and inequality of the assessment the present Act makes possible.

Sir James Whitney objects to the proposal to allow municipalities the right of saying whether they will lessen the taxation on improvements, and increase it pro rata on land values. He says the proposal, if carried out (adopted by some municipalities, and declined by others) would result in a "chequer board" system of taxation. He assumes that our present assessment system is uniform.

Let us see. Take the assessment returns for the year 1909, (the latest the progressive Whitney Government supplies) and we find a sad lack of uniformity of assessment. Assuming a land value per head of $500—a very conservative figure—we find that the percentage of assessment of land to improvements varies from 43 to 57 per cent. in four of the largest cities of the Province.

Taking the cities from 14,000 to 20,000 population, we find that the percentage varies from 29 to 100 per cent. The percentage of land values to improvements is, in Port Arthur, 124 per cent.; in Guelph, 30 per cent.; in St. Thomas, 29 per cent.; in Fort William, 111 per cent. Thus we see that the assessment of land values in St. Thomas and Guelph is less than one-quarter of that of Port Arthur and less than a third of Fort William. Brantford, with 50 per cent. more population than Port Arthur, has a total land assessment one-half less than Port Arthur. Peterborough with nearly 3,000 more population, has a total land assessment of $3,939,866, nearly one-third less than that of Port Arthur—$8,705,343.

Take towns in the 10,000 population class, and we find as great variations. The land assessment value of Galt (with a smaller population, is almost double that of Belleville, and 30 per cent. higher than Woodstock.

In towns under 8,000, we find that the land assessment of Barrie is 30 per cent. higher than that of Lindsay.

In towns between 3,000 and 5,000 we see the same inequality of land assessment, Midland being from 75 to 170 per cent. higher than Port Hope, Trenton, Penetang and Newmarket.

Now, to summarize. We can safely assume that Port Arthur, whose land value assessment is 124 per cent., is practically assessed at 100 cents on the dollar. How the assessment is varied is shown by the following table indicating the percentage of land value assessment in the following places:

Port Arthur	100	Galt	25
Fort William	89	Woodstock	19
Toronto	46	Belleville	15
London	30	Lindsay	15
Hamilton	35	Cobourg	21
Ottawa	39	Orillia	19
Guelph	24	Midland	28
Peterborough	36	Port Hope	15
St. Thomas	23	Penetang	12
		Newmarket	11

Here we see the absurdity of Sir James Whitney's claim that the present assessment law is perfect, when it is so interpreted by various assessors as to produce, according to the above table, taken from returns, furnished by Sir James Whitney's Government, variations in land assessment, all the way from 11 cents to 100 cents on the dollar. What does Sir James think of that for "chequer board" assessment?

There is something worth studying in these figures, and the conditions they represent to the electors, with the municipal elections at hand. Will any elector say that the assessment conditions, under the present law, are satisfactory?

Yet Sir James Whitney says the Assessment Act is all right, and that he will oppose tax reform, even to the extent of refusing municipalities, the right to decide for themselves, whether they wish to regulate the relative assessment of land and improvements, or buildings. Sir James Whitney denies this privilege in face of the strong petitions in favour of it of 300 municipalities, 200 labour organizations, and the leading newspapers of the province, including many of Sir James' own side of politics.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ottawa is undecided as to where it is to get its water supply. It settles the question of the source of its grog more readily.

The Whitney Government boasts that it has given Ontario cheap school books—at the public expense; but they don't boast much that they have so bedevilled our educational administration that they have deprived us of teachers capable of using the text books.

Sir James Whitney, the gentleman who was "bold enough to be honest," remarks the Globe, sheltering behind a delayed report on bilingual schools, is a spectacle the people of Ontario never expected to see. The Premier says there are no bilingual schools in Ontario. What does Dr. Merchant say?

Some of the Conservative journals are boasting over the increased expenditure on education, made by the Whitney government. What is the use of this increased expenditure, if the policy of the government deprives the province of qualified teachers. The very essence of a good school is a good teacher.

French teachers and inspectors have been allowed to teach in this Province without the necessary qualifications. The English-speaking nuns in the separate schools have been required to have proper certificates. The Toronto Star, after an investigation finds these things a matter of course. Was there ever such duplicity and hypocrisy practised in this Province as is now being perpetrated by the Ontario Government?

The Conservative press shouts about a cut in the price of school books, says the Guelph Mercury, but overlooks the fact that the Province pays for the cut out of the general fund. The Conservative press knows this to be a fact, but they are not telling it to the public. Neither do they explain what use it is to have school banks which cost the users a little less when the abolition of the county model schools has left many a rural school without a teacher to teach the text books, which the Government claim to have cheapened.

REMARKABLE ACTIVITY AT BOW ISLAND

Fifteen Additional Gas Wells Are to be Drilled—100 Carloads of Material Will be Shipped to Bow Island to Carry Out This Gigantic Project

Announcement has just been made that an additional 15 wells are to be drilled at Bow Island, Alberta, and the work of drilling these wells will be prosecuted vigorously right through the winter months. Bow Island now has 5 wells, the present daily production of which is 61,365,000 cubic feet of natural gas every 24 hours. This enormous production gives to Bow Island the distinction of being the greatest natural gas field in the world.

The Bow Island Board of Trade reports that hardly a day passes but that one or more inquiries or visits are received from manufacturers seeking locations to establish industries. Cheap fuel in the form of natural gas will draw manufacturing plants to Bow Island.

During the past week there have been five different parties of surveyors at work in Bow Island. Two or these parties were made up of Dominion and C.P.R. surveyors. Another party was engaged in surveying the Hopkins party, recently purchased by the Grand Pacific Land Co. Limited of Winnipeg, Man. Representatives of the Grand Pacific Land Co. spent considerable time in Bow Island in order to learn where the future city of Bow Island would be built and it is believed that by the purchase of the Hopkins property, the Grand Pacific Land Co. controls the situation at Bow Island. This company has appointed Geo. Ruth & Co., 395 Water street, Peterborough, as its exclusive Peterborough representative for the sale of Bow Island lots. Complete information as to the remarkable development and the opportunities for profitable investment in Bow Island may be had by calling upon or writing George Ruth & Co. at Peterborough, or the Grand Pacific Land Co., Limited, at Winnipeg.

KIT'S COLUMN

It seems but the other day—it was but the other year that one passed at the door of W Clark Russell in the ancient city of Bath and listened to the kindly messages a very suffering man sent to the little band of overseas journalists who were journeying through the beautiful southwest of England. And now that "citizen of the universal world" has passed from among us His face with the imprint of pain fixed upon it is before me on the pamphlet we were given. A very fine face with a high and strong brow, head, level brows and an expression of self-control in active exercise, barely ing the tight drawn lips. W Clark Russell suffered cruelly. Poor death meant relief surcease from unmeaning agony it merit it or his case. It, for him, in the later years was hard indeed to endure. So Edwin Arnold called the dead novelist the "prose Homer of the Ocean," a title he deserved to the full. No one before or since has written of the sea as he did. The winds that race across it the salt of it, the very tang of the seaweed sing in his pages. Do the books we read in our earlier years make the deepest impression I wonder? How else account for the memory of circumstances which, occurred during the reading of one of them which remains so vividly in mind? It, then, the surrounding circumstances are remembered, how much more keenly the book itself. Certain passages leap to mind, bring with them the smell of the turf, the smoke, the twitter of the wren in her nest in the old tree by the garden gate, the odour of the hay that day when in a secret lair on the top of the rick in the haggard you lay reading Jack's Courtship. If you have not read Clark Russell, take Jack's Courtship home with you from the library the next time you call and see how you like it. But you may not care for it! You may never have known the old sea in her moods, or had her sing you a cradle song, or have spent exquisite, childish hours on the golden sands. You may not understand Clark Russell in the way a seachild could. I think, perhaps, you had better leave "Jack" up in his bunk on the top shelf.

Of late Mr Russell was given to calling himself with Tom Bowling "a sheer hulk" and now with old Tom "he's gone aloft." He has crossed the bar and met his Pilot "face to face." Many a man he sent to the marine service. His pen woke the seacraving in a boy and he shipped. The king our present king complimented in the highest manner the "greatest master of the sea" when he accepted the dedication of What Cheer? Clark Russell was a national asset and more he was a friend to humanity. Time and again he has broken a lance in favor of the "down and out" the submerged human atom, the helpless and the poor. One there was who wrote a sonnet to him, living. I give it now that he is dead.

Lover of words am I—my cradle swung
To cadences poetic, and the grain
Throve in the garden of the infant brain.
And a deep passion for the mother-tongue
Rooted and flourished. And with it has sprung
A gratitude intense to all the train
Of word-magicians who a native strain,
Noble and beautiful have ever sung.
And now, O master, I acknowledge thee
Direfest of all who paint in English speech,
The windy sparkle of the olive sea
The silver shoaling on a coral beach—
How oft upon thine islands have I swooned
Like lotus-eaters, sad have been marooned."

"You know him well," I said to his friend, as we stood in the sunlight outside Clark Russell's door.

"Yes, thank God, since I was a boy, and I know no greater or more lovable being," and weaving our way through the streets of the ancient city we talked long and well of him."

At last some one has remembered the poor newspaper man. Rich men have left money to charities, to hospitals, to found great institutions, libraries, etc., but it remained for a journalist to remember his fellow craftsmen. Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor and editor of the World—New York's great newspaper—has left by his will not only money enough for the establishment of a school of journalism, but $108,500 to be distributed some of it annually—among various writers—the author of the best paper on the school of journalism; the best history of services rendered to the public by the American press during the year—this is annual; the best original American play; the best book of the year from the history of the United States; the best biography barring the names of Washington and Lincoln; the best editorial article written in the year, and the best example of a reporter's work. There's generosity for you towards a profession that gets the least help or encouragement of any that I know. The reporter, who is but acting within the limits of his profession when he seeks an interview from this great man or that famous woman, gets usually more kicks than halfpence for doing his duty. The editorial writer, who does the characteristic work of the paper without even getting such credit as might accrue to him from the use of a pen-name, works day in and out on a salary by no means calculated to encourage in him habits of luxury.

These men and others of their craft have never before, to the writer's knowledge, been benefited by the very wealthy men who are so fond of leaving monuments behind them to perpetuate name if not memory.

Some of Canada's captains of industry, men who have made their money in the country, might be tempted to follow the example of the great Hungarian, Pulitzer, who made his fortune in America and left it there—a goodly part of it to his comrades in his work. Our best writers—our men and women of intellect and brains are not selling their wares in Canada because they cannot earn a living at literature here. Why? It has all been threshed out too often in our press for me to give the dreary explanation here. Canadians are not encouraging Canadian writers. Perhaps, one day, a Canadian Pulitzer will arise and help on the cause—not only by his will when he is dead, but by his shekels while he is alive. Who ever offers a thousand dollar prize for a literary effort in Canada? Like the man in the Refreshment Room at Rugby, "I laff, sir. I laff."

I searched the town for a brown hat, but brown being out of fashion there aren't any. So I got an old one in the attic and twiddled it into shape. Did you ever have one color dinned into you? "You should always wear brown, dear; it suits your hair," your oldest friend will purr. "Brown is your color; you should never wear anything else." "I like you best in brown, little woman," this from himself. "You look better in brown than anything, mother," this from the children. "Brown suits you. Your hair, you know," this from anybody. And as you huddle on your brown togs you are thankful for the two little grey tufts that are sprouting at your temples. All the same, you tuck them under a brown veil and forget them. 'Twas always thus. Only in Ireland they called you "Cloxy." To be dark-haired and have freckles as big as the spots on the turkey's egg is the Irish peasant's idea of beauty. Many a time Betty pitied me audibly. "The crayturreen," she would say, dropping her voice as she discussed the long-eared child with a neighbour. "Sure she's spoiled entirely with the foxy head she has and the yallow skin. The other wans are fair as an egg but whin you dhress her in brown, she doesn't be looking so foxy-faced." And ever since it has been a long procession of brown bonnets with rebellious interludes in which gray and blue had a chance, only to be called "cold" and "unbecoming." And now Billie Burke says of brown, "Don't wear it." But Billie has russet-gold hair and turkey's egg skin. She can rejoice in pinks and yellows and lady greens. She is not foxy in the face nor has she grey tufts on her temples. And she's no "crayturreen." I can tell you, Betty would fall down and adore her as the queen of the Sindhe. It is all very well for Miss Burke to preach. But if you had a foxy face "widout a turkey's egg spot" on it, you'd search the town for a brown hat, and call it names in the secrecy of your own room when you got it.

There is a little book wandering abroad waiting for you to pick it up and send it to a friend as a Christmas gift. It is a gay little book clothed in imperial purple and filled with selections from the works of Canadian authors. You will be surprised at the number we have, and at the fine things many of them have written. The work is called Canadian Days and has been prepared by the Toronto branch of the Canadian Women's Press club. It is published by the Musson Book Company and costs seventy-five cents. The ladies who have prepared it are Miss Marjory MacMurchy, eminent writer and president of the C W P C., Miss Amelia Warnock (Katherine Hale), poet, lecturer and critic, and Miss June Wells Fraser, president of the Toronto branch of our Press club. The selections have been carefully made. The book is essentially Canadian. It is bright, pleasing and redolent of our beautiful country, and just waiting for you to wrap it up and despatch it by the Reindeer line to your best beloved friend.

Are you remembering the hard hours of unceasing labor which face the shop assistants and buying your presents early? It would be a kindness to do so. It is as easy for most of us to begin our gift choosing now as later, besides which, you can now pick on what you want in a leisurely manner instead of rushing for something at the last minute and getting what is neither desirable or suitable. Think of the harrassed sales-girls to whom Christmas means a season of killing work. A little forethought on your part will do much towards making the great holiday time happier for them. It is one way of making a Christmas present.

Here we are again writing to the newspapers to know what we ought to give. The advertisements are all—give, give, give. They vulgarize Christmas. More, the writers are traitors. They get old Santy in a corner and squeeze his secrets out of him and then promptly give them away. They picture him doing things that would never come into his head. He detests railway travelling, believe me, and nothing could induce him to get into an aeroplane. He does not live in Iceland or in any mortal place, but in a kingdom of his own. There he keeps his reindeer, makes his lists from names the birds bring him as they travel from this land to that. Peter Pan is his secretary and Queen Mab does most of his shopping, but he depends mostly on the letters he gets. He comes to old children sometimes. They can hear him pattering about the chimney on the roof outside, and he has been known to have telephone communication with them. To me he confided that he detests being "made a slow of." Just now he is busy of nights collecting his letters from the queerest post offices. I wrote to him last night—I have to, being one of his old children—and set it in a corner of the brass fender just where I know he will look for it. Already his spirit pervades a house I know. I can hear it creaking on the stairs and whisking parcels in and out of drawers, and whispering about. And that is a whole month from Christmas!

The government should turn its brand new eye on bank matters. It will not pay this country to have our young men suiciding as bank clerks are suiciding. The boys are paid salaries that are scandalous. On their meager wage they are expected to live and dress like gentlemen. They are asked out into the best society, and must be fittingly dressed on occasions of this sort. Many of them try to help a widowed mother or sisters in poor circumstances. How can a boy do it and live? He handles money every day in vast quantities, or sees it heaped about him. Let me say that I think his honesty under the circumstances is extraordinary. Banks should be made to feel ashamed if only by public opinion of the salaries they pay their young men. We are often offered in the press pathetic letters of young girls and old men who have opened the door themselves. I never read a few lines that touched me more than those written by the poor boy who shot himself out of the world the other day in Halifax: "Farewell, I have tried to make good and failed. I do not lay blame for my misdeeds on so-and-so." Of course he was going to write "societs." He had tried and failed! Why? Because he or no other boy could make ends meet on the thin little salary he was paid for constant and trying work. You don't hear innocent bank managers shooting themselves, or the gentlemen who direct banks, or the highly paid bank officials. Are we going to waste our young, strong, human material like this here in Canada when we so badly want men?

A correspondent writes to ask if it be true that the Scot and the Englishman like to drink alone while the Irishman likes to drink in company. He has a bet on it, he says. Regarding the two first I have nothing to say but I quote from the Idyls of Killowen in regard to my countryman, Patrick. The lines were written by the Rev. Matthew Russell, brother of the late Lord Killowen:

"Where all are bad, there is not much to choose,
But basest is the solitary boose.
No Irish drunkard takes his pastime so;
When he gets drunk he lets the neighbors know."

But let us hope that few take their pleasure in this sad and foolish manner these days.

PREVENT Falling Hair
by the use of
NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Falling hair is not a trivial matter. It is cause for alarm. It tells of a condition leading sooner or later to partial or total baldness. Hair that comes out on the brush or comb is dead hair and it falls out because the follicle is diseased and the hair is not being supplied with the proper nourishment. Every hair that falls out is not replaced by a new one. If the follicle is atrophied it will never grow another hair. The spot remains bare and if further loss is not checked the hair on the head becomes distressingly thin or there may be total baldness.

In ninety-nine instances out of a hundred, it is dandruff that causes the loss of hair. Scientific research now developes the fact that the distressing accumulation known as dandruff is due to a germ which burrows down into the follicle and destroys the life of the hair. This is what makes the hair come out.

There is but one way to overcome this trouble. An occasional shampoo won't do it as that only cleans the scalp and does not reach the real cause. The dandruff must not only be eradicated but the germ destroyed, by regular and intelligent applications of Newbro's Herpicide. Insist always upon having genuine Herpicide, the first and Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer.

By keeping the scalp free from dandruff, clean and healthy, Herpicide checks the loss of hair. Newbro's Herpicide makes the hair light, fluffy, luxuriant and beautiful. Possessing a delicate fragrance, Herpicide commends itself to persons of refinement, who have a well-developed appreciation for the good things of life.

Applications obtained at the better Barber Shops and Hair-Dressing parlors. Large size bottles sold and guaranteed everywhere.

The Best Shampoo Soap and Most Perfect Comb for Ladies' Use

Don't use a cheap soap for shampooing. Herpicide Asepto Tar makes a soft, creamy lather and does not harm the hair or scalp. There is nothing better. No lady can appreciate the real comfort of hair-dressing without a Herpicide Comb. ASK YOUR DRUGGIST ABOUT THESE THINGS

Send for Sample and Booklet

A sample bottle of Herpicide also a booklet telling all about the care of the hair will be sent upon receipt of ten cents in postage or silver.

OUR SPECIAL PARIS LETTER

(From "AGENCE LUCEY," Paris)

The inconsistencies of Dame Fashion are her greatest charm in the eyes of most women and never has she been so inconsistent as she is this season. We were told at the end of last summer that the following winter would be marked by the use of real winter materials suitable for cold weather, and true enough we are now launched into velvet and fur in abundance. Everybody is wearing tailor-mades of velvet with magnificent stoles and huge muffs of ermine, sable, chinchilla, fox, or some other less expensive kind of fur, but the favourite is decidedly ermine, worn with black velvet. At every smart function tea at the Rita, on the race course at Auteuil or Longchamps, in the Bois de Boulogne on a Sunday morning, half or more than half of the women are now wearing black velvet and ermine. On the other hand, to prove her right to be inconsistent, our Lady of Fashion has decreed that we shall also wear violet satin and "mousseline de soie," black satin and Chantilly lace, white satin and black mousseline with just a very big muff and a very wide stole fur to delude us into thinking we are warmly and properly clothed to face the winds of winter. The effect of all those charming materials together is fascinating, and it is a pleasure to the artistic eye to go to any fashionable gathering if only to watch the beautifully dressed women come and go, to note the way they put on and carry their lovely clothes and to weave fancies about their personalities from their choice in colours and cut.

For the early morning walk, or for shopping, the Parisienne is wearing the neatest of neat tailor-mades, short in the skirt, fairly long in the coat and with a collar of some different material from the rest of the suit. In our first illustration we show a typical plain tailor-made of this season designed by one of the most Parisian of the French dressmakers. This particular model is in black velvet with a collar of white ermine, but I have seen the same model carried out in tabac with a fur collar and cuffs, in blue cloth with a reversible side of Scotch plaid, in tweed with a velvet collar, and in all it has looked simple and smart, two of the qualities which always mark the well-dressed woman. In the Bois one sees a great many plain ratin suits worn with smart little felt hats, the only trimming being a feather fantasy, or with one of those perky little handkerchief toques in velvet; for instance I saw a girl the other day with a tailor-made of dark green ratine trimmed with big green stone buttons, a shawl collar of brown otter, cuffs of the same and a handkerchief toque of green velvet which was set well down on her pretty head to show the golden brown hair as an aureole round the fresh young face. Her boots were in brown suede and patent leather and from a well-gloved hand she swung a bag of brown otter, it being one of the very latest caprices of the Parisienne, to have her handbag in fur, to match the trimmings of her tailor-made.

At a brilliant afternoon reception recently there was such a wealth of velvet and fur, satin and fur, lace, damask, brocade, embroidery to say nothing of the feathers and aigrettes in the hats, that one began to wonder whether one had by chance lighted upo a scene out of the "Arabian Nights." And it is not only that the dresses and hats are so rich and beautiful, but the details of every toilette are so carefully thought out, even to the very jewel which gleams among the laces at the throat, the jewelled bag and the bunch of trinkets which hangs beside it, the hat-pins which hold the hat in place, the dainty footgear and jewelled buckles, the silk stockings with their lace insertions, the bit of cambric and lace which is called a handkerchief, the flower nestling among the fur of the stole or the muff. Every single thing is perfect in itself and in its relation to the rest of the toilette. I can see in my mind's eye a woman renowned for her delicate beauty and for her likeness to a picture in the Louvre Museum by Greuze. She was dressed in a gown of black velvet partly covered by a priceless tunic of Chantilly lace, which trailed away behind nearly to the end of the pointed black satin train. Over the shoulders the lace was droopingly arranged to form a berthe on one side and a revers on the other, and at the waist in front was thrust a rich violet velvet rose, in the heart of which glistened a diamond pretending to be a dewdrop. The waist behind was trimmed by a formal black satin bow, and the decollete of the gown was filled in with a plain white tulle guimpe made with a very high collar-band. On her lovely head the woman wore a big black hat of velvet, lined under the brim with violet velvet, and trimmed with one bunch of magnificent violet aigrettes, stuck fast on the brim to spike out at a sharp angle on the left side, towards the back of the shoulder. Over the gown, when she went down to her carriage, she wore a glorious coat of ermine, trimmed from the feet upwards to the waist with a width of black Chantilly, which spiked up in points and seemed to melt into the soft whiteness of the fur. It is the only coat I have seen in Paris which has had such a trimming, and although it struck one as reaching rather widely after an effect of luxury, it looked perfectly beautiful, and not at all as expensive as it must have been. In simpler vein, I remember a woman dressed in violet velvet and chinchilla, a tailor-made with a three-quarter coat fastening up the left side to the throat with motives of black passementerie and trimmed round the neck with a high band of chinchilla. The cuffs were also of chinchilla and a band of the same fur ran round the edge of the skirt. The huge granite muff of chinchilla was lined with pale violet chiffon over white satin, and the toque was of chinchilla with a violet aigrette fastened by a big cabuchon of old paste. The black velvet gowns and tailor-mades were many and varied in cut, but the ermine stoles and muffs which gave them their distinction were all built on the same pattern, that is to say, the stoles were a good yard wide, very soft and pliable, and ermine on both sides. The muffs were enormous, very flat and generally with a crow of dear little black tails running sidewise across them. White ermine tippets suit bright young faces, and seem to be coming in favour, and the amount of coquetry which can be put into the manipulation of the stole and the muff is something to study and marvel over.

In our second illustration we show a fantasy on the tailor-made such as one may meet at a reception, at an afternoon concert, or at any function where something a little smarter than the severe suit is necessary, but where the full afternoon garb would be a little out of place. It is in ribbed amethyst velvet, with a waistcoat of pale mauve cloth, fastened down the front with clear amethyst buttons, and round the waist a belt of violet patent leather. The jon-tailed coat is one of the novelties of the season, and is very advantageous to the short woman.

At a "First Night" at a recent play I fell desperately in love with the fascinating little bonnets women are wearing for the theatre just now. One kind is called the Greuze bonnet, but it is really only a very modified edition of the bonnet one sees in Greuze pictures. It has a soft crown made entirely of flowers, rose petals, moon daisies, violets, any flower one likes, and round the edge runs a band of fur, which is further edged with a frill of lace. Another model showed a crown of dull silver trellis-work, with a border of tiny silk roses in different faded tones, suggestive of those one associates with the ladies of old Versailles, and round that, the softening frill of lace again. Some models have a knot of black velvet ribbon hanging from behind, which is carried over the shoulder in long looped ends, and allowed to wander over the dress in front, others have a width of ribbon of velvet tied crossways over the crown of flowers into a bow at the side, tending towards the back, and cut with a buckle of some old-fashioned workmanship. Under them it is possible to dress the hair in various and charming fashions, one of these being the round chignon with the drooping side curl, another is the waved hair carried over the tip of each ear, and behind the most elaborate erection of glossy coils. It is quite remarkable how hairdressing has changed within the last two months. No one wears quaintly dressed hair now, glossy coils, plaits, rolls, and neat side or centre partings with soft waves across the brow, are the styles one sees everywhere, and a great many women are wearing their aigrettes flat, so as to stand out at the same angle one notices on the hats. The effect of all this careful brushing and shining of comely locks is most pleasant, for it makes women look so much better groomed (if one may be allowed to use such a masculine term to express feminine charm) than when the hair is frizzed and rough.

Next week we shall have more secrets to disclose about Fashion's inconsistencies and charms, for not a day goes by but some new idea in fashion is relegated to the shelf of "outmoded," and not a week but some temporary oblivion.

Y.M.C.A. Boys At Lakefield

A party from the Y.M.C.A. numbering about thirty paid a visit to Lakefield last evening and gave a gymnastic exhibition under the leadership of Mr. J. Thompson, the physical director.

The attendance was a large one and a very enjoyable time was spent. The gymnastic display was well received by the assembly, who evinced considerable enthusiasm with regard to physical work. Following was the programme:

1 Overture.
2 Dialogue.
3 Calisthenic drill.
4 Pyramid building.
5 Exhibition on parallel bars.
6 Exhibition on parallel bars.
7 Intermission.
8 Club dance.
9 Combination tumbling.
10 Corn song.
11 Pyramid building.
12 Reading.
13 Eccentric comedy.
14 Mat work.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

ANOTHER LETTER FROM A PROMINENT TRAVELLER

A traveller who has travelled the continent from Halifax to Vancouver, has recently forwarded a letter to Mr. A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Grand Trunk Railway System, Toronto, which reads as follows:

"Have just arrived at Toronto from Nelson, B.C., travelling over the Grand Trunk Pacific from Edmonton to Winnipeg and consequently I wish to state that I have made the trip several times, but the improvement of rolling stock, equipment, roadbed and speed of travel, increases year by year. I have travelled over and it is a pleasure for me to recommend this road. You are having a great road."

The Weakness of Liquor Drinkers

Alcohol is a Cumulative Poison That Undermines the Mind and Breaks the Body—The Gatlin Treatment Cures the Liquor Habit in THREE DAYS

LIQUOR makes a man's whole life a lie. It poisons his brain and he believes that he feels good when he feels bad. Under its influence he believes himself strong when he is weak and growing weaker every day, he believes his business prosperous when it is on the verge of bankruptcy, he believes he is talking intelligently when he is talking like an imbecile, he believes that he has the confidence of his friends when they wouldn't trust him for a minute in an important matter.

Why not wake up? THINK just a bit. Be it you can. What has liquor ever done for you? What is it doing for you? Has it ever made you any money, any friends? Come to the Gatlin Institute and be cured. But THREE DAYS of your time will be required. You will be accepted for treatment under a legally executed contract that you are to be cured in THREE DAYS cured to your entire satisfaction or the fee you pay shall be refunded at the end of the third day and treatment shall cost you NOTHING. You judge the cure, not the Gatlin Institute.

There are no hypodermic injections, no strong drugs, no disagreeable features, nothing to be afraid of. A child could safely take the Gatlin treatment. There is not a poisonous ingredient in it.

If you cannot come to the institute for THREE DAYS send for the Gatlin Home treatment. It carries practically the same contract to cure as Institute treatment, the only change being one to protect us against unscrupulous persons.

NEWFOUNDLAND TOO SENDS GOOD NEWS

OF THE GREAT WORK DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING.

J. G. Green; a sufferer from Rheumatism and Lumbago for five years, finds quick relief and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Clam Bank Cove, Bay St. George, Nfld., Nov. 24—Newfoundland contributes its share of the splendid cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills. There is a striking example of this place. Mr. J. G. Green, a well known resident, suffered from Rheumatism and Lumbago for five years. To-day he is a well man, and does not hesitate to give Dodd's Kidney Pills all the credit for the cure.

"My trouble was caused by strain and cold," Mr. Green says, in telling his story. "And for five years I suffered from Rheumatism and Lumbago. I was always tired and nervous. My sleep was broken and unrefreshing and the pains of neuralgia added to my distress.

"I was in a very bad shape indeed when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, but they soon gave me relief. It is because I found a cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills that I recommend them to my friends."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Kidney ills no matter where it is found or in what stage it is in.

"AT HOME"

An At Home was held last night in the S. O. E. Hall under the auspices of the Canadian Order Chosen Friends. The event which assumed the form of a social evening, was enjoyed by all present. A solo was rendered by Mrs. Meagray in her usual good form. Recitations by Mr. McQuay and Miss Nellie Sneloff also added to the enjoyment of the evening, following which progressive euchre and other games were indulged in. Mrs. McWilliams, Mr. Letchbrook, Miss W. Walsh, Mr. Dureas and Mr. W. H. Hubel were the prize winners. Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

Calgary's Unique Publicity Campaign

Will Raise $100,000 to Advance Calgary's Industrial Interests

The Examiner is in receipt of a copy of the Calgary Albertan, from Mr. J. J. Turner, who is on an extended business trip to the west. The front page of the issue gives considerable space relative to a ten days' industrial campaign which is being conducted by the leading business men of that city. A committee with a Chicago expert, is in charge of the work, and the object of the movement is to raise $100,000 in ten days. The money will be used to further the industrial interests of Calgary. The article appears under the caption of "$100,000 for Calgary's sake."

Subscriptions totalling over $5,000 have already been received. The president of the Board of Trade subscribed $1500 to the fund.

A fund of $100,000 is considered adequate to cover the operations of the bureau for a period of three years or more. The subscriptions will extend over a three year period and be payable quarterly. By this plan the subscriptions can be generous, and still be no strain upon the contributors.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

An aged man named John Middleton, was arraigned in the police court this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly on the street. He pleaded guilty and was sent up to the hill for a week.

Jas. Pilling was arraigned on the charge of being drunk, while on the black list. This was his second offence and the lowest fine was $20, while it could not exceed $50. The former fine was imposed and in default of payment, the accused will spend the next month a guest at Castle Nesbitt.

Assault Case.

A young man named Ralph Watson was charged with assaulting a young lady in the south end of the city last been under a doctor's care ever since Sunday night. The young lady has and was unable to give evidence in court this morning, so the case had to be adjourned until Wednesday, during which time the accused will be on remand. The police authorities state that the young lady informed them that the defendant tried to go home with her on Sunday night, following her all the way from Clark the street. She stated that she tried to get away from him, but he caught her and refused to let her go. As a result of the affair the young lady has been in a very nervous condition ever since. Watson was arrested last night by Det. Newnall. He answers to the descriptions given by the young lady. A local man was allowed to go on a charge of being drunk.

Delightful Organ And Vocal Recital At St. Andrew's Church

One of the foremost musical treats of the season was the organ recital by Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, at St. Andrew's church last night. He was assisted by Miss Olive Howell, Mr. Asa Huycke and Mr. Ernest Thompson, vocal.

Mr. Treneer proved, in his splendid programme of standard and popular numbers, that he is a master of his art. His selections demanded a delicate and expert handling, and he had at his command all the necessary powers and qualities conducive of success. He had not only a pleasing touch, but the intelligence of his interpretation made his renderings an artistic delight. As an organist, Mr. Treneer has many admirers in Peterborough. There is something in his playing that immediately commands a sympathetic interest. Possessing a sure, clear and highly developed technique, his playing was robust, fresh and entirely free from affectations.

Miss Olive Howell's contributions made a pleasing addition to the programme. Her clear interpretations and perfect enunciations were conspicuous evidence of her splendid artistic ability. Her numbers were given in excellent voice and with a feeling that made them very effective.

The selections of Mr. Ernest Thompson and Mr. Asa Huycke's rendering, added greatly to the success of the recital and were very much appreciated by the enthusiastic audience. Every item on the programme was appreciated, evidence of which was given in no uncertain manner.

Programme.

The following beautiful selections were included in the programme:

Organ Solo—Russian National Hymn with Concert Variations ..... Michael Costa
Herbert C. Treneer
Vocal Solo—"The Lark Now Leaves His Watery Nest" ... Horatio Parker
Miss Olive Howell
Organ Solo—Verspiel Overture from Lohengrin ..... R. Wagner
Herbert C. Treneer
Chopin Funeral March .....
Herbert C. Treneer
Vocal Solo—"The Children's Home" ..... Cowen
Mr. Ernest Thompson
Organ Solo—(a) "Hearts and Flowers" ..... Tobani
(b) "Moments Musicale" Franz Schubert
Herbert C. Treneer
Organ Solo—"Tocato" ..... Dubois
Herbert C. Treneer
Vocal Solo—"Good-bye" ..... Tosti
Mr. Asa Huycke
Vocal Solo—"The Indian Serenade" ..... Wilfred Sanderson

SHOP EARLY; DO IT NOW

Do it now is the best possible advice that can be given in connection with your Christmas shopping.

The gift-giving occasion is only a little more than four weeks away, and now is the time to begin to get your gifts ready. To get the best selection, to be assured of the best service, to give your fellow-beings, who work in Peterborough's stores better treatment, don't delay your shopping. Start in next week and you will be surprised to find how easy it is to pick up suitable Christmas boxes now. The stores have a complete stock, everything has not been picked over by scores of customers, as is the case later on. If only in justice to yourself you should do your Christmas buying as early as possible. Nothing is gained by waiting until the last awful week, when clerks are tired, literally worn out and stocks depleted, and showing signs of wear. Do it now!

THE NEW C. G. E. SUB STATION RAPIDLY NEARING COMPLETION

At 4.57 o'clock sharp on Thursday evening, the huge turbine driven generators at the new C.G.E. substation at Auburn commenced to rotate and a few seconds later the current was being received at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant on Park and Albert street. This power station, which has been under course of construction for several months, is considered to be one of the best equipped power producing plants in the Dominion for its size.

The Equipment.

The machinery and apparatus when installation is completed, will consist of four A.T.R. 100-300-72-4600 volts vertical turbine generators, each driven by an 89 inch water wheel. These machines were manufactured by the S. Morgan Smith Company of Pennsylvania. One turbine exciter, driven by a 36 in water wheel; one A.T.I. induction generator; one M.P. motor, 625-1200 revolutions, 125 volts; four Lombard governors, type E, vertical; one Woodward governor, type D; one alernator self-registering head and tail gauges; two 10 kilowatt induction motors for supplying light to power house. The outstanding feature of the entire apparatus is the up-to-date switchboard, which is constructed of natural black slate, marine finish and is fully equipped with instruments, switches, etc. It is next to impossible for the most inexperienced hand to sustain a shock from the front of the board, all wires leading to it entering from the rear, and are heavily insulated as a further precaution.

Lightning Arresters.

Danger from lightning entering the building and putting some of the apparatus out of commission has been rendered immune, by reason of the installation of aluminum cone lightning arresters. These carry the foreign electricity to the ground before it reaches the switchboard. There is a 12 foot head of water and automatic water gauges designate the rise or fall of water in either the head or tail race.

Will Divert to the iCty.

There is a standing agreement between the city and the Canadian General Electric Company, that at the expiration of twenty years the plant and machinery shall become the property of the city. The company is also required to pay the city the sum of $2,000 per annum and the taxes. The city in return gives the company the right to use the location and water power. The installation work is under the able supervision of Mr. R. S. Cotton, and needless to say the result speaks for itself. It will be about a month before the work will be completed. There are two more generators to install yet, together with several other fixtures too numerous to mention. In connection with the above named machinery, there are four automatic recording watt meters which register the total output of the plant.

The building, which is connected with the city pumping station, is constructed along the same architectural lines as the latter. It is very compact and particular attention has been given to the elimination of superfluous floor space. 1,300 kilowatts equalling 1,700 horse power, can be produced here. Formerly it has been found necessary to close down some of the departments at the C.G.E. towards evening. It was a case of where the demand exceeded the supply. The product of the new power producing plant will cause these conditions to pass into history.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all druggists.

THIS is the "IDEAL" Accident-proof Crib, designed for baby's comfort and safety and mother's convenience and freedom from worry.

Ends and sides are extra high to prevent the baby climbing out, and the spindles are close together so that baby cannot get its head between them. The side lowers to make the crib an easy to mother's bed when desired. "IDEAL" Cribs are made in a number of attractive patterns and various sizes, all strong, durable and without dangerous sharp corners or rough edges. The "IDEAL" guarantee label identifies the genuine. Sold by most stores.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The first meeting of the Collegiate Life Problem Club was held in the boys reading room at the Y M C A on Saturday evening Nov 18th, at 7.15. The first forty five minutes were devoted entirely to the enjoyment of the outdoors repast which was furnished by Mr Coneman. After every one had satisfied the utmost longings [illegible] the King proposed by R Stratton to which [illegible] responded.

The next order on the programme was a [illegible] address by Mr Spencer. Mr Spencer came to us [illegible] a short address by Dr Spencer [illegible] which he clearly outlined the objects of the Life Problem Club. It announced that at the next meeting the subject under discussion would be Education under the following heads:

1 What Our Education Means to Us.
2 What Our Education Means to our Community in Which We Live
3 What Our Education Means to a Province
4 What Our Education Means to the Dominion
5 What Our Education Means to our Country
6 What Our Education Means to the World at Large

After the announcement Dr Spencer opened his address by telling us how he was pleased indeed that we had formed into a Life Problem Club such as we met. He remarked on the confidence he welcomed every opportunity to come in contact with students and to form an acquaintance that he felt confident would ripen into friendship. He [illegible] the importance of a diploma [illegible] but that every man was born at the start with the same chance [illegible] and that the only method that [illegible] students and as students [illegible] and make our studies of such a [illegible] to all. He then expressed [illegible] to be able to [illegible] matters [illegible] and thanked us [illegible] Mr Spencer and himself for [illegible] by touching upon the [illegible] of the election of officers.

The following were elected:
President R Stratton
Vice President A Austin
Secretary L Stovell
Assistant R Smith
Vice President Dr Spicer, by acclamation.

After the election a constitution was drawn up and the business of the evening completed. The meeting adjourned into Saturday evening [illegible] when Education will be discussed [illegible] Civil Secretary.

REPORTS FROM THE REGISTRATION BOOTHS

Registration of Manhood Suffrage voters for the Provincial elections continues with increased activity. It is expected that the big rush will take place this afternoon and evening. The reports of the total registrations up to 2 o'clock this afternoon are as follows:

Ward No 1—Van Every's, 204 Rubidge street total 44
Ward No 3 Police Court. Total 43
Ward No 2—Council Chamber Total 65
Ward No 4 Lees's shop, Smith Street Total 66
Ward No 5—Old Town Hall Total 63

All supporters of Mr Hall should see that their names are on the lists.

FINAL REPORT

The Grand Trunk Railway System have received the final report from their Director at Festival of Empire, Crystal Palace London which closed on October 31st 1911.

The report gives very interesting information as follows:

Total number of visitors at Grand Trunk building were 367,133.

Advertising matter distributed, 149,344 pieces.

Cinematograph shows given in the building 1,086 at which 108,600 people attended.

The Grand Trunk building was one of the most popular at this Exhibition and was a great advertisement to Canada as well as the railway.

The popularity of this exhibit, together with the attractive features that were shown, has elicited the request from the Crystal Palace authorities for the perpetuation during another year and the Grand Trunk have acquiesced in their desire, and the exhibit will be continued during the summer of 1912.

The Grand Prix were received by the Grand Trunk for their efforts at the Festival of Empire, the highest awards that could be given by the Jury.

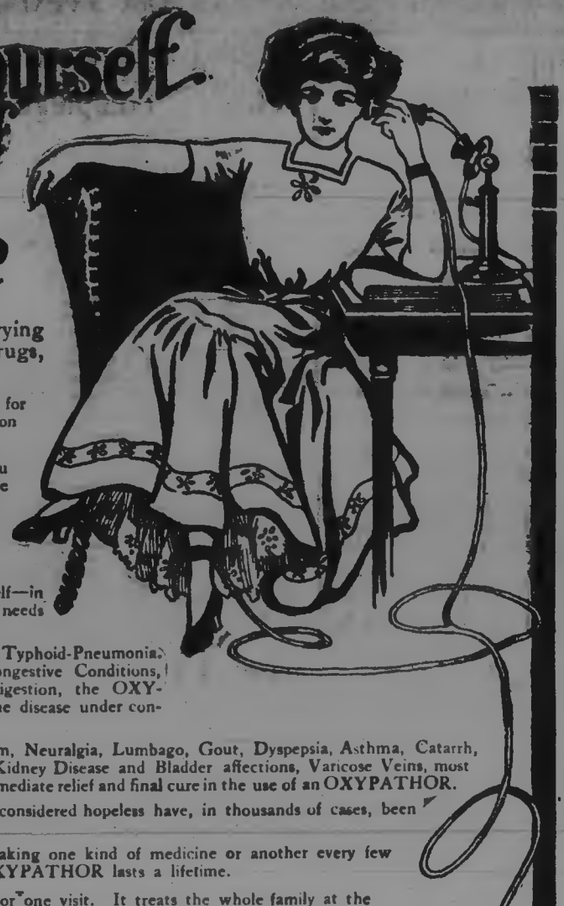
Will Blockade The Straits

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PARIS, Nov 25 — The declaration of Italy's intention to blockade or otherwise interfere with the passage of the Dardanelles, has caused a storm of protest from Russia, who has notified France of her treaty rights in these Straits. Turkey has threatened to block the passage with sunken ships if Italy's warships approach the Straits.

Treat and Cure Yourself In The Privacy of Your Own Home



NO NEED to summon a curious, prying doctor, no need to gulp down nasty drugs, if you use an OXYPATHOR.

The OXYPATHOR is the modern drugless cure for sickness and disease of almost every kind. Investigation will prove this broad statement.

The OXYPATHOR cures disease and keeps you well through the administration of Nature's most valuable agent—Oxygen.

Oxygen deficiency is the reason for so much disease, suffering and needless mortality as is caused today by the unnatural conditions under which we live.

OXYPATHY teaches you the art of curing yourself—in the privacy of your own home. Apply it to your body's needs when sick or ailing and regain and maintain health.

In sudden dangerous diseases, such as Pneumonia, Typhoid-Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Peritonitis, Croup, La Grippe, Quinsy, Congestive Conditions, Dysentery, Inflammation of all kinds and Acute Indigestion, the OXYPATHOR works with great rapidity. It soon has the disease under control and the patient out of danger.

Chronic sufferers from such diseases as Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Gout, Dyspepsia, Asthma, Catarrh, Constipation, Piles, General Debility, Liver Troubles, Kidney Disease and Bladder affections, Varicose Veins, most forms of Paralysis, Gallstones and Tonsilitis, will find immediate relief and final cure in the use of an OXYPATHOR.

All forms of nervous diseases that have been long considered hopeless have, in thousands of cases, been cured by the OXYPATHOR.

With the OXYPATHOR there is no bother of taking one kind of medicine or another every few minutes. A bottle of medicine lasts a week—the OXYPATHOR lasts a lifetime.

The cost is lower than a specialist would charge for one visit. It treats the whole family at the same rate as one person. Children especially like the OXYPATHOR treatment.

The OXYPATHOR makes you independent of doctors and drugs forever.

We invite your investigation.

Ne Temere Decree

Special to The Examiner:

New York N Y, Nov 25—The Ne Temere decree is making itself felt in high places in United States society. HAD VERY BAD COUGH.

Tickling Sensation In Throat.

Could Not Sleep At Night.

A bad cough, with that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat, is one of the most aggravating coughs a person can possibly have.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will quickly stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry cough that keeps you awake at night, for the simple reason that it is so rich in the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, it cannot help but do otherwise.

Miss C. Danielson, Bowsman River, Man., writes:—"Last fall I had a very bad cough and a tickling sensation in my throat. It was so bad I could not sleep at night, so I went to a druggist and told him I wanted something for my cold and he advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup which I did, and after taking one bottle I was completely cured. Let me recommend Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to any one who suffers from a cough or throat irritation."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

RIBBON FLOWERS

Decorate everything.

Satin is the preferred material.

They ornament the edges of tunics.

Even on hats they are often seen.

Wreaths of them festoon quaint little evening frocks.

A large one worn in the corsage is a dainty finish for the fichu.

Garlands of them are used to trim tissue handbags.

Some of the new sleeves are caught above the elbow with one or several ribbon roses.

They are a pretty form of trimming for the numerous handkerchief, glove or sewing boxes favouted as gifts at Christmas time.

Those of gold tissue are extremely effective for the purpose.

All Eyes Are Turned on Sir Edward Grey To-day

OPINION IN HIS FAVOUR

SIR EDWARD GREY

...ary, Winston Spencer Churchill, and the Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna.

Since there has been time to digest the German Foreign Minister's account of the Moroccan negotiations with Sir Edward Grey, opinion has taken a decided turn in favor of the Government's policy and in favor of the British Foreign Secretary's diplomacy. A few journals continue to criticize the secret diplomacy and question whether Great Britain had sufficient cause to join France in war. But there has been a decided decrease in the attacks on the Foreign Office except by a group of Labor papers which have always been called pro-German.

The principal question the country is asking is: What were the German demands before Chancellor Lloyd George's speech on July 21 and what they will be after Sir Edward's speech in the House of Commons today.

Sir Edward will move that the foreign policy of His Majesty's Government be considered and ... which will occupy two days and three wide range.

Anglican Replies to Archbishop Bruchesi's Manifesto

CONTRADICTS STATEMENTS

Montreal, Nov. 27.—A reply to the recent pronouncement of the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal, on the question of mixed marriage and the "Ne temere" decree has been made by the Anglican Lord Bishop of Montreal.

The manifesto says in part:

"His Grace, the Roman Archbishop of Montreal, has made some remarkable statements concerning the Ne Temere degree and the marriage question. It is not a matter of wonder that we non-Romans, should misunderstand him—as he complains we do—when we have such conflicting statements put forth.

"Let us examine some of his statements. His grace says: 'It (the Ne Temere) has been in force since Easter, 1908, and that in every country in the world.'

"May I draw his attention to the fact that it is not now and never has been in force in Germany. The Prussia decree prevails in the German Empire and it says:

"We will nevertheless, and expressly declare, define and decree as valid mixed marriages already contracted without the Tridentine form in any province or place whatsoever of the German Empire. So that Germany is certainly exempt from its operations.

"His grace further says: 'This is no new thing in the world, since it was dealt with at the Council of Trent in 1563.'

"It was a new enactment then and its enforcement is a new thing in Canada now. We did not object to it as long as it was lying dormant in the pages of history, nor did we trouble ourselves when the decree was promulgated in Canada so long as it did not come into active operation. Great Britain and the United States do not trouble themselves about the decree because they know that the civil law simply protects them. When, however, the ecclesiastic court annuls a marriage and our civil courts sustain its decision, and when its other features are being rigorously enforced, it then become a practical matter which deeply concerns every citizen of the Dominion.

"Again his grace says 'Particularly in the Province of Quebec where the decree "Tametsi" of the Council of Trent has been in force since the first days of the colony.' And according to this latter decree, as according to the Ne Temere, any marriage to be valid must be celebrated before the curate.

"Does this the manifesto, in extraordinary review of his grace pastoral letter of 1901 in which he says that in spite of the decree of the Council of Trent all marriages in Quebec are binding.

"When the archbishop says that the Tridentine rule does not affect Protestants he differs from Pope Benedict XIV. The Benedictine rule is the one upon which his grace's pastoral of 1901 was based.

"Then his grace said that mixed marriages before a Protestant minister were even in the eyes of the church, valid, now he says they are invalid. Surely when a decree declares a Protestants' marriage null and void ad initio and disturbs the peace and happiness of his home, it does interfere with him. The Ne Temere certainly accomplishes. This is all the more clearly emphasized by his grace's circular No. 65, November, 1907.

"The archbishop says that no outcry is made against divorce. He cannot have read the press of our day, if he did, he would know that our clergy and our synods have condemned divorce over and over again. He does not know that no Anglican clergyman is allowed to officiate at any marriage of a divorced person during the lifetime of the former partner. His statement is thus borne out by his acts.

"The present agitation has arisen chiefly through the action of the archbishop in annulling the Hébert marriage which our courts have now happily now sustained. To permit a woman, who has been faithful to her marriage vow to be cast off with her innocent child because she was married by a Protestant minister, duly authorized by the state to perform marriages, is much worse than divorce, which can in Canada only be granted for the cause of adultery. If this woman sinned against her church by her act one would have thought that the fatherly heart of the archbishop would have persuaded her to permit him to validate the marriage according to the laws of his church and not to cast her away as a woman. No one neither questions the right of any church to make laws to govern its members but ... [illegible] ... can be permitted ... [illegible] ... marriages.

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Wrayson looked across and found that his eyes met Heneage's. He was sitting a little in the background, with a newspaper in his hand, which he was, however, only affecting to read. He was taking note of every word of the conversation. He was obviously annoyed at the Colonel's reference to him, but he did his best to conceal it.

"Scarcely a theory," he remarked, laying down his paper for a moment. "I can scarcely call it that. I only remarked that I happened to know a little about Bentham, and that his clients, if he had any, were mostly foreigners, and their business of a shady nature. As a matter of fact, he was struck off the rolls here some years ago. I forget the case now, but I know that it was a pretty bad one."

"So you see," the Colonel resumed, "he was probably in touch with a loose lot, though what benefit his death could have been to any one it is, of course, a little hard to imagine. Makes one think, somehow, of this Morris Barnes affair, doesn't it? I wonder if there is any connection between the two?"

Heneage laid down his paper now, and abandoned his attitude of indifferent listener. He was obviously listening for what Wrayson had to say.

"Connection of some sort between the two men there certainly was," Wrayson admitted. "We know that."

"Exactly," Heneage remarked. "I speak without knowing very much about the matter, but I am thoroughly convinced of one thing. If you can find the murderer of Morris Barnes you will solve, at the same time, the mystery of Bentham's death. It is the same affair, part and parcel of the same tangle."

The Colonel was silent for a few moments. He seemed to be reflecting on Heneage's words.

"I believe you are right," he said at last. "I should be curious to know, though, how you arrived at this decision."

Heneage looked past him at Wrayson.

"You should ask Wrayson," he said.

But Wrayson had risen, and was sauntering towards the door.

"I'm off," he remarked, looking backwards and nodding his farewells. "If I stay here any longer, I shall have nightmare. Time you fellows were in bed too. How's the Mallen fund, Colonel?"

The Colonel's face relaxed. A smile of genuine pleasure lit up his features.

"Going strong," he declared triumphantly. "We shall ship him off for Paris next week with a very tidy little cheque in his pocket. Dear old Dob is gave us ten pounds, and the concert fund is running well."

Wrayson lit a cigarette and looked back from the open door.

"You're more at home with philanthropic than horrors, Colonel," he remarked. "Good-night, everybody."

CHAPTER XXI

The Baroness was looking her best and knew it. She had slept well the night before, and her eyes were soft and clear. Her maid had been unusually successful with her hair, and her hat, which had arrived only that morning from Paris, was quite the smartest in the room. She was at her favourite restaurant, and her solitary companion was a good looking man, added to which the caviare was delightfully fresh, and the toast crisp and thin. Consequently, the Baroness was in a particularly good temper.

"I really do wish, my dear friend," she said, smiling across at him, "that I could do what you ask. But it is not so simple, not so simple as you think. You say, 'Give me the address of your friend.' You ask me nicely, and I like you well enough to be glad to do it. But Louise she say to me, 'Give no one my address. Let no one know where I am gone.'"

"I'm sure she didn't mean that to apply to me," Wrayson pleaded.

"Ah! but she even mentioned your name," the Baroness declared. "I say to her, 'Not even Mr. Wrayson?' and she answered, 'No! no! no!'"

"And you promised?" he asked.

"Why, yes! What else could I do?" she replied. "I say to her, 'You are a very foolish girl, Louise. After you have gone you will be sorry. Mr. Wrayson will be angry with you, and I shall make myself very, very agreeable to him, and who knows but he will forget all about you?' But Louise she only shake her head. She knows her own countrymen too well. They are so terribly, insularly constant."

"Is that such a very bad quality, Baroness?"

"Ah! I find it so," she admitted. "I do not like the man who can think of only one thing, only one woman at a time. He is so dull, he has no imagination. If he has only one sweetheart, how can he know anything about us? For in a hundred different women there are no two alike."

"That is all very well, Wrayson answered, smiling, "but, you see, if a man cares very much for one particular woman, he hasn't the least curiosity about the rest of her sex."

She sighed gently, and her eyes flashed their regrets. Very blue eyes they were to-day, almost as blue as the turquoises about her throat.

"They say," she murmured, "that some Englishmen are like that. It is so much a pity when they are nice."

"I suppose," he suggested, "that yours is the Continental point of view."

She was silent until the waiter, who was filling her glass with white wine, had departed. Then she leaned over towards him. Her forehead was a little wrinkled, her eyebrows raised. She had the half plaintive air of a child who is complaining of being unjustly whipped.

"Yes, I think it is," she answered. "The lover, as I know him, is one who could not be unkind to a woman in his heart. He is faithful, perhaps, to one, but for her sake the whole world of beautiful women are objects of interest to him. He will flirt with them when they will. He is always their admirer. In the background there may always be what you call the preference, but that is secret."

Wrayson sighed across the table.

"This is very dangerous doctrine, Baroness."

"Dangerous," she murmured. "Eh, yes! Remember that we are a susceptible race."

She flung out her hands and shook her head. "Susceptible!" She denied it vehemently.

"It is on the contrary," she declared, "You do not lose your heads or your heart very easily, you Englishmen."

"You don't know us," he protested.

"I know you," she answered. "For myself, I admit it. When I am with a man who is nice, I try that I may make him just a little, no more, but just a little in love with me. It makes things more amusing. It is better for him, and we are not bored. But with you men and me I know very well that I waste my time. And so I ask you instead this question. Tell me, why you have invited me to take lunch here with you?"

She flashed her question across at him carelessly enough, but he felt that she expected an answer, and that he was not to be deceived.

"I wanted Miss Fitzmaurice's address," he said.

"Naturally. But what else?"

He sighed.

"I suppose you know more than you will tell me," he said. "I am afraid. I want to know why you and Miss Fitzmaurice are living together in London and leading such an unusual life, and how in Heaven's name you became concerned in the affairs of Morris Barnes."

"Ah!" she said. "You want to know that. So!"

"I do," he admitted.

"And yet," she remarked, "except for that it was not worth while to make love to me! You ask so much, my friend, and you give so little."

"If you—" he began, a little awkwardly.

Her light laugh stopped him.

"Ah, no!" she protested, "you must not be foolish," she said. "I will tell you what I can for nothing. And that, I am afraid, is very little more than nothing. But as for offering me a bribe, you must not think of that. It would not be common-fair, not at all."

"Tell me what you can, then," he begged.

She shrugged her shoulders.

"It is so little," she declared, "positively so. We are not adventuresses, Louise and I. We are living together because we are schoolfellows, and because we are both anxious to succeed in a certain undertaking to which, for different reasons, we have pledged ourselves. To succeed, we needed some papers which had come into the hands of Mr. Morris Barnes. That is why I am civil to that little, what you call bounder, his brother."

"It sounds reasonable enough," Wrayson said, "but what about the murder of Morris Barnes, on the night you have invited me to take lunch with you?"

"Ah, well, there's another matter," the Baroness admitted. "There is a matter where the death of a few such men would count for nothing. A few ages ago it would not have been a matter of a dozen Morris Barnes', no, nor a thousand! Diplomacy is just as cruel, and just as ruthless, as the battlefield, only it works down there—under ground!"

"It is a political matter, then?" Wrayson asked swiftly.

The Baroness smiled. She took a cigarette from her little gold case and lit it.

"Ah!" she exclaimed, "you must not try to, what you say, pump me! You can call it what you will." Only to Louise, as to me, it is very much a personal affair. Shall we talk now, for a little, of other things?"

Wrayson sighed.

"I may not know then," he begged, "where Louise has gone, or why?"

"It would not be her wish," the Baroness answered, "that I should tell you."

"Very well," Wrayson said, "I will ask you no more questions. Only this, I have told you of this man, Bentham."

The Baroness inclined her head. He had told her nothing that was news to her.

"Was he on your side, or opposed to you?"

"You are puzzling me," the Baroness confessed.

"Already," Wrayson explained, "I know as much of the affair as this Morris Barnes was in possession of something. I do not know whether it was documents, or what possible material shape it had, but it brought him in a considerable income, and both you and some others were endeavouring to obtain possession of it. So far, I believe that neither of you have succeeded. Morris Barnes has been murdered, and Bentham the lawyer, who died next to me on the night of his death, has shared his fate. To whose account do these two murders go, yours or the others?"

"I cannot answer that question, Mr. Wrayson," the Baroness said.

"Do you know?" Wrayson demanded, dropping his voice a little, "that but for my mistake, if not actual perjury, Louise herself would have been charged with the murder of Morris Barnes?"

"She had a narrow escape," the Baroness admitted.

"She had a narrow escape. We can declare—but the unfortunate part of the affair is that she is even now safe."

The Baroness looked at him anxiously. She was in the act of drawing on her glove, but her hand suddenly became still.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean Wrayson said, "that another person saw her come out of the flats that night. It was a friend of mine, who kept silence at first because he believed that it was a private assignation of my own. Since then, events have occurred to make him think differently. He has gone over to the other side. He is quite his time with young Sydney Barnes, and he has set himself to discover the mystery of Morris Barnes' murder. He has even gone so far as to give me warning that I should be better out of England."

"Who is this person?" the Baroness asked calmly.

"His name is Sophie Henderson, and he is a member of the same club to which Louise and I belong," Wrayson replied.

Kidney Pains in the Back

Could Not Stand or Even Turn in Bed —Legs Greatly Swollen

All Doctor's Medicine Failed—Cure Effected by Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Again this great medicine has triumphed over kidney disease of a severe type. From a bed of suffering and helplessness Mrs. Walsh was restored to health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Kidney pains in the back tortured her. Dropsical swellings had set in and she had no reason to hope for cure, once the doctor's medicine failed to even relieve her. Read what the patient says about this remarkable cure.

Mr. Thos. D. Walsh, Pictou, N.S., writes: "Two years ago my wife took to her bed after suffering for a long time from kidney pains in the back. She was not able to stand on her feet or even turn herself in bed. The doctor's medicine was no benefit whatever, that we could see. Sometimes her legs would swell considerably. Reading about a woman in similar condition being cured by Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we purchased two boxes, and when these were used she was able to sit up. With three more boxes she was restored to health and doing her own housework. As for myself I also found these pills all that is claimed for them. I make this statement, in order that others may obtain the same ease from suffering as that experienced by my wife and myself."

THE chances are that Dad was raised on porridge.

There is no food more helpful in making strong, well-developed men out of boys than prepared oats.

There is no other way of preparing oats, to make them palatable, digestible and nourishing, so good as the rolling and pan-drying process.

There are no other rolled, pan-dried oats in which this process has been carried to such perfection as in Tillson's Rolled Oats.

Each flake of Tillson's is rolled to extreme thinness, and all the flakes are as uniform in size as careful grading can make them. That's why Tillson's Rolled Oats are cooked perfectly in 15 minutes—no more.

Another thing, Tillson's Oats are dried in pans enclosed in kilns, not open ones; thus retaining all the natural flavor and aroma.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

THE PENALTY OF UNTHANKFULNESS

Life's Experiences Accepted Cheerfully by All True Christians.

New Haven Conn Nov 26—Pastor Russell, of the Brooklyn and London Tabernacles, addressed large and interested audiences here twice today. We report his discourse on Thanksgiving He said

Our experiences in life are to a considerable extent what we make them Bible students should be philosophers everyone of them. Why? Because the Wisdom from above is the noblest science and best instruction. As St Peter declares, it tends to promote the spirit of a sound mind and a sound mind is necessarily a philosophical one Murmurers and complainers are not philosophers, but the reverse. A sound mind tells us to take things as they are, to make the best of them rather than to quarrel over them and find fault with Divine providence and make ourselves and everybody else in our environment miserable.

True Christian people in every land and under all conditions have found plenty of cause for thankfulness, even though they have had their here or more, of life's difficulties. Nor was this thankfulness because they had mastered the Divine philosophy and understood the why and the wherefore of the present reign of sin and death. They accepted their portion of life's joys and sorrows by faith, believing that their portion was mentioned to them by the Lord and that full obedience and submission, with cheerfulness, was their duty

We are ready to concede that the world, awakening from the sleepy superstitions of the past, can readily find many excuses for declining to be thankful If we mention some of these it will not be by way of endorsing them, rather to show the unthankful masses that we recognize their viewpoint but do not agree with it

We would point them to the better course of thankfulness and prospects of happiness To their complaint that they have fewer and milder blessings than their more wealthy neighbors we remind them that the poor of the land habitually receive more than would make very thankful some of the poor of other land

We remind that under Divine blessing upon the soil and the Divine use upon human skill convenient comforts and luxuries have multiplied about us so that the "common people" of our land have home comforts and conveniences and educational facilities and parks and libraries, well paved and lighted streets and cheap transportation such as were not dreamed of in our grandfathers' days, not enjoyed even by the rich Let us not greedily ask more along these lines until we have fully appreciated present privileges and blessings and returned thanks therefor

But our forefathers our forefathers were super unduly thankful, and more favored Let us have thanks to God for the satisfactions and [illegible] We have learned that the [illegible] nature and [illegible] think it best for them Our forefathers thanked God for escape from [illegible] but we see that they should have [illegible] against [illegible] and [illegible] them freedom with [illegible]

Our forefathers thanked God if they were [illegible] that they did not die [illegible] to eternal torture We are [illegible] to recognize the plea that [illegible] should have thanked their physicians [illegible] sickness and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

1,000 Royal Plum Puddings Taken by Queen to India

Remarkable Assortment of Gifts Aboard Steamship Bearing Imperial Party to the Durbar at Delhi—There Will Be No Coronation Ceremony in Indian Empire.

SOME PERIL SEEN FOR THE KING IN THE EAST

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

FOR many months, long indeed before the coronation in Westminster Abbey in June, King George and Queen Mary have been perplexed by their great Indian trip when, as Emperor and Empress, they will appear in state at the Delhi durbar, surrounded by a greater assemblage of Indian ruling princes and chiefs than ever before has been gathered together in India.

When the Medina steamed off from Portsmouth, she was flying the royal standard at the mainmast, the King's flag as Admiral of the Fleet at the foremast, and the flag of Rear Admiral Keppel at the stern. There is on board an escort of Life Guards and a large body of Royal Marine Artillery, and the Medina is being followed part of her voyage by an escort of cruisers.

It has been stated that there will be another coronation at Delhi, but this is not so. The King and Queen were crowned King Emperor and Queen Empress at Westminster. There will be no placing of crowns on their heads at Delhi. They will walk to their thrones at the durbar already crowned, already dressed in their robes of state, wearing their state jewels and carrying their sceptres. Conspicuous, of course, in the ceremonies will be Lord and Lady Hardinge, the Viceroy and Vicereine of India.

The King's crown for the durbar has been specially made, as it was decided that the crown of England could not be taken out of the country. No such restriction applies to the Queen's crown, which was made for her coronation, and in front of which blazes the Kohinoor, the great Indian diamond supposed to bring good fortune if worn by a woman. The Queen will wear even more magnificent jewels at Delhi than at Westminster, and a new ornament she is to wear is a lotus flower of diamonds. Her dress will be the white and gold embroidered robe worn at the coronation.

ONE THOUSAND PLUM PUDDINGS.

The keen personal interest which the Queen took in the arrangements, together with her thoughtfulness, were proved when Miss Venetia Baring was appointed her maid of honor in place of Lady Ampthill, who had to be excluded on account of her husband's illness. As the notice to Miss Baring was very short, the Queen with her own hand wrote out the list of dresses and other garments that would be required for use during the voyage. The Duchess of Devonshire is on board the Medina as mistress of the robes and Lady Shaftesbury as lady in waiting. These, with the maid of honor, are the only persons in Her Majesty's entourage.

The list of presents which the King and Queen are taking out for Indian notables is a truly extraordinary one and runs into a very big sum of money, all of which is being paid out of the private purses of the monarchs.

Among them are as many as one thousand plum puddings made in the Buckingham Palace kitchens. The mixing of these seasonable dainties was a task of great magnitude, for the smallest of the one thousand is as large as a good sized football. The ingredients weighed about ten tons, and scores of servants were employed for weeks in weighing and apportioning them. Gallons of the finest cognac and vintage sherry from the King's cellars went into the mammoth bowls to enrich the puddings. In order that the puddings might suffer no damage in transit, the Queen herself saw to it that they were taken from the basins in which they were boiled, placed in greaseproof paper bags with an outer covering of linen, the latter sealed with the royal cipher, and then packed in wooden boxes. To each pudding is attached a slip bearing printed instructions as to the completion of the cooking.

Besides the puddings the King and Queen are taking out for the Christmas tables of many of their Indian subjects a large number of rich plum cakes, York [illegible]

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A little bi-carbonate of soda added to fresh milk, helps to prevent it from turning sour.

To polish stove always mix turpentine with your black lead. It polishes much quicker. Be sure your stove is cold.

A glass of hot water with the juice of half a lemon added keeps the liver in good order and the complexion clear.

A Physician's Recipe for Beef Tea

Put a pound of lean shin beef passed through the machine. Place this in a stew pan with two quarts of cold water. Stir till it boils, then remove it to the side of the stove or place in oven to cook gently for six hours. Strain through a coarse wire sieve, allowing a certain fat for the beef to remain in the broth.

To get rid of mice buy some oil of peppermint and sprinkle it about any openings where you think the mice come from, and you will soon find they disappear. They do not like the smell.

Original Hint

Do one thing extra every day after the necessary things are done. In this way a house may be kept in good order without too much of an effort at spring cleaning time.

To Keep Mustard Fresh

An excellent way to keep mustard fresh and a good colour is to mix it with a small quantity of milk. When mixed in this it will keep for a fortnight at least.

COLD IN THE HEAD

Very appropriately a reader suggests that an article on cold in the head and how to cure it would serve a useful purpose at the present season, when this ailment is apt to be developed in a very typical manner.

The first part of the task is easy enough, namely, the writing of the article descriptive of what cold in the head is and how it originates. The other part, that of suggesting means of prevention, and of cure, introduces us to a much more difficult problem. Indeed, it has often been charged against doctors that a cold in the head baffles their skill; that they cannot cure it, and that all they can do is to alleviate its symptoms. Now the fact is a very certain cure, if not speedily known. A cold in the head is a trouble which has to run its course. You can no more arrest it once it has commenced its career than you can stop the course of a blood fever or smallpox. In truth, there are very few of every trouble with which we can be popularly credited in the expectation. We could be successful in accomplishing something which seems like arresting a certain process, we are really preventing its development, because we have anticipated attack and caught it very early in its career. Once established, the only complaint that we can offer is that we can't get rid of it, and the best prescription for a cold in the head and nearly every other trouble that afflicts us

(Punch)

Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care;
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young, and so fair!

Scarce could her parents bear
Where it was rough,
Though the thing capped a bar
Long enough.

Dress her in satin,
Into the dust,
Lovely and smirking,
Blind to each scandal!

Lace upon her throat,
Gems in her hair!
What a shame!
Her money bred her so,
While wonderment rises—
Why don't they marry?

Doan's Kidney Pills
Are the Best Remedy In The World
FOR BACKACHE.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

You overtax the kidneys—give them more work than they can possibly do—then they cry out in protest through the pain in the back.

Backache is simply kidneyache and the best remedy in the world for backache and all kidney troubles is Doan's Kidney Pills.

We have thousands of testimonials from all quarters of the globe to prove this. Here is one from a party who used them in England, but who is now a resident of Canada.

Mr. P. R. Glanville, Wycliffe, B.C., writes—"When living in the 'Old Country,' three years ago, I suffered severely from pains in the back, and had to give up work. The pain was so bad that when I stooped down to pick anything up, I felt my back must break. I tried all sorts of remedies and several doctors, but all to no purpose. One day I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, and thought I might as well try them, and to my surprise, before I was half through one box the backache had entirely disappeared, and it has not caused me any trouble since. I always keep "Doan's" in the house and shall always recommend them to all sufferers."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

GOOD FORM IN DRESS

Don't wear coloured or fancy openwork stockings with your street shoes. Choose plain stockings that match the shoes in colour.

Don't pin ruchings and dress shields in place. Baste them instead and see how much more comfort they give you. It really doesn't take much longer to baste than to pin.

Don't think that because collarless frocks are the fashion you may wear a low-cut dress on the street. There is a vast difference between "collarless" and "low-necked."

Don't buy cheap jewellery and think that it looks like anything but what it is—a cheap imitation of a good article. Much jewellery is in bad taste at any time except with evening dress.

Don't wear mussed or soiled frills and ruchings. You had much better wear perfectly plain clothes without trimmings if you cannot keep these dainty accessories fresh and without soil.

Don't forget to see that your waist is properly fastened before leaving your mirror. The waist gaping open at the back not only looks careless, but it is apt to cause some embarrassment, too.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.

Anecdotes---Sad And Gay

Rare Dog Story.—The conversation veered round to dogs. "Well, Bumps, here is a dog story you can't beat. My friend John recited a most excellent retriever. One night Johnson's house caught fire. All was in great confusion. Old Johnson and wife flew for the children and bundled out with them in quick order. Also some of them had been left behind? But up popped the dog, rushed into the house, and soon dragged out with the missing child. Everyone was saved but Rover. He had perished through the flames again. What did the dog want? No one knew. Presently the noble animal reappeared, scorched and burned, with—well, what do you think? "Gave it up," chortled the eager listeners. "With the fire engines, police, escape, and a damp towel, we suppose!"

Famous Singer's Debut.—"I did not get on Melba myself. I didn't even get a contract to sing in Opera. I never even got to have had personal experience of the stage at all, but the world here knows me. On the night of my debut in Rimini," the ex-s. "my husband, who was not a good impresario, heard a lady in the next box say to the man with her 'Mother's debut. Not good.' I heard her husband in Spain ten years ago!' My husband went immediately to the box and poke to the man and the lady was the lady's husband. This is the debut in Europe, and if we [illegible] we shall be [illegible] the world. Gave Up Her Lover.—[illegible] my father and four of us. I was the oldest, and engaged to be married. My mother on her deathbed asked me to give my love up and look after my father and sisters. I nearly broke my heart at the thought of giving up Jack, for I loved him dearly, but at last I decided to do so, seeing it would let mother die happy. Jack took it sore to heart, and went abroad. He died a year after. My father has died since. My sisters have all got married, and I am left myself. I feel lonely and sad at times, but still I'm happy at the thought of doing my duty to my mother," Jeanie Grant.

Four Sweet Words.—Four of the sweetest words in the English language begin with the letter H, which are Heart, Home, Happiness and Heaven. Heart is a home place, and home is a heart place; home is that virtue which makes us look forward to our only real home, which is beyond the grave. Happiness is found in doing one's duty each day, and by safely guarding our senses against evil. Heaven is the good to which we are tending, and only by a good heart, the blessings of a good home lit up by the hope of the future reward, and doing all in our power to live up to the teachings of the holy faith, shall we reach that only real happiness in Heaven.

Discussing Matrimony.—A grumpy man was discussing matrimony the other day. Said he: "Matrimony in my opinion, is a little too much idealized. These blushing brides, radiant under their white veils in a glitter of sunshine, seem capable of changing earth into heaven, but, as a matter of fact, they are not capable of anything of the sort. I am in hearty sympathy with old Brown, to whom young Black said at a wedding: 'A good wife can make a veritable angel of a man.' 'Yes, that's so,' old Brown agreed. 'My wife came near making one of me with her first batch of home-made buns!'"

Why, Oh, Why?—The girl loved him with that foolish infatuation that passeth understanding. In time stories came to her ears, and she told him how she disbelieved every one of them. They said he wouldn't pay his debts, but she knew better—or had she not divided her allowance with him for this purpose? "Is it enough," he told her one day simply, "if you trust me?" "I do, Reginald. I do I do!" she murmured as she enfolded her. "And do I didn't I will always trust you!" "Why," he cried, imprinting a chaste kiss upon her temple, "why oh, why aren't you my landlady?"

Suggestive Texts.—At a church union meeting in Glasgow an Aberdeenshire minister sympathized with a collegiate from Inverness for having to labour in a community which was absolutely devoid of the sense of humour. He had occasion, he said, to use on Inverness behaviour, and immediately above the pulpit could be found the suggestive text: "Occupy till I come," while on the opposite wall there was hung the old familiar legend: "What is home without a mother?" and close beside the almost equally familiar "Peace, perfect peace."

Amusing the Baby.—One day two ladies, one of whom carried a baby, entered a furniture store, and gave their desire to look at some carpets. It was very warm, but the salesman cheerfully hoisted roll after roll, until the perspiration literally streamed from his every pore. Finally one of the ladies asked the other if she did not find it rather warm to-day. "Not quite," was the answer of her companion, and then, in an undertone, she added: "Baby likes to see him roll them out, and we've plenty of time to catch the train."

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Gonseron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured and a cure to be sure. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

NEW COMMISSIONERS.

Waterways Board Named by the Borden Government.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Speculation concerning the make-up of the appointment of a new Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission, before shadowed recently, the new commissioners are Messrs. C. A. Magrath, ex-M.P. for Medicine Hat; T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., of Montreal, and H. A. Powell, ex-M.P. of St. John, N.B. These gentlemen replace Sir George Gibbons of London, Anne Geoffrion, K.C., of Montreal, and A. P. Barnhill of St. John, N.B.

The positions are filled by the Imperial Government on the recommendation of the Canadian Government and approval of the removal of the former members along with the commissioners for the new ones was received on Saturday.

Mr. Magrath's appointment is regarded as a fitting one, as there is probably no man in Canada who has made such a close study of the international waterways question. His speeches on the subject in the last House were always followed with the keenest attention. He is an engineer of repute, and brings many years of practical experience to the position. Mr. Casgrain is one of the most brilliant lawyers at the Quebec Bar, and Mr. Powell is a prominent lawyer and publisher of New Brunswick. He was a member one session for Westmount, and this year was defeated by only 68 votes by Hon. William Pugsley in St. John City. The commission will likely be called together very soon to meet with the United States section, as there are a number of big questions waiting solution.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It is rumored that the Russian Government will demand the dismissal of Mr. Shuster, U. S. Ambassador to Persia.

Bertram G. Spicer was found guilty Saturday of the murder in the first degree of Miss Martha Blackstone, a school teacher, in Springfield, Mass.

Violent rioting in Lisbon yesterday occurred, several persons being killed. The outbreak was a result of a meeting of protest against the expulsion of two Chinese doctors.

Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, yesterday exchanged his bare cell at the Federal prison for a more commodious ward in the Army Hospital at Fort McPherson.

Dr. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Toronto Globe, predicted an era of reciprocity between not only the U. S. and Canada, but the U. S., New Zealand and Australia, in Boston yesterday.

Tortured by the mental picture of his headless wife and her paramour whom he slew Saturday night, Pasquale Marchesi, 27 years old, of Kenosha, Wis., yesterday confessed to the double crime.

The advance section of the English dramatic world represented by George Bernard Shaw and Granville Barker, is up in arms against the appointment of Charles F. Brookfield as assistant censor of plays.

Robert S. Lewis, general passenger agent for Toronto of the Lehigh Valley Railway, was drowned at Wilson, N.Y., his body being found on the shore 12 miles from Niagara-on-the-Lake, Saturday afternoon.

Two Children Burned to Death.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 27.—Two young children of Mrs. Richard Arbuter were burned to death and two others were rescued from flames believed to have been caused by a gasoline explosion, which nearly destroyed the Arbuter home on Scotten street yesterday. The mother was away and the four children were alone in the house.

Walter Neville, a small boy, living on the same street, broke away from his burning clothes and carried the baby in his arms to safety in safety, but in doing so received burns which will probably cause his death. Mrs. Arbuter's two-year-old daughter, Mary, who was suffering from the same burns, was rescued by firemen.

When You Think.

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps.

POOR EDUCATION.

W is the Bane of French People, Says Mr. Langlois.

Montreal, Nov. 27.—The fact of the minority raising a million and a half for McGill in five days has created a great deal of comment amongst the French-Canadians. G. Langlois, M.P.P., writing in The Pays yesterday, says their race is profoundly humiliated when it is known that a handful of English people, 180,000 alongside of nearly two million French, absolutely control the commercial and financial institutions of the country and show so much public spirit at a time like this.

"We have not their mentality," adds Mr. Langlois, "for they not only handsomely support their colleges and hospitals but ours as well." In fact the donations, he said, for Laval would make a very sad showing alongside of what has been accomplished for McGill.

The French-Canadian writer alleges that the difference is caused by the education which is of a practical nature with the English, and he adds that Laval does no credit to the blay ciment of the French people and he doubts very much that, had the English people been educated as the French are, there would have been such a result for McGill.

Water Commission Reports.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—The Ottawa River will, it is understood, continue to be the city's source of water supply for all time to come, if the recommendations of the pure water commission, consisting of Allan Hazen (New York), Dr. Hodgetts (Ottawa), Dr. McCullough (Toronto) and C. H. Keefer, C.E. (Ottawa), be carried into effect. The commissioners have completed their report.

It is understood that in effect their recommendations were for the Ottawa River, with the addition of a filtration plant and an extension of the intake pipe to enable to Lake Deschenes.

The estimated cost of the whole work is said to be in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, and if council approves the proposal to submit the by-law to the ratepayers in January next.

PLEDGES HIMSELF TO LABOUR'S CAUSE AND MR. HALL KEEPS HIS PROMISES

The Saturday Night Rally Listens to Brisk Speeches on Workmen's Compensation Act and Tax Reform---Mr. Stratton Describes a Three-in-one Candidate.

The Saturday night rally in Mr R. [illegible] Hall's committee rooms was the largest meeting so far of the campaign. There were many workingmen present, who heard with enthusiasm Mr Hall's solemn pledge to stand or fall by the rights of labour. Mr Hall's remarks on the Workmen's Compensation Act and the Factories Act were cheered to the echo.

Praise for a Live Man.

Chairman Thornton argued from the tone of the Conservative press that Premier Whitney's hold was slipping.

"And well it may," said Mr. Thornton. "Neither he, nor his party, is a friend to the workingman. Capital may be his great wheel of industry, but labour is what moves the wheel. What has the Whitney Government done for the workingman?"

"I thank God I'm a Liberal," Mr. Thornton continued. "Everywhere in the world history proves it and the statute books show it as the Liberal party that stand for the common people. And now is the time for the workingman to stand by R. R. Hall, not only because he is a Liberal, but because the rights of labour is his special concern.

"We ought to be proud of a man," concluded the chairman, "who has such a strong constructive policy, and who can present his views so forcibly."

Mr. G. R. McCrea, who acknowledged that, though Tory born, he had been a Liberal ever since he heard Edward Blake and George Brown speak, said that he echoed the Chairman's sentiments.

"I have the greatest faith in our candidate," he said. "He has been diligent and successful in his own business. He will [illegible] since shut in out."

Two Humbugs Exposed.

Mr R. R. Hall turned the Hydro-Electric bluff inside out. He referred to the willingness of the Conservatives to co-operate to make power cheaper, but he pointed out that it could only be supplied by municipal power, chiefly generated at one third cost, one third distributed and one third handled.

Dam No. 4 and Mr Hall's views on the same were discussed. Just [illegible] Dam No. 4 [illegible] purpose to save [illegible] horse power. He reported that Hydro-Electric Commissioner [illegible] Mr Cecil B. Smith [illegible] Mr Hall had in his pocket [illegible] at 5.33 cents per horse power. POLICE COURT

This Morning's Docket Was a Large One—Man Found Lying on C.P.R. Tracks Had Narrow Escape

THE LIST OF CASES

Michael Cushing and Caesar Baltz, C. P. R. construction men from Bethany, were in the city on Saturday, and drank a little too much from the cup that cheers, with the result that they paid fines of $2 each in the police court this morning.

Walter and Vincent McGee, citizens of the prohibition hinged Lakefield, were fined $20 each for being drunk on the street here on Saturday.

James Newell, an East City man, was fined $2.00 for being drunk Saturday. The circumstances in this case are somewhat out of the ordinary, and had it not been for the timely arrival of Mr. Pinchin, special officer for the C.P.R., Newell might have been killed. Newell was found lying on the C.P.R. bridge in an intoxicated condition and was brought to the station by Mr. Pinchin. No charge of trespassing was laid.

John Lowery was fined $2 for over indulgence in the cup that cheers.

Obstructed Sidewalk.

Three young men were arraigned on a charge of obstructing the sidewalk at the corner of George and Charlotte streets last night. All three pleaded not guilty, but two were convicted on the officer's evidence and were fined $2, which was paid forthwith. The third young man was allowed to go, as the evidence was not sufficient to convict him. P. C. Brown gave evidence in the case to the effect that he had on several occasions been obliged to move the young men on, and that they were at times impudent, and were especially so last night. The young men were warned by City Clerk Armstrong, who officiated in the absence of Magistrate Dumble, that they were liable to a fine of $50 or six months in gaol for this offence.

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE DUKE AND DUCHESS PASSED THROUGH PETERBORO' TO-DAY

Governor-General's Party En Route for Toronto Came Through on a Special Train This Morning---Only a Few People Were on Hand to Get a Glimpse of Royalty ---Big Reception at Toronto.

Peterborough had royalty in its midst for a few minutes, quite unawares, this morning, when their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, passed through at 10.30 o'clock, on a special C.P.R. train of six coaches. Very few local people were aware of the fact that the Governor-General's party were coming through, en route for Toronto, and there was only a score of people on the platform when the handsome train flying the Union Jack from the rear platform, drew into the station. The Royal party were in the last car, and his Royal Highness was seen to be reading the Toronto Mail and Empire, when the train came to a stop. During the five minutes the train remained at the station the Royal representatives remained in their car, but as it started to pull out, the Duke came out on the rear platform, and smilingly raised his hat to those at the station, who loyally returned his salutation. His Royal Highness, who was in civilian clothes, remained on the platform as the train slowly passed through the city.

BIG TIME AT TORONTO.

(Special to the Examiner)

TORONTO NOV 28 The Queen City of the Dominion and the capital of Canada's greatest province, did herself proud this afternoon in the reception to Canada's new Royal Governor, the Duke of Connaught and the Duchess. Mayor Geary had proclaimed a half holiday, and all the big stores and most other employers of labour observed it, and closed their establishments in honour of the event. The weather was superb. It was like a spring day and tons of thousands of flags and wide ribbons of bunting marked the Royal progress down Yonge street, from North Toronto station to the city hall, where the freedom and welcome of city and province were presented to their Royal Highnesses.

The streets were lined with troops, reinforced by one hundred thousand citizens on sidewalks in windows of buildings and other points of vantage along the route. There were large contingents present from other Ontario cities.

To-night there will be an official dinner at the Government House, to-morrow, Wednesday and Thursday the programme is fully occupied in public and social events by their Royal Highnesses. Citizens of Toronto, individually and collectively, have spent piles of money for the festivities of the Royal visit. One family is said to have spent $6,000 dollars in dresses for their daughters for the Yacht Club ball.

The Complicated Problem Of Providing "Power At Cost"

The Conservative organ published in its Saturday evening issue misleading statements as to the rate the Hydro-Electric Power Commission is charging in the City of Toronto, and endeavouring to mislead the people of Peterborough with the idea that Toronto is receiving cheaper electric light than the citizens of Peterborough. The official terms upon which the Hydro-Electric Commission supply power to Toronto is as follows:

"A monthly service charge of 10 per 100 square feet of floor area plus a rate of 3c per kilo watt hour, subject to a discount of 10 for prompt payment, terms of agreement one year."

The floor space area includes every floor from the cellar to the garret.

This new method of charging for electric light was adopted so as to mislead the people, but it has been in operation now for sufficient length of time to show the people that their electric light costs them on an average about 8c per kilo watt hour for house lighting which is the same old rate that Toronto Electric Light Company was charging before the Hydro-Electric Commission delivered power in Toronto.

In addition to that the citizens of Toronto are saddled with an increased mortgage indebtedness upon the city of over five million dollars, and which will increase from year to year. The people cannot have two costly transmission lines that run into the millions without having to pay for them, add the more transmission lines that are built to distribute power the more the people will have to pay. That is common sense.

The citizens of Peterborough are paying less for electric light to-day than are the citizens of Toronto and that notwithstanding that the Hydro-Electric Commission is delivering power in Toronto.

The citizens of Toronto were very much deceived when they thought they were going to get "cheap electric light and power at cost" from the Hydro-Electric Commission. The same game is endeavoured to be worked in Peterborough.

Peterborough is to get the benefit of Dam No. 4. That is all. A despatch from Toronto to the Review says "at Dam No. 4 which is on the Peterborough and Lakefield Division, it is stated about 3,000 horse power will be developed to supply Peterborough and Lakefield and the immediate vicinity."

The Hydro-Electric report in 1910 shows that only 1,100 horse power can be developed at Dam No. 4.

The fact of the matter is that this power is not worth developing by itself. Electric power produced from Dam No. 4, developed by itself, if it were sold at cost would be sold at a price higher than current rates. The Hydro-Electric will have to produce some better scheme than this to catch votes. The Hydro-Electric will have to produce a more feasible scheme if it wants to get the citizens of Peterborough to mortgage the city for a quarter of a million dollars on the pretense of getting "power at cost." The citizens do not want "power at cost" when it means power at a loss to the taxpayers and away above the present cost.

GRAHAM IN TOILS

Promoter of Electric Railway Pleads Guilty at Lindsay This Morning to Obtaining Money Fraudulently

WAS REMANDED

Special to The Examiner

LINDSAY, Nov. 27. — In the police court here to-day Harry Graham, promoter of the proposed electric railway line between the lake front and Orillia through Lindsay, appeared in the police court and pleaded guilty to four charges of obtaining money under false pretences. It is an interesting story all through.

Five weeks ago the said Harry or Malcolm Graham rode into Lindsay on a freight train from Orillia. He was very shabbily dressed and was in every respect a good representative of the "weary Willie" class.

He took a little time to study local conditions before launching his scheme and a few days after his arrival blossomed forth as a railway magnate a la McKenzie & Mann or Jim Hill. He put up at the Butler House, discarded his old clothes and donned a new suit which he purchased at a local store. He was very modest in announcing details in connection with the proposed railway. There were certain matters which, for business reasons, could not be made public, so he said, but this much was given out. It would start at Port Hope and end at Orillia through Lindsay, Orillia and other points. The line would create a revolution in railroad construction, inasmuch as there would be no poles needed and no overheard wires, the power (Hydro Electric so he said) being furnished from underneath one of the rails. An advertisement was inserted in a local paper for men to start on survey work and of course there was an army of applicants. Good wages were offered the men ($3.50 a day and board) while surveyors would be paid $7.00 a day, and men with teams $5.00 a day.

In the course of a few days after the advertisement appeared the citizens were surprised to see a survey party at work on Ridout street, and it was announced that the line was coming along on that thoroughfare and west on Kent street.

This made the citizens somewhat suspicious as it was felt that there was an Ethiopian on the fence somewhere. Here was a beardless youth, a stranger in a strange land, practically taking possession of the King's highway without a charter and without going through the preliminaries of obtaining the right of way. Besides, he refused practically to state who was behind the scheme but gave out the information that he was a member of the firm of Graham & Adam.

Finally, he moved his "survey party" outside the town limits and began to work from Omemee village towards Lindsay. Another advertisement was inserted in a local paper for teams to draw gravel and the "promoter" gave instructions to a local livery man to hire all the teams he could for construction work. He purchased all the stakes that a local contractor had on hand, besides giving a lumber company orders for stakes, even paying for them (with the exception of the last load) before they were furnished him.

The operations of the survey party in the vicinity of Omemee as well as their contemplated descent on Ops township, aroused the people of the district. The "line" threatened to run right through barns, houses, etc. It could stop for nothing, so anxious were the "promoters" to have it completed. Things looked serious indeed for the farmers, many of whom were in readiness to effect a compromise with "Graham & Mann" in order to have the line changed, and the rising young railway magnate, it is said, showed a commendable willingness to meet their wishes for a "consideration."

Things were going along nicely for Mr. Graham, and a fresh staff of surveyors were started on preliminary work west of the town. Mr. Graham's "office" was at the Butler House, where some of his employees also boarded. He secured an option on several gravel pits in the district, and was negotiating with a lumber company for a consignment of choice timber daily which would mean an investment of some $400.00 or $500.00 per day. He also interviewed a local grocer regarding a contract for supplying his camps with groceries. Now these firms took the young man's statements with the usual allowance of salt. They wanted to know something about the project, but the manager was vague and indefinite in his statements. The purchasing agent of the C. N. R. was communicated with and he stated that his company knew nothing about the proposed electric line.

In the meantime Graham by his affable manner, had so securely entrenched himself in the hearts of some of his employees that he had no difficulty whatever in borrowing sums of money (large and small) from them. He was buying them no wages but

AS MR. MONK PUTS IT.

Again the Mail and Empire, faithful unto death, protects one of its party leaders—or a leader of one of its parties, says the Toronto Star—by omitting from Hon. F. D. Monk's speech in Parliament an important declaration which the chief organ thinks might jar the sensitive mind of its readers.

It omits Mr. Monk's argument that among the causes other than reciprocity which helped to remove Sir Wilfrid Laurier from office was the fact that "those of his race and creed had been disappointed in him." The people of Quebec had "looked upon him as the Saviour of the rights of his race, but that all he did had tended to dispel that illusion."

Mr. Monk began to argue years ago that Quebec could do far better in federal politics with an English Premier leading and a French colleague at his elbow. He complained years ago that Sir Wilfrid was forced to sacrifice the sentiments and interests of Quebec in an effort to please Ontario, whereas an English Prime Minister, with a French colleague beside him, would strive to please Quebec in every way.

The ideal has been attained. An English Premier is in office, and Mr. Monk is in power at his elbow. The performance is about to begin.

NO HOPE THERE.

The Toronto News says:

"English is the language of the schools, and if the regulations have been ignored, the government is strong enough and energetic enough to enforce them."

This admits the whole case against the government. "Strong enough" in numerical strength, but very weak in courage, "energetic" enough in language anyway, but mighty slow. The conditions that have crowded, and are crowding to a still greater degree, the teaching of English out of state-aided elementary schools, have grown up during seven years under the "strong" and "energetic" Whitney government. Why have the regulations not been enforced? The answer of Premier Whitney is that there are no bilingual schools." Why, then, have Conservative candidates all over the country been pledging themselves to vote against bilingual schools, if they do not exist? Sir James Whitney is trifling with a question which the rank and file of his party supporters regard as a great issue, and which is an evil so far as it excludes or subordinates the teaching of English in the schools. If the paroxism of his followers is stronger than their patriotism, they will stand by Sir James Whitney and support him in his attitude of duplicity in relation to bilingual schools. If re-duplicity he tried to shelve the question by referring the matter to a commission and while he is holding back the report of the commission till after the election comes the comes out with the astonishing declaration that there are to be bilingual schools. What can those who love their province, the importance of every child in Ontario having a chance to gain a good knowledge of English at our elementary schools expect from a man who adopts such an attitude? The fact is, Sir James Whitney's government is too "strong" to be "energetic." It will be a good way to cut down his majority a little. That would make him more "energetic" and a good deal more deferential to the demands of the intrest of the people.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Bourassa is a pretty level-headed chap, if his cranium is not cracked with conceit. A man without a seat in Parliament, without a seat in a Government, to swing a Government at will, to not only dictate its composition, but dictate its policy, might well be excused for having a swelled head.

Thousands of children in Ontario are not being taught a word of English. And this under the Government of a Premier who, less than two months ago, was raving about British connection, Imperialism, and the rights of the British Born. If Sir James Whitney had been so anxious in feeling for British ideals, he certainly would provide that the English language should be taught in the elementary schools of a British province.

Peterborough Conservatives are, perhaps, wasting time in their innocent amusement of providing a senator for this district. In the eyes of others Peterborough is not "the only pebble on the beach." The Stratford Herald champions the claims of Western Ontario for consideration. It says: "Since eastern Ontario is now over-represented with thirteen Senators, the next six vacancies in eastern Ontario should, in fairness, be transferred, five to western Ontario, and one to northern Ontario."

Eight hundred teachers without proper certificates are contributing to the inefficiency of the public schools of Ontario under the Whitney Government. The admirers of the Whitney Government claim that it has cheapened school books and increased the grants to education by $750,000. If the Government had increased the grants to education seven millions, it would be wasted money, when, by the abolition of the model schools, they have left the province without qualified teachers to use school books which are useless, even if a bonus were given for buying them.

Montreal well deserves the name of the Commercial Metropolis of Canada, and by its recent million-and-a-half-dollars' achievement in the interests of McGill University, it becomes entitled to rank as the intellectual metropolis. The tact of the people of the city rolling up such a great sum, in the interests of higher education, shows that commercialism has not entirely submerged high considerations. The new endowment of McGill is at once a tribute to the great education work it has accomplished, and to the same practical recognition of this by the people of this city, as well as their faith in its future educational usefulness.

A REAL LEADER.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Not a man who heard the clear-cut, fearless, and at times eloquent speech of Mr. N. W. Rowell last night but was impressed with the excellent judgment of those who selected him as the new leader of the provincial Liberals. His address exceeded the highest expectations, and at its close there was a rush of men to shake his hand, and congratulate him on his policy and his method of explaining it.

No one who heard Mr Rowell but was convinced that, when he leads the opposition in the legislature, the manner and autocrat of the government will cease from mannerism and autocrating.

In this campaign Mr. Rowell stands out a some of the best politican speakers that this country knows. He brings no cheap claptrap to his aid. He has no funny stories to tell. And yet he is able to hold the closest attention of his hearers, and draw from them spontaneous bursts of applause.

He impresses one with his deep sincerity and earnestness. When he declares that he did not covet or desire the position of Liberal leader, and that he only accepted it because he felt that the opportunity lay there for beneficent public service no one can doubt his sincerity.

The time has surely come when the voice of Sir James Whitney who seeks to unite in his own person the functions of the legislator, the administrator and the judge shall be clipped. Democracy is surely tired of a government whose head makes no secret of the fact that his government is "the people to hate."

If Mr Rowell is given a strong hearing by men in the next legislature there is not the slightest doubt that immediate good will accrue

Whitney Government Inspector "Won't Allow More English In Bilingual Schools"

(Special to the Toronto Star by a Staff Correspondent.)

Warren, Ont., Nov. 25.—If, in the words of the Attorney-General, bilingual schools are illegal, so that "if any are found they must cease to exist," there is a revolution coming in the educational system of New Ontario of which the administration of the schools during the past few years and their conduct at the present moment gives no inkling.

Of the villages of this north country Warren furnishes a fair example. School matters in the villages differ from those in the larger towns, such as Sudbury or Sturgeon's Falls or North Bay, and also from those of the purely rural school sections, and Warren is a fair type of the villages. It is situated on the main line of the C.P.R., about the midway between North Bay and Sudbury, and has a population of about six hundred souls, four hundred of whom at least are French. A dozen years or so ago it used to boast of mills, but when the timber disappeared they vanished also. Most of the residents to-day are farmers, as is the case in the surrounding country.

There are two schools in the village, one wholly English and the other French and English. In the bilingual school two teachers are kept busy with the forty-odd children, three of whom are of Anglo-Saxon descent.

Inspector and "Regulations."

Both the teachers are French, and neither of them have the regular qualifications. One has a district certificate and the other a merely temporary one.

"You teach French in the school?" one of the teachers was asked.

"Certainly," she replied.

"More French taught than English?"

"No, they are both the same."

"Could you teach more English?"

"No."

"Why?"

"The inspector wouldn't allow it."

This answer was evidently perfectly sincere. Perhaps she noticed a look of surprise on the newspaper man's face, for she added:

"Then there are the regulations, you know."

A request for further elucidation brought the further enlightening explanation:

"The regulations state as much attention is to be paid to teaching French as to teaching English."

In view of this interview, it was not surprising to learn that French is taught equally with English through every class, right up to the entrance examination. The children leave the school with a much better knowledge of French than of English. As to their general proficiency, the entrance examinations furnish some test. During the last half dozen years but two pupils have succeeded in passing the entrance examination. These two passed the year in which there was a regularly qualified teacher in the school.

The School Section of Hugel.

Close to Warren a three-mile drive away, in the school section of Hugel and the story told to The Star by one of the farmers there was as follows:

"We wanted to start a school here four years ago," he said. "There are about fifteen families, and in the winter it was too far for our children to go into Warren to school. This is unorganized territory and we confidently expected we would be aided by the Government fund for poor schools.

"Well, we got our school up at a cost of about $400, and it was all ready to be opened. Then there was the question of a teacher. To get a thoroughly qualified one was an impossibility, as we couldn't afford to pay such a big salary.

"We received an application from an English girl who seemed suited. She had no certificate, so before she could teach she had to get the inspector's sanction.

"I don't know why he objected to her, but he did, and refused to allow her to teach. Most of us are French, and we expected French to be taught in the school. This girl could speak French very well, and was able to teach our children all the French they needed.

"The inspector still refused, however, so the matter was taken up with the Education Department at Toronto, and we secured her certificate.

"Look what followed. Since the school was built all the money we got from the Poor School Fund is $100, and we had trouble in getting that much. Compare that with what took place in Warren where the Poor School Fund contributed $300 for a mere addition to the school, and the people in Warren are far better able to do without help than we are."

As it is, we are still in sight. However, we saw where teachers from Quebec who hardly know any English at all had no difficulty in getting permission to teach, so we couldn't see why this girl who was far in the quota and than many of them, shouldn't have the same privilege. We won out, but we feel it was a costly victory.

Today the school at Hugel is closed because no teacher is available. They did have one for the first week in the school year, but she left. Some of the parents who have relatives or friends in Warren or other places have sent their children there to stay, so as to allow them to go on with their education. Most of the children, however, are still at home.

The school being closed is a good thing in the sense, one of the farmers philosophically remarked. "What we save on the teacher's salary will about pay the debt off the school."

"Dunnett, No. 5."

Close to Warren, there is another school called "Dunnett and Kirkpatrick No. 5." It is a bilingual school, with about thirty pupils, two of whom are English. The teacher is French, but speaks English pretty well. She was in the school last year, but left, and has returned this year. The school is conducted on the same lines as the other, but two years

The teacher, The Star was informed, has a temporary certificate. She attended the summer training school at Sturgeon's Falls last summer and the year before. We consider her far better qualified than many others in New Ontario."

In the bilingual school at Warren the Rochon readers, Constant's composition and other French books are used with the sanction of the inspector. In "Dunnett No. 5" the authorized bilingual books are used.

The Brand of English.

"What sort of English is being taught in the schools hereabout?" one of Warren's leading citizens was asked.

"That's the trouble," he answered. "What they are being taught isn't English at all. Candidly, I am of the opinion that if better teachers can't be secured, it would be a good thing to drop the pretence they are making at teaching English. One has difficulty in understanding the teachers themselves when they speak English, so what can you expect of the children? Look at the salaries they are getting $300 a year is the most a great number of them get—a few may get $400. The people themselves cannot do much more, so it looks as if the only hope of a remedy must come from the Government."

The "awful muddle"—as one man expressed it in which educational matters in New Ontario are in is exemplified by another rural school not far from Warren. It has a number as the only means of distinguishing it from others, and though there are twenty-five pupils in the school, half of whom are French, no French is taught there. The teacher is English, and all the children are being taught English. But from the force of the example of the other schools roundabout, a strong agitation is on foot to establish a French school.

Effect on Business.

Toronto traveling men met with are practically unanimous in stating that the steady French growth in New Ontario is having its effect on trade with English firms. They say that while a few years ago Toronto houses did most of the business now it is going to French firms in Montreal.

long neck, its spots, its stumpy tail, its dicky legs, and other characteristic features. He gazed again. Then he spat, shook his head, and said: "There ain't no such animal."

"Well," said Mr. Hall, "when Sir James Whitney is confronted with separate schools, he just looks at them and says: "There ain't no such animal," or words to that effect."

The Right Kind of Platform.

Mr. Dan O'Connell drew attention to Mr. Hall's compact and definite platform.

"It isn't a roller rink to shoot curves on," said Mr. O'Connell, "just a platform to stand on. You can see every plank in it. You can see how the planks are put together. You can count the planks if you like and you'll find that there isn't one of them missing after Mr. Hall is elected. Mr. Hall's planks are all strong, sound timber. Taken together they form a complete system of popular rights that every man might be proud of."

"I notice," said Mr. O'Connell, "that the Toronto News gives prominence to Sir James Whitney's disappointment. This tried and tested and independent electorate is not concerning its views, but in the Laurier's faults."

"For my part," continued Mr. O'Connell, "I think that when it comes to presenting the people with Sir James Whitney they are entitled to courteous treatment and respectful consideration. VARSITY'S SPEED AND NEW METHODS TRIUMPHED OVER THE ARGONAUTS

Inter-provincial Champions Were Beaten 14-7 in Spectacular Hard-fought Battle---Impressions of Examiner Representative at Saturday's Final Game for the Dominion Rugby Championship.

(By Our Special Correspondent.)

Speed versus weight and science, and speed won. Team work clipped to individual effort and team work was upset; the new football against the old and the new football was the victor. That's the secret of the Canadian championship meet in Toronto Saturday when Toronto University, the Inter-Collegiate champions, went from the Argonauts Inter-provincial champions by 14 points to 7, in the presence of some 16,000 people.

The reason for Varsity's win can be rounded up in one little word—SPEED. Speed in a team and as an individual; speed in forming up and getting the ball out, speed in bearing down the ends with combination runs, speed in passing, speed in getting down the field under kicks, speed in covering, in a word ball speed, always speed. That was what beat the Argos, who were not for a moment out classed nor were played off their feet by a better team. The Orange played good football, two bucks and a kick, or even an almost continuous passing game. The Student team on the other hand worked with combination runs, combination runs by the back division and trick plays, including the criss-cross and the new "double ball" stunt. It was these, not the certainty with which the plays were executed, that gave Varsity a well-earned victory. Time after time when the kicking of Bankhead and Mallett had driven the Students back into their own territory they got all the advantage the Orange forces gained by sending their backs around the end in a battling pass running attack that carried the ball down the field to scoring distance. The combined tactics completely puzzled Ramsay's men, who were thus robbed of the chance to score many times, or six points, and, however, they backed each up so effectively that they almost invariably scored the loose ball, and as a result errors were not costly. After the first few minutes of play the Students' kick-for-touch stood them and for the most part caught splendidly about although in the last quarter there were a couple of muffs, one of Varsity's time that might have given the Students their first touch. The ball was recovered, however, in both cases.

Argos a Great Team.

Although beaten, Argonaut have a great team. With a big, fast wing line they combine two great kicking halves in Bankhead and Mallett and a speedy quarter and plunger in Lowrie, in addition to the latter was too closely looked after Saturday to be dangerous. The catching of the backs was terrific, Mallett, Bankhead and Lowrie took care of the punts with ease and accuracy, only a couple of which could be charged against them. Their attack was mostly through the centre, where they had a weight advantage over the Varsity rear guard, but the only point at which they failed. Almost invariably when Lowrie opened, Mallett and Bankhead carried the Students' kicks to the Varsity backs on the other wing, rally ran the ball back and rapidly stopped the more effective of the fumbling on Varsity's [illegible]

Varsity's Great Passing.

[illegible] the Varsity backs, Mallett, Bankhead, Lowrie and Maynard, Kingsley and Cahill, the latter signalled their [illegible] from one to another on [illegible] ran with lightning rapidity, several times they passed with what looked almost reckless abandon. On one occasion Ramsay took a punt behind his own line and with Argo's around him shot the ball half across the field to Green, who got away for a thirty-five yard run. This passing at all ranges and on every occasion made it doubly difficult for Argo wings to stop the Varsity men running back kicks as they had to look out for the other back men as well as for the man about to make the catch. Sometimes the latter would a bluff to pass and eluding the tackle get away for a long run on his own account.

Even Along the Line.

It was a grand battle along the wing line. There was a ride awakening for the Argonaut supporters, who dreamed their wings were going to tear the Inter-Collegiate champions to tatters. Although bigger and heavier Argos could do nothing with Varsity's wing. It was not until the last quarter that either team could buck for yards, and Varsity were the best to accomplish the feat. Wide plunges for four or five yards on every occasion but by was generally stopped and Gale and Moody could not make an impression at all. At the same time Argos were rolling Jeff Taylor, who did the most of Varsity's back up. Each time had a kick formation and was a veritable stone wall, covered by the fact that not a kick from scrimmage was blocked during the game. Green and Maynard for Varsity and Bankhead and Mallett for Argos held the ball until their end rushers were well down the field before chasing the leather. The prize offered by both advance guards was up to it there was any doubt about the line it was Varsity's own. Backing up Varsity's own backing although the Orange men were good on their report [illegible] There was little to choose between Hassard and Sinclair for Varsity and Murray and Moore for Argos at outside wing. Both tackled low and hard and were always on the ball. Further on Varsity's middle and inside wings and scrimmage men had more trouble in checking than had the big Argos, but the latter pulled down the man with the ball in effective fashion even if the coupling was sometimes too high to be thoroughly orthodox.

Arnoldi, the Orange R. M. C. player, was accurate on punts and Wickwire also did good work, while Gorman and Gray were effective for Varsity.

Campbell in Lime Light.

Pete Campbell played a great game at quarter back for the champions. He is the pivot on which the lightning combination runs for Varsity and much of their success is due to his accuracy but of speed. Yesterday in the successful attempt to [illegible] kicking into touch at a critical like a hundred yards dash to the deposit upon hearing the pistol, and this is where the Peterborough boy shone Saturday. Almost before the last whistle had been sounded, Campbell would have Argos' ball and [illegible] there would be a rush-up, a punt, passes and the Argos would find themselves [illegible] Campbell [illegible] but Campbell [illegible] so much [illegible]

Maynard Was Brilliant.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

WOULD you ever in the world think of asking your friend or your brother or sister or husband to give away to you some money or some precious possession which had been entrusted to his keeping?

"No, of course not," you say. "What a silly question."

Perhaps it is.

But wait a moment. Did you ever have your friend or your brother or sister or husband to tell you something which had been told him in confidence; in other words, give away to you something which had been entrusted to his keeping?

Can you give a more emphatic a negative to that?

I doubt it.

And yet is there so great a difference between the two?

Of course there is.

And yet I know the chance that the confidence might be a good one is the chance that the confidence is about some material possession is a great more precious than money, or the principle, I mean, of possession to the one who gave it. But the principle, I think, is just the same.

And yet I know many people who have a fine sense of honour in but few people who have a fine sense of honour in all things.

I know a woman who boasts about this thing that her husband tells her everything that is told him even if it is in confidence. "He has to," she says, "because if he doesn't I don't give him any peace."

What a boast!

Myself, I should think she had more reason for shame than for vain glorying.

I know an engaged girl who quarrelled with her fiance and broke the engagement because he would not tell her something which she thought he ought. The something was a confidence given him by a very old friend who unfortunately happened to be a woman.

To be sure, I don't know all the circumstances of the case, but I am much inclined to think that he is well rid of a wife who would beseech him to be dishonourable, and who was not capable of realizing that he could not love her so well "loved he not honour more."

I suppose someone will remind me that a husband should not accept a confidence which he cannot share with the other half of him.

Perhaps not.

But the question whether he should accept the confidence is one thing, and the question whether he should betray it after having accepted it, is quite another.

And as to the first question—for my part I cannot see why it should prejudice the happiness of a couple if either husband or wife knows something that he cannot tell the other—provided, of course, that the knowledge is not anything which for some particular reason ought to be shared.

To urge anyone to betray a confidence is to insult him.

To accept a betrayed confidence is to accept stolen goods.

To betray a confidence is not only to dishonour yourself but to lower yourself in the eyes of him to whom you betray it.

And yet more but the most honourable scruple to ask other to betray confidences.

What a tremendous motive power curiosity is!

A Sunday Morning Visit to St. John's Anglican Church.

(By Roy Gilray.)

Old spots, old homes, old playmates, have changed, or disappeared, but the old town still stands!

And her memory is a perfume to her sons in other lands.

After an absence of several years from the City, there came over me a desire to see once more some of the old churches. I used to visit in the days gone by. During the years of my childhood I nearly always attended the same place of worship, but, on moving to Toronto, I was so impressed with the many beautiful churches there that I at once made up my mind to visit them. In so doing, I had my vision of the Church militant considerably enlarged, and I came to look upon the brotherhood of man in a broader light, for after all are we not travelling to the same haven, journeying to the same promised land, there, eventually to take part in the great Church triumphant.

In starting on a pilgrimage of the various churches one naturally thinks first of the Church of England, for is she not the bulwark of our nation? Her history [illegible] her joys our joys [illegible] our sorrows. In fact [illegible] history is nearly [illegible] struggles of this Church [illegible] centuries in the Settlement [illegible] entry, particularly the part known as Upper Canada.

Last Sunday morning, therefore, I obeyed the call of the rolling bells, the [illegible] music of the chimes, and the old fury was calling the worshippers [illegible] the city stone edifice on the hill.

[illegible] Hurrying past the [illegible] I soon found myself [illegible] above the beautiful grounds. I was impressed with the remarkable foresight of the officers of the British Government in allotting such a magnificent site as a place of worship, and with the liberal spirit which prompted the mother country to set apart one-seventh of the land for the support of the clergy and the furtherance of His cause in the new world.

The same generosity was shown her great son, the Church of Lower Canada, but unfortunately for the Church of England, the flow of immigrants had become so great, and the dissenters so numerous, she was not permitted the free enjoyment of her allowances, for the other denominations clamored for a share.

The Government of Canada, being heartily tired of the quarrelling, and by way of punishment, sold the property and interests represented by the "Clergy Reserves," and divided the proceeds among them all, in other word killed the hen that laid the golden eggs.

Soon the reaction came, and, methinks, about this time the Parish in Peterborough began to feel the need of money, for surely no other cause can explain the action of the church authorities in appropriating both sides of their [illegible] grounds for commercial use. It is to be hoped that the day is not far distant when St. John's will find herself in such a monetary condition that she can raze the old building to the ground and present an unbroken square, ornamental to the city and pleasant to all who call themselves Members of the Church of England. A walk to the Post Office would be a pleasure instead of a task, as it is now.

WORKINGMAN'S NIGHT AT PARK STREET CHURCH

Three Interesting Addresses Were Given Last Night---Rev. Mr. Riddiford's Remarks.

LARGE CONGREGATION

A very interesting meeting took place at Park Street Church last night. The choir was well filled, and three interesting addresses were given on the above subjects. "The Church and the Working Man"; "The Working man and the Church"; "How to get the working man into the Church."

The workingmans choir rendered music in fine style. His Worship the Mayor, Ex-Chief Howard, and several other [illegible] working men graced the meeting with their presence.

Mr. A. Hare, a new arrival from England, said he was glad to be in Canada, where the working man got a chance.

There is too much indifference on the part of the working man to the church.

Mr. A. Jackson spoke upon "How to get the working man into the church." We must show them that the church meets them. The church needs workers, as well as any other business.

The pastor, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, said he was glad to class himself as a working man, for Jesus Christ the Carpenter of Nazareth was one. He said in part:

The working man is not only the rock bottom of the State, but he is also the back bone of the church. Take the working man from the State and what is it? Take the workingman out of the Church, and what have you left?

Two hundred years ago a workingman, with God's love in His heart, and sympathy for earth's sin-sick toilers, said "Come with Me all ye that labour, and I will give you rest." Text, Matt. 11:28-30.

This gentlemen working man, found not a workingmans' church, but the Christian Church, that is much the less but a working man's Sunday Home—false to the ideal of Jesus Christ.

The Christian Church is preeminently for the workers and weary of earth, and [illegible] spoke of to procure the gift of perfect rest, as found in Jesus, as the highest son of [illegible] I believe there is a greater recognition of the teachings of Jesus Christ today than ever before. I believe those teachings are influencing social action as never before, and [illegible] reconstruction with [illegible] social problems, which, [illegible] might well cause alarm, [illegible] a moment's worry.

Inspired by the words of Jesus [illegible] he [illegible] that the birth of [illegible] is not simply a term [illegible] by, but a [illegible] we can not escape the [illegible] that fact of brotherhood [illegible] practice, every-day life. [illegible] must not only heed the Golden Rule, as the ideal of [illegible] but [illegible] must be governed by the spirit of the Golden Rule [illegible] all who have to do with the [illegible] of [illegible] workers.

She must see to it that work [illegible] a fair day's pay, for a fair day's work or else working hours [illegible] she must see to it that working [illegible] are not driven to the [illegible] by [illegible] and shame by the [illegible] wages paid by some of our [illegible] bring the team back from Orillia and that he would return from Orcnee on the G.T.R. train Friday morning. He missed that train, however and came up on the afternoon mixed. He threatened to make it interesting for those who imputed wrong motives in connection with his departure to Orillia and for declaring he was a time-hammer.

Chief of Police Chilton in the meantime had been keeping his eagle eye on Graham, while several conferences of some of the business men were held in connection with his operations. During the afternoon the Chief asked Graham to accompany him to his office. While there the officer asked him to explain his game. The citizens, he stated, could not be hoodwinked by such a "transaction." Graham became indignant and said he would take action against those who were maligning him. Chief Chilton assured him that he would receive every protection from injury to his character or reputation if his proposition was a legitimate one. Graham stated that his rather won the day and he would answer for his character. This did not satisfy the Chief who insisted on knowing his game. Graham finally informed him that the proposed electric railway was no skit. It was going to be an elevated line running between two concrete walls ten feet apart. It would be operated on the block system, all danger from collisions would be eradicated, and freight could be unloaded automatically thereby lessening the expense of hired help. No less of jobs would be required, and at any time an accident did occur, the damage would be confined within the concrete walls. This nearly floored Chief Chilton, and after he had recovered from the shock he informed Graham that his story was too much for the swallow at one gulp. He told Graham to take his railway proposition to the marines and with that the Chief left determined from over to keep his optics on Graham.

Friday evening a number of business men ran across Graham for the purpose of getting information and posted him on questions at him in reference to the scheme. He spent a very unsatisfactory time answering the many queries put to him and looked upon Constable Foster, who had been appointed to watch him as a representative of the Third Detective Agency. Finally the talk was brought to a temporary close as Graham wished to meet his wife who was coming from Omemee on the 10.10 train. Constable Foster accompanied him to the station and when they arrived there they drove to the Peter House where Graham had started to board.

Chief Chilton did not go off duty that evening until he was positively sure that Graham had retired to the night. Next morning he was on the job bright and early and when Graham came back had Graham shadowed. Graham, however, was not to be caught napping, as he left the Peter House by the back door and was not shadowed. Chief Chilton, who was on the job, decided he would act on his own responsibility. No permission had been asked from the Council, but as no one seemed anxious to move in the matter Chief Chilton and a number of men who had worked for Graham hurried to the G.T.R. station. On the other hand Graham had engaged a rig and driven to the station by the back way. He was met by Mr. Wm. Quinn, Mr. Graham and Mr. Wm. Graham, who had been left in charge of the office during the absence of Mr. Graham. Graham was met by Chief Chilton and Constable Foster, who had been left in charge of the office during the absence of Mr. Graham. CAMPAIGN NOTES

The last week of the campaign! And there is a whole lot of member to get yet! The workers in the Y.M.C.A. membership campaign starts on with 180 new members as its objective minimum. We don't know whether the changeable weather of the past two weeks has affected the sports of the boys or not, but they are still a long way from 180.

It isn't as if there wasn't a chance yet. There is no reason why the number of members still required could not be secured in the next two or four days.

Just think how easy it is. If each of our members were to secure only another member we would be away ahead of the game. The same applies to outsiders.

Here's the way the leaders of the campaign look at it. The Y.M.C.A. is a two-point church. So R. Hockey of the young men want to get a gymnasium.

And the advantages of the Y.M.C.A. Of course that is the big talking point. The boys don't care about that. They are asking for exactly what the Y.M.C.A. can give them. Their reading room, gymnasium, bowling alleys, etc., are all provided for the membership.

And they don't forget the wrestling. The wrestling class is reckoned to be exceptional in Canada.

Just why so many young men around Peterborough don't take advantage of the Y.M.C.A. is what the campaign workers cannot understand. They cannot see why it is that so many young men will not join the Y.M.C.A. when it is the general opinion that the Y.M.C.A. is the best place with which to spend your evenings.

Yours, etc.,
Y. M. C. A.

BRITAIN IS SATISFIED

Sir Edward Grey Explains the Moroccan Question.

BOTH LEADERS BACK HIM

London, Nov. 28—Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for Foreign Affairs, in opening the debate relating to the British Parliament dealt with unusual completeness and force in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the part Great Britain played in the Agadir incident in Morocco, which brought Europe very close to war last summer. At the outset he referred to the disclosure by the German Foreign Minister Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter, of the conversations which had taken place between the German Ambassador and himself. This disclosure, he said, was not complete and he was under the necessity of putting more fully before the House of Commons the part taken by the British Foreign Office.

The Secretary's lucid exposition of the negotiations and the firmness he was able to show during the trying weeks, won for him the support of the House with the exception of a few radicals or "peace at any price" members. His announcement that if a British Minister could not say what Lloyd-George said in his much discussed speech, Great Britain would cease to be a great power, brought forth a great cheer, as did also his pronouncements that the Cabinet would at all times protect British interests.

In their lobbies, after the speech, confidence was expressed in Sir Edward's conduct of affairs during the crisis, and satisfaction that the Government is working for better relations with Germany. It is believed that the speech will have a reassuring effect on Germany.

The Prime Minister, during the course of his reply to criticisms that the Government had acted with too much secrecy, protested that the House had never had greater opportunities to discuss international relations than at the present time. He declared that in the interest of the peace of the world the Government's policy would continue.

The House of Commons was crowded when Sir Edward Grey arose. Many distinguished strangers were in the galleries, among them a number of foreign diplomats.

At the outset Sir Edward told the House that Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter's disclosure of the conversations which had taken place between the German Ambassador and himself had taken him by surprise. In diplomatic procedure it was most unusual to make public any such conversations without consulting the other party.

He did not make any complaint however, as he understood that the exigencies of the situation in Germany precluded any such consultation. Sir Edward then recited the story of the negotiations and how he had firmly declined to be left out of the matter.

The German Ambassador failing to reply to these representations, the English Government decided the English public might be misled by silence, and Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George made his famous Mansion House speech, in which it was plainly expressed England's determination to protect its interests against any other power in the world, Germany being obviously referred to as the one he meant.

The Mansion House speech, Sir Edward pointed out, was not meant as a threat, but as a dignified assertion of British rights. The German Ambassador complained of it, however but voiced his complaint in such a tone that the English Foreign Office thought it undignified to notice it.

In his reference to Lloyd George speech, Sir Edward said:

"Its purpose was that where British interests are affected we must not be treated as if we were of no account. If the time ever comes when this cannot be said, we shall have ceased to exist at any rate as a great power." was Sir Edward Grey's comment.

Four days later Count Wolff Mettternich presented to Sir Edward Grey a communication complaining of Mr Lloyd George's speech.

On July 27 came a break in the clouds. Count Wolff-Metternich presented a note full of good-will hoping that Sir Edward Grey would find an opportunity of reassuring the public with regard to Germany's intentions.

"The House will observe," said Sir Edward, "that the tone of this communication was friendly all round, to France as well as to ourselves. It also expressed appreciation of the friendly tone in which it was couched. I expressed the hope that it might be taken as a starting point and that we could enter upon conversations which must lead to mutual reassurance."

Since forward there were no further difficulties. A good deal of misunderstanding could have been avoided, it was marked Sir Edward, if Germany had made more clear about July 1 that she had no intention of taking any part of Morocco.

Desire to improve our relations with Germany, and not at all to minimize our friendship unimpaired. The German Imperial Chancellor recently made two speeches which were inspired with hopeful sense his country strong, but not aggressive. If that is the spirit of German policy, then within two or three years the talk of a great European war will have gone. The effect of the Morocco settlement must be to relax tension and to remove a great objection from the path of European progress. For years the question of Morocco has been a discomfort to diplomatists. It has been settled without breaking the peace of Europe, and the part His Majesty's Government has taken has contributed materially to that result.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Unionists in a speech strongly supporting Sir Edward Grey said that the Foreign Secretary's statement had convinced him that every step taken was with the sole regard for British interests.

CARDINALS NAMED

Pope Pius X. Holds Secret Consistory at Rome.

A YEAR OF MOURNING

Rome, Nov. 28—Obedient to a summons from Pope Pius X. the cardinals in Rome assembled in a secret consistory yesterday and confirmed the papal nomination of 18 new members of the college of cardinals the supreme governing body of the Roman Catholic Church. Besides the new cardinals who received the red hat yesterday the Pope created another whom he kept secret. It is supposed that the unnamed cardinal is Mgr Filippo Giustini, secretary of the congregation of sacraments. As he entered the hall of the consistory, where yesterday's ceremony took place, the Pope's step was less sure and the careworn face of his holiness bore signs of his recent illness, that had come to stay. Nevertheless he withstood the fatigue of the long and trying ordeal bravely.

The Pope said that the present year is a year of mourning for the church. All felt that this phrase alluded to the clamorous commemoration of the Italian jubilee which it is felt offended the rights of the holy see. Through the manifestations of sectarians evidently hinting at the Freemasons, hatred to the Catholic faith, the allocution continues, was promoted, thus offending the faithful of the whole world, while the supreme greatness of Italy is this faith, which fired inspired every civil progress and which alone is the source of peace and lasting prosperity.

The Pope lamented the impunity which was granted to the enemies of religion in Rome, especially the iniquitous laws, as he refers to them, which opposed the existence of God and the Christian order. Pius X. then dealt with the persecution of the church in Portugal by the same body, and expressed the hope that the Portuguese nation, boasting of centuries of attachment to the church would react against her enemy.

The evils of modernism and naturalism were counterbalanced, the Pope continued, everywhere by the love of the holy eucharist, as was proved by the congresses held in Cologne, London, Montreal and Madrid. Spain especially had, he said, demonstrated her true religious sentiment, and he ended with the hope that God would preserve her from the evil threatening her peace and happiness.

The new cardinals include Francis Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, England; Giuseppe Mario Gosy y Maschi, Archbishop of Valladolid, Spain; Antonio Rico, Papal Nuncio of Spain; and Italian, Gennaro Granito Di Belmonte, Archbishop of Edessa. Italian; Francis Bauer, Archbishop of Olmutz, Austrian; Louis Adolf Anatole, Archbishop of Paris, France; Agustin Dubosc, Archbishop of Cincinnati, France; Fratan Nagl, Archbishop of Vienna; Mgr John H [illegible], Archbishop of New York; Mgr William O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston; Mgr Dionisio Taleoni, Apostolic Delegate at Washington; Francis Maria Rovere De Cabrieres, Bishop of Montpellier, France; Gaetano Bisleti, Papal Major Domo, Italian; Giovanni Battista Tugari, Assessor of the Congregation of the Holy Office, Italian; Basilio Pompili, secretary of the Congregation of the Council, Italian; Ludovico Billot, French, Jesuit; Guglielmo Van Rossum of the Fathers of the Resurrection, Dutch; and Enriquez Almaraz y Santos, Archbishop of Seville.

WHITE AND THE TRUSTS

Mr. German Criticises Hon. W. T. White's Change of Political Faith

SCORES THE NATIONALISTS

Ottawa, Nov. 28—"We want none of that in Canada. The man who will stand up and say that the air of liberty could not be breathed in Canada except through holes shot in the British flag should not stand on any platform in Canada. Such a man should not have a seat, not only in the Government of Canada, but in the Parliament of Canada."

In these words William German (Welland), the man who could not vote for reciprocity, but who today declares himself to the end of his days a Liberal, denounced the Nationalist element in the Borden Government, and particularly P. E. Blondin (Champlain), the Government's choice for Deputy Speaker, to whom the words referred to were ascribed.

J. H. Rainville (Chambly and Vercheres) is a Nationalist, and he talked straight Nationalism in the language of the majority of the opponents of naval expenditure. Our only possible enemy, he said, was the United States. It was not the organization of a navy, but the better organization of the militia, which would serve best the interests of Canada.

J. B. Daylin (Wright) regretted that there was no assurance in the speech from the throne on the immediate construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. Labor was also neglected. He enquired whether the Postmaster-General, equally with his Nationalist colleagues, was opposed to the only naval policy before the country at the present day (the Laurier navy).

Hon. L. P. Pelletier: "Yes, I am dead against it."

Mr. Devlin: "Have you any substitute?"

Hon. L. P. Pelletier: "Yes, I have. Wait and see."

W. B. Northrup (E. Hastings) called upon the House to stop talking irrelevantly and get down to the despatch of business. The Opposition had said nothing against the points in the speech from the throne. The amendment even did not find fault with any policy omitted from the speech, but introduced an entirely different matter. It was an insult to the intelligence of the members.

W. M. German (Welland): the anti-reciprocity Liberal who won his seat by acclamation, declared that he had always been a Liberal and always intended to remain a Liberal. "I think," he said, "I have already as many bad habits as I should have without adding to them by joining the Conservative party."

Mr. German criticized Hon. W. T. White's change of political faith. He did not think it was altogether free. Messrs. Walker Lash, etc., members of "the noble eighteen," had dictated to Borden who should be Finance Minister. "We will produce the money necessary to carry the elections," they had said. "But we will not stand for that old gentleman, Mr. George E. Foster, as Finance Minister."

Mr. White had been forced into the Ministry without his knowledge. He had to obey the orders of the heads of the trust company.

The Premier, said Mr. German, had included in his Cabinet three gentlemen who had gone through the election preaching the so-called doctrine of Nationalism, a doctrine of anti-nationalism, a doctrine, if I may use the word, Mr. Speaker, of treason.

Mr. German declared that a plebiscite was not a policy, but only a makeshift and an excuse. He doubted if the people of Canada would have confidence in the people who made such a suggestion.

Mr. Borden had tied himself to a mad crowd, but he was preparing for a great awakening. He owed his position to the electors of Ontario, who would not stand for the Nationalist elements in his Cabinet.

"It is keeping on," said Mr. German, in conclusion, "at the next election his political career will get a jolt that will hurl him, his Bourassas, his Blondins and his Monks into [illegible] oblivion."

John Webster (Brockville) cast a homelike air over the chamber by addressing himself to "Mr. Speaker, gentlemen of the House of Commons, my friends."

"We appear to have been holding a postmortem on a dead corpse," he said.

W. Wright (N. Waterloo), W. A. Buchanan (Medicine Hat), and O. Turgeon (Gloucester), also spoke.

New Postoffice for Brantford.

Brantford, Nov. 28—Announcement has been made by W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., that an inspector will be sent to this city to make a view of requirements on the accommodation provided by the Government buildings in this city. Brantford Board of Trade has complained for years of inadequate postal facilities, and it is expected the present Government will erect new buildings.

Q. What is astigmatism of the eye?

A. Astigmatism is an uneven curvature of the eye and causes a double focus. As the eye always strives for clear vision, this double focus annoys the brain, and causes headache and nervousness. We make lenses called cylinders to correct astigmatism.

Q. What causes double vision?

A. Double vision is caused by the eye not being in line, that is, one may turn up or have a tendency to do so, or both may turn in, a weak muscular system is the cause, a weak nervous system is back of it all.

We would be pleased to have you call and let us fully explain how such conditions can be relieved by glasses.

Censure For Foy

Ottawa, Nov. 28—The St. Jean Baptiste Society of Holy Family Parish, Ottawa East, has passed a strong resolution supporting the French-Canadian Educational Association in its condemnation of Attorney General Foy for his attack on Bilingualism. A section of the resolution read:

"As citizens of Canada we look down with utter contempt at the narrow-mindedness of Mr. Foy. As Catholics we are determined to see in our midst a man so unjust and so mean as he would be to cancel rights claimed by famous native Christian and Catholic sport to the institution of the country of his birth for play."

They further more want to declare for Mr. Foy's own benefit and that of his friends if he has any that the French-Canadian parents are more than ever sanguine of having French taught their children, without neglecting the study and teaching of English.

Quiet at Nanking.

Nanking, Nov. 28—Except for an occasional exchange of fire between Imperialists and Free Birds occupied respectively by the Imperialists and revolutionary forces, and skirmishes between the advance posts of revolutionary troops and the rearguard of Imperialists, all is the word, conditions are normal at Nanking, are unchanged. A strong effort is being made to induce Gen. Chang commander of the Imperialists, to surrender.

The commanders of foreign warships have united in a protest against the bombardment proceeding for at least 24 hours and to this the right of military guards and to forts on Purple Mountain have acceded.

QUALITY, SKILL & CARE,

THE LADDER BY WHICH WE CLIMB To Those Requiring Glasses

Eight years is a short time in the life of man, but it is a period of sufficient length, in business, to carry with it a guarantee of honest effort and satisfaction.

For this number of years I have carried on an Optical business in this city and I have fitted thousands of people with glasses. The fact that I have been successful leads me to believe that my methods are right and for that reason, I wish to give you the additional assurance that there will be no change in them in the future. I am in a position to give you the best of everything that means eye comfort.

It is barely possible that you are in need of new lenses, frame or an eyeglass and I would ask that you give me the privilege of giving your eyes scientific examination and of providing the glasses for you if you need them.

I exercise the greatest care in the examination and fitting of the glasses. I do not overlook the feature of making glasses which will add greatly to the personal appearance of those who wear them. In other words, every detail will have my utmost consideration.

BRITAIN IS SATISFIED

Sir Edward Grey Explains the Moroccan Question.

BOTH LEADERS BACK HIM

In London Nov. 28—Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in explaining during a meeting of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the part Great Britain played in the negotiations at Morocco, which brought Europe very close to war last summer, said the outset he referred to the disclosure by the German Foreign Minister Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter, of the conversations which had taken place between the German Ambassador and himself. This disclosure, he said, was not complete and he was under the necessity of putting more fully before the House of Commons the part taken by the British Foreign Office.

The Secretary's lucid exposition of the negotiations and the firmness he was able to show during the trying weeks, won for him the support of the House with the exception of a few radicals or "peace at any price" members. His announcement that if a British Minister could not say what Lloyd-George said in his much discussed speech, Great Britain would cease to be a great power, brought forth a great cheer, as did also his pronouncements that the Cabinet would at all times protect British interests.

In their lobbies, after the speech, confidence was expressed in Sir Edward's conduct of affairs during the crisis, and satisfaction that the Government is working for better relations with Germany. It is believed that the speech will have a reassuring effect on Germany.

The Prime Minister, during the course of his reply to criticisms that the Government had not taken as much secrecy, pointed out that the House had never had greater opportunities to discuss international relations than at the present time. He declared that in the interest of the peace of the world the Government's policy would continue.

The House of Commons was crowded when Sir Edward Grey arose. Many distinguished strangers were in the galleries, among them a number of foreign diplomats.

At the outset Sir Edward told the House that Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter's disclosure of the conversations which had taken place between the German Ambassador and himself had taken him by surprise. In diplomatic procedure it was most unusual to make public any such conversations without consulting the other party.

He did not make any complaint, however, as he understood that the exigencies of the situation in Germany precluded any such consultation. Sir Edward then recited the story of the negotiations and how he had firmly declined to be left out of the matter.

The German Ambassador failing to reply to these representations, the English Government decided the English public might be misled by silence, and Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George made his famous Mansion House speech, in which it was plainly expressed England's determination to protect its interests against any other power in the world, Germany being obviously referred to as the one he meant.

The Mansion House speech, Sir Edward pointed out, was not meant as a threat, but as a dignified assertion of British rights. The German Ambassador, complained of it, however, but voiced his complaint in such a tone that the English Foreign Office thought it undignified to notice it.

In his reference to Lloyd-George's speech, Sir Edward said:

"Its purpose was that where British interests are affected we must not be treated as if we were of no account. If the time ever comes when that cannot be said, we shall have ceased to exist at any rate as a great power," was Sir Edward Grey's comment.

Four days later Count Wolff Mettemich presented to Sir Edward Grey a communication complaining of Mr. Lloyd George's speech.

On July 27 came a break in the clouds. Count Wolff-Mettemich presented a note full of good-will hoping that Sir Edward Grey would find an opportunity of reassuring the public with regard to Germany's intentions.

"The House will observe," said Sir Edward, "that the tone of this communication was friendly all round, to France as well as to ourselves. I at once expressed appreciation of the friendly tone in which it was couched. I expressed the hope that it might be taken as a starting point and that we could not regard the things which must lead to future recriminations."

"There were no further difficulties. A good deal of misunderstanding could have been avoided," he marked, Sir Edward, "if Germany had made more clear about July 4 that she had no intention of taking any part of Morocco."

"I desire to improve our relations with Germany, and not to compromise our friendship unnecessarily. The German Imperial Chancellor recently made two speeches which were interpreted with hopeful meaning in this country striking but not aggressive. If that is the spirit of German policy, then within two or three years the talk of a great European war will have gone. The effect of the Morocco settlement must be to relax tension and to remove a great objection from the path of European progress. For years the question of Morocco has been a disturbing factor. Now it has been settled without breaking the peace of Europe, and the part His Majesty's Government has taken has contributed materially to that result."

At Iowa Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, in a speech strongly supporting Sir Edward Grey and his Foreign Secretary, said he had learned from the statement taken with the satisfaction of British people.

CARDINALS NAMED

Pope Pius X. Holds Secret Consistory at Rome.

A YEAR OF MOURNING

Rome, Nov. 28—According to a summons from Pope Pius X. the cardinals in Rome assembled in a secret consistory yesterday and confirmed the papal nomination of six new members in the college of cardinals the supreme governing body of the Roman Catholic Church. Besides the new cardinals who received the red hat yesterday the Pope created another whom he kept secret. It is supposed that the unnamed cardinal is Mgr. Filippe Gustini, secretary of the congregation of sacraments. As he entered the hall of the consistory where yesterday's ceremony took place, the Pope's step was less sure and the careworn face of his holiness bore signs of his recent illness, that had come to stay. Nevertheless he withstood the fatigue of the long and trying ordeal bravely.

The Pope said that the present year is a year of mourning for the church. All felt that this phrase alluded to the champagne commemoration of the Italian jubilee, which it is felt offended the rights of the holy see. Through the manifestations of sectarianism evidently hinting at the Freemasonry, hatred to the Catholic faith, the allocution continues, was promoted, thus offending the faithful of the whole world, while the supreme greatness of Italy is this faith, which had inspired every civil progress, and which alone is the source of peace and lasting prosperity.

The Pope lamented the impunity which was granted to the enemies of religion in Rome, especially the impurious body, as he refers to them, which opposed the existence of God and the Christian order. Pius X. then dealt with the persecution of the church in Portugal by the same body, and expressed the hope that the Portuguese nation, boasting of centuries of attachment to the church, would react against her enemy.

The evils of modernism and naturalism were counterbalanced, the Pope continued, everywhere by the love of the holy eucharist, as was proved by the congresses held in Cologne, London, Montreal and Madrid. Spain especially had, he said, demonstrated her true religious sentiment, and he ended with the hope that God would preserve her from the evil threatening her peace and happiness.

The new cardinals are: Francis Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, England; Giuseppe Marie Cos y Macchi, Archbishop of Valladolid, Spain; Antonio Rico, Papal Nuncio of Spain, an Italian; Gennaro Granito Di Belmonte, Archbishop of Edessa, Italian; Francis Bauer, Archbishop of Olmutz, Austrian; Louis Adolphe Amette, Archbishop of Paris, France; Verrier, Dubillard, Archbishop of Carthage, France; Francis Nagl, Archbishop of Vienna; Mgr. John H [illegible], Archbishop of New York; Mgr. William O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston; Mgr. Domenic Falconi, Apostolic Delegate at Washington; Frances Maria Roverie De Cabrieres, Bishop of Montpellier, France; Gaetano Bisleti, Papal Major Domo, Italian; Giovanni Battista Tugari, Assessor of the Congregation of the Holy Office, Italian; Basilio Pompili, secretary of the Congregation of the Council, Italian; Ludovico Billot, French Jesuit; Guglielmo Van Rossum of the Fathers of the Resurrection, Dutch; and Enriquez Almaraz y Santos, Archbishop of Seville.

WHITE AND THE TRUSTS

Mr. German Criticises Hon. W. T. White's Change of Political Faith

SCORES THE NATIONALISTS

Ottawa, Nov. 28—"We want none of that in Canada. The man who will stand up and say that the air of liberty could not be breathed in Canada except through holes shot in the British flag, should not stand on any platform in Canada. Such a man should not have a seat, not only in the Government of Canada, but in the Parliament of Canada."

In these words William German (Welland), the man who could not vote for reciprocity, but who to-day declares himself to the end of his days a Liberal, denounced the Nationalist element in the Borden Government, and particularly P. E. Blondin (Champlain), the Government's choice for Deputy Speaker, to whom the words referred to were ascribed.

J. H. Rainville (Chambly and Verchères) is a Nationalist, and he talked straight Nationalism in the language of the majority of the opponents of naval expenditure. Our only possible enemy, he said, was the United States. It was not the organization of a navy, but the better organization of the militia, which would serve best the interests of Canada.

E. B. Devlin (Wright) regretted that there was no assurance in the speech from the throne on the immediate construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. Labor was also neglected. He enquired whether the Postmaster-General, equally with his Nationalist colleagues, was opposed to the only naval policy before the country at the present day (the Laurier navy).

Hon. L. P. Pelletier: "Yes, I am dead against it."

Mr. Devlin: "Have you any substitute?"

Hon. L. P. Pelletier: "Yes, I have. Wait and see."

W. B. Northrup (E. Hastings) called upon the House to stop talking irrelevantly and get down to the despatch of business. The Opposition had said nothing against the points in the speech from the throne. The amendment even did not find fault with any policy omitted from the speech, but introduced an entirely different matter. It was an insult to the intelligence of the members.

W. M. German (Welland), the anti-reciprocity Liberal who won his seat by acclamation, declared that he had always been a Liberal and always intended to remain a Liberal. "I think," he said, "I have already as many bad habits as I should have without adding to them by joining the Conservative party."

Mr. German criticized Hon. W. T. White's change of political faith. He did not think it was altogether free. Messrs. Walker, Lash, etc., members of "the noble eighteen," had dictated to Borden who should be Finance Minister. "We will produce the money necessary to carry the election," they had said. "But we will not stand for that old gentleman, Mr. George E. Foster, as Finance Minister."

Mr. White had been forced into the Ministry without his knowledge. He had to obey the orders of the heads of the trust company.

The Premier, said Mr. German, had included in his Cabinet three gentlemen who had gone through the election preaching the so-called doctrine of Nationalism, a doctrine, if I may use the word, Mr. Speaker, of treason.

Mr. German declared that a plebiscite was not a policy, but only a makeshift and an excuse. He doubted if the people of Canada would have confidence in the people who made such a suggestion.

Mr. Borden had tied himself to a bad crowd, but he was preparing for a great awakening. He owed his position to the electors of Ontario, who would not stand for the Nationalist elements in his Cabinet.

"If he keeps on," said Mr. German, in conclusion, "at the next election his political career will get a jolt that will hurl him, his Bourassas, his Blondins and his Monks into political oblivion."

John Webster (Brockville) cast a humble air over the chamber by addressing himself to "Mr. Speaker, gentlemen of the House of Commons, my friends."

"We appear to have been holding a post-mortem on a dead corpse," he said.

W. Weichel (N. Waterloo), W. A. Buchanan (Medicine Hat), and O. Turgeon (Gloucester), also spoke.

"THE AVENGE

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

The Baroness suddenly dropped her veil, but not before Wrayson had seen a sudden change in her face. He remembered suddenly that Heneage was no stranger to her, he remembered the embarrassment of their meeting at the Alhambra.

"You know him, of course," he repeated. "Heneage is not a man to be trifled with. He has had experience in affairs of this sort, he is no ordinary amateur detective."

"Yes! I know Mr. Stephen Heneage," the Baroness said. "Tell me, does Louise know?"

Wrayson shook his head.

"I have had no opportunity of telling her," he answered. "I might not have thought so seriously of it, but this morning I received a note from Heneage."

"Yes! What did he say?"

"It was only a line or two," Wrayson answered. "He reminded me of his previous warning to me to leave England for a time, and he underlined it. Louise ought to know. I want to tell her."

"I am glad you did not tell me this before," the Baroness said, as they left the room together, "or it would have spoilt my luncheon. I do not like your friend, Mr. Heneage!"

"You will give me Louise's address?" he asked. "Some one must see her."

"I will send it you," the Baroness promised, "before the day is out."

CHAPTER XXII.

"One would scarcely believe," Wrayson remarked, leaning back in his chair and drawing in a long deep breath, "that we are within three miles of one of the noisiest and most bustling of French watering-places."

"It is incredible," his companion admitted.

They were seated in a garden behind the old inn of the Lion d'Or, in the village of St. Etarpe. Before them was a round table, on whose spotless white cloth still remained dishes of fruit and a bottle of wine—not the vin ordinaire which had been served with their repast, but something which Wrayson had ordered specially, and which the landlord himself, all smiles and bows, had uncorked and placed before them. Wrayson produced his cigarette case.

"How did you hear of this place?" he asked, watching the smoke curl upwards into the breathless air. "I fancy that you and I are the only guests here."

Wrayson's companion, tall, broad-shouldered, and heavily bearded, was busy filling a pipe from a pouch by his side. His features were unmistakably Saxon, and his cheeks were tanned, as though by much exposure to all sorts of weathers. He was still apparently on the right side of middle age, but his manners were grave, almost reserved.

"I was in the neighbourhood many years ago," he answered. "I had a fancy to revisit the place. And you?"

"I discovered it entirely by accident," Wrayson admitted. "I walked out from Chourville this morning, stayed here for some luncheon, and was so delighted that I took a room and went straight back for my bag. There isn't an Emperor in Europe who has so beautiful a diningroom as this!"

Together they looked across the valley, a wonderful panorama of vine-clad slopes and meadows, starred with many-coloured wild flowers, through which the river wound its way, now hidden, now visible, a thin line of gleaming quicksilver. Tall poplars fringed its banks and there were white cottages and farmhouses, mostly built in the shelter of the vine-covered cliffs. To the left, a rolling mass of woods was pierced by one long green avenue, at the summit of which stretched the grey front and towers of the Chateau de St. Etarpe. Wrayson looked long at the fertile and beautiful country, which seemed to fade so softly away in the horizon—but he looked longest at the chateau amongst the woods.

"I wonder who lives there," he remarked. "I meant to have asked the waiter."

"I can tell you," the stranger said. "The chateau belongs to the Baroness de Sturm."

"A Frenchwoman?" Wrayson asked.

"Half French, half Belgian. She has estates in both countries, I believe," his companion answered. "As a matter of fact, I believe that this chateau is hers in her own right as a daughter of the Etarpes. She married a Belgian nobleman."

"You seem well acquainted with the neighbourhood," Wrayson remarked.

"I have been here before," was the somewhat short answer.

Wrayson produced his card-case.

"As we seem likely to see something of one another during the next few days, nolens volens," he remarked, "may I introduce myself? My name is Wrayson, Herbert Wrayson, and I come from London."

The stranger took the card a little doubtfully.

"I am much obliged," he said. "I do not carry a card-case, but my name is Duncan."

"An Englishman, of course?" Wrayson remarked smiling.

"I am English," Mr. Duncan answered, "but I have not been in England for many years."

There was something about his manner which forbade any further questioning on Wrayson's part. The two men sat together in silence, and Wrayson, although not of a curious turn of mind, began to feel more than an ordinary interest in his companion. One thing he noticed in particular. Although, as the sun sank lower, the beauties of the landscape below increased, Duncan's eyes scarcely for a moment rested upon them. He had turned his chair a little, and he sat directly facing the chateau. The golden cornfields, the stained-glass windows of the grey church rising like a cathedral, as it were in the midst of the daffodil-starred meadows—caught now with the flood of the dying sunlight mingled so harmoniously with their own time-mellowed richness; the increasing perfume of the flowers by which they were surrounded; none of these things seemed for one moment to distract his attention. Steadily and fixedly he gazed up that deep green avenue, empty indeed of any moving object, and yet—seemingly not empty to him. For he had the air of one who sees beyond the world of visible objects, one who sees things dimmed to those of only natural powers. With what figures, Wrayson wondered, idly, was he peopling that empty avenue, what were the fancies which had crept out from his brain and held him spellbound? He had admitted a more or less intimate acquaintance with the place—was he, perhaps, a former lover of the Baroness, when she had been simply Amy do St. Etarpe? Wrayson forgot, for a while, his own affairs, in following out these mild speculations. The soft twilight stole down upon them, here and there little patches of grey mist came curling up the valley. A bat came flying about their heads, and Wrayson at last rose.

"I shall take a stroll," he remarked, "and turn in. Good-night, if I don't see you again!"

The man named Duncan turned his head.

"Good-night!" he said, mechanically.

Wrayson walked down the garden and passed through a wicketgate into the broad white road. Setting his back to the village, he came, in a few minutes, to the great entrance gate of the chateau, hung from massive stone pillars of great age, and themselves fashioned of intricate and curiously wrought iron work. The gates themselves were fast closed, and the smaller ones on either side, intended for pedestrians, were fastened with a padlock. Wrayson stood for a moment looking through the bars into the park. The drive ran for half a mile perfectly straight, and then, taking an abrupt bend, passed upwards into the woods, amongst which was the chateau.

"What do you want?" an abrupt voice demanded.

Wrayson looked round in surprise. A man in gamekeeper's clothes had issued from the lodge, carrying a gun.

"Good evening!" Wrayson said. "Is it permitted for the public to enter the park?"

"By no means," was the surly answer. "Cannot monsieur see that the gates are locked?"

"I understood from the landlord of the Lion d'Or," Wrayson said, "that the villagers were allowed the privilege of walking in the park."

The man looked at him suspiciously.

"You are not of the village," he said.

"I am staying there," Wrayson answered.

"It makes nothing. For the present villagers and everyone are forbidden to enter. There are visitors at the chateau."

Wrayson turned away.

"Very well," he said. "Good-night!"

The man did not answer him. Wrayson continued to climb the hill which skirted the park. He did not turn round, but he heard the gates open, and he was convinced that he was being watched, if he was not followed. He kept on, however, until he came to some more iron gates, from which stretched the grass avenue which led straight to the gardens of the chateau. Dimly, through the gathering dusk, he caught a view of it, which was little more than an impression; silver grey and quiet with the peace which the centuries can bring, it seemed to him with its fantastic towers and imperfectly visible outline, like a palace of dreams rather than a dwelling-house, however magnificent, of material stone and brick. An owl flew out from the trees a few yards to the left of him, and drifted slowly over his head, with much flapping of wings, and a weird, soft call, faintly answered in the distance by his mate; from far away down in the valley came the slow ringing of a single evening bell. Save for these things, a silence almost wonderful reigned. Gradually Wrayson began to feel that sense of soothed nerves, of inexpressible relief, which Nature alone dispenses—her one unequalled drug! All the agitation and turmoil of the last few months seemed to fall away from him. He felt that he had been living in a world of false proportions; that the maze of doubts and fears through which he had wandered was, after all, no part of life itself, merely a tissue of irrelevant issues, to which his distorted imagination had affixed a purely fictitious importance. What concern of his was it how Morris Barnes had lived or died? And who was Bentham that his fate should ever disturb him? The secrets of other people were theirs to keep. His own secret was more wonderful by far. Alone, from amidst the tangle of his other emotions, he felt its survival—more than its survival, its absolute conquest of all other feelings and considerations. It was truth, he knew, that men sought after in the quiet places, and it was the truth, which he had found. If he could but see her coming down the avenue, coming to him across the daisy-strewn grass, beneath the shadow of the stately poplars! The very thought set his heart beating like a boy's. He felt the blood singing in his veins, the love-music swelling in his heart. He shook the gates. They, too, were padlocked. Then he listened. There was no sound of any footfall in the road. He moved a few steps higher up, and, making use of the pillars of the gate, he climbed on to the wall. It was a six-foot drop, but he came down noiselessly into a bed of moss. Once more he paused to listen. There was no sound save the purring of some night insect over his head. Stealthily, and keeping in the shadow of the trees, he began to climb the grassy avenue towards the chateau.

CHAPTER XXIII.

It seemed to Wrayson, as by and by he began to make bolder and more rapid progress, that it was an actual fairy world into which he was passing with beating heart and this strange new sense of delicious excitement. As he drew nearer, the round Norman towers and immense grey front of the chateau began to take to themselves more definite shape. The gardens began to spread themselves out; terraced lawns, from whose flower beds, now a blurred chaos so far as colour was concerned, waves of perfume came stealing down to him; statuary, white and ghostly in the half light, and here and there startlingly life-like; trimmed shrubs, and a long wall of roses trailing down from the high stone balcony. But, as yet, no sound or sign of human life! That was to come.

Wrayson came to a pause at last. He had passed from the shelter of the woods into a laurel walk, but further than this he could not go without being plainly visible to any one in the chateau. So he waited and watched. There were lights, he could see now, behind many of the ground floor windows of the chateau, and more than once he fancied that he could catch the sound of music. He tried to fancy in which room she was to project his passionate will through the twilight, so that she should come to him. But the curtains remained undrawn, and the windows closed. Still Wrayson waited!

Then at last Providence intervened. Above the top of the woods, over on the other side of the chateau, came first a faint lightening in the sky, which gradually deepened into a glow. Slowly the rim of the moon crept up, and very soon the spectral twilight was at an end. The shadowy landscape became real and vivid. It was a new splendour creeping softly into the night. Wrayson moved a little further back into the shelter, and even as he did so, one of the lower windows of the chateau was thrown open, and two women, followed by a man, stepped out. Their appearance was so sudden that Wrayson felt his breath almost taken away. He leaned a little forward and watched them eagerly.

The woman, who was foremost of the little group, was a stranger to him, although her features, and a somewhat peculiar headdress which she wore, seemed in a sense familiar. She was tall and dark, and she carried herself with the easy dignity of a woman of rank. Her face was thoughtful and her expression sweet; if she was not actually beautiful, she was at least a woman whom it was impossible to ignore. But Wrayson glanced at her only for a minute. It was Louise who stood by her side; the music of her voice came floating down to him. Heavens! had he ever realized how beautiful she was? He devoured her with his eyes, he strained his nerves to hear what they were saying. He was ridiculously relieved to see that the man who stood by their side was grey-headed. He was beginning to realize what love was. Jealousy would be intolerable.

A Marvel Of Healing

Salt Rheum of Ten Year's Standing Healed as if by Magic

Hands Cracked so Could Not Work —Cures Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

It does not take long for Dr. Chase's Ointment to prove its magic healing power. A single night is often sufficient to produce the most startling results.

Internal treatment for skin diseases is nearly always disappointing. By applying Dr. Chase's Ointment to the diseased parts relief is obtained almost immediately, and gradually the sores heal up and disappear. Here are two letters which will interest you:—

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes: "I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years, and had about despaired of ever being cured, so many treatments had failed. Reading of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment, I commenced using it, and was entirely cured by eight boxes. I want to express my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I to recommend it to all sufferers."

Mr. Stanley Merrill, Delaware, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with my hands cracking, often becoming so sore that I could hardly do any work. I got some of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and happy find that one or two applications of same to the affected parts make them well. I never had trouble since using the ointment for sore hands."

Pure-air oven retains the turkey's flavor

You should just taste the turkey roasted in the Pandora pure air oven. None of the flavor is lost, as in ordinary ovens where air becomes "stale," through improper ventilation. Instead, all its rare delicacy of flavor is accentuated to the fullest degree—for Pandora owners' enjoyment.

So perfect is the system of ventilation that air in Pandora oven cannot possibly become "stale" or oven ever smell "stuffy"

MOTOR CYCLES FOR WOMEN

Within the past eighteen months the popularity of the motor cycle has increased remarkably throughout the United Kingdom. This has necessarily created a demand for machines suitable for women. As a result many manufacturers have brought out women's motor cycles, with the frame so altered as to see a woman on the roads with a motor cycle and sometimes with a side-car attachment.—Consular Reports.

MOVING STAIRWAYS

There have been installed recently on a number of the underground stations of London moving stairways. So popular have they proved that the companies are planning to extend their use and also to adopt the principle in other directions. Four moving stairways, two down and two up, with a combined carrying capacity of 20,000 people per hour, are to link the Liverpool street station and the Broad street station with the Central London tube station, which is now being constructed below the two rail way terminii.—Consular Reports.

CAUSES OF EARTHQUAKES

Scientists who have made a study of earthquakes expressed no astonishment yesterday at the fact that extensive shocks had occurred in Germany and Switzerland, where heretofore they have been almost unknown. They said that while earthquakes were more common in certain other localities, there was no reason why one should not occur anywhere.

"Earthquakes in Central Europe are unusual," said one seismologist, "but that doesn't mean that there is anything surprising about one. The cosmologist, hearing of one, is inclined rather to say to himself, 'Hello, there's something going on in that region now!'

"The something that goes on, outside of districts where volcanic disturbances are the direct cause of shocks, is usually a break or geological fault, a slipping of a stratum of the earth's crust, which may first crack and then sink or be thrust up, according to the direction of the stress that caused it. This rupture is enough to cause tremors through the earth often with resulting damage to buildings.

"The ideas some people have that the earth rolls up in great waves like the sea is erroneous, and those who describe how they have seen these waves rippling across a field are much gifted in imagination. In fact, the ground moves upward, downward, obliquely, or horizontally, through a very small fraction of an inch, and seldom through a space of more than two or three inches. The destructiveness of an earthquake depends more on its velocity than on the size of the waves. With great velocity a small fraction of an inch is sufficient to batter brick buildings.

"Now as to these breaks in strata that cause many earthquakes. A considerable amount of corrugation of the earth's crust has occurred, for which a number of causes have been assigned. Whatever the cause, it is certain that stresses have accumulated sufficient to raise great mountain systems and bring about deformation of the rocks of the earth's crust. It is reasonable to suppose that these stresses may at certain times and places accumulate to such an extent as to cause violent rupture, which would be felt as an earthquake shock.

"The view is therefore commonly accepted by geologists that many earthquakes are but incidents in the adjustment of the earth's crust to changing conditions of pressure. These naturally occur more frequently along the boundary between great continents and great depressions, as along the Pacific coast, with the Rocky mountains and the Andes on one hand, and the steep declivities of the ocean bed on the other.

"On the Atlantic coast there are no high mountains and the bed of the ocean bed declines gradually. Severe stresses, therefore, would be more unusual in this neighbourhood, yet there is no reason why one should not exist and cause an earthquake. Central Europe is remote from the ocean bed, so that great depressions is eliminated and only the mountains remain.

"In Switzerland, of course, we have the Alps, and earthquakes may be, and often have been, caused by great avalanches. On the whole, it is perhaps more remarkable that there have been so few earthquakes in that region."—New York Times.

BRITISH-EGYPTIAN SUDAN

An important feature of the year's development was the further progress of the railway south of Khartoum. In the first quarter of 1910 the Blue Nile bridge bringing Khartoum north with Khartoum proper was opened, and the end of the year saw the completion of the bridge across the White Nile at Rabak and the extension of the line from Sennar across the Gezira to Kosti, a rapidly growing town on the west bank of the White Nile. Thence the line will be pushed on toward El Obeid, which will probably be reached early in 1912.

The commercial and strategical importance of this improvement in communications is already apparent, and the building of the line, which links up the rich Gezira province with Khartoum and Port Sudan, and thus with the outside world, has already been financially justified, the large increase in revenue earned by the Sudan railways in 1910 being attributed principally to the connection of Wad Medani with Khartoum.—Consular Reports.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

A tourist in the mountains of Tennessee once had dinner with a querulous old mountaineer who varied about hard times for fifteen minutes at a stretch.

"Why, man," said the tourist, "you ought to be able to make lots of money shipping green corn to the Northern market."

"Yes, I orter," was the sullen reply. "You have the land, I suppose, and can get the seed."

"Yes, I guess so."

"Then why don't you go into the speculating?"

"No use, stranger," sadly replied the cracker, "the old woman is too lazy to do the ploughin' and plant it."—Kansas City Star.

Don't rough it too much on your summer vacation," said Dr. Phineas L. Bayeott, the hygiene expert of Des Moines. "See that you get plenty of baths and plenty of good food. Otherwise your vacation will be apt to do you harm.

"I once thought of spending my midsummer holidays in the Tennessee mountains. So I wrote to a mountaineer whose picturesque homestead had been highly recommended to me, and in the course of my letter I asked the man if there was a bath in the house.

"In reply he said:

"'If you want a bath you had better take it before you come.'"—Washington Star.

The Envy of her Neighbors is the woman whose kitchen shines with a handsome, roomy range—whose face beams with the satisfaction afforded by a perfect cooking equipment.

For every woman wants a good stove. Whether she does her own cooking or not, she eats the meals that are prepared on it, and feels a pride in having the best, satisfies that pride; GURNEY-OXFORD justifies the neighbor's envy. Gurney-Oxford stoves and ranges carry every known feature of convenience, economy and control with some new points of excellence that are exclusive.

First of all is the lever that holds. No danger of the fire going out between meals. The Oxford Economizer will hold the heat at a low ebb till you want it; then turn the handle, and your stove is hot in a jiffy. Besides this saving of time and worry it saves in fuel to the actual extent of one ton in six.

THE DIVIDED FLUE STRIP is the envy of all women who bake. It guides the heat equally along sides, back and front of the oven.

Let us demonstrate these and other strong advantages of the Gurney-Oxford line. We have stoves for every purpose, every fuel, and a variety of prices.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM

Important Recommendations by Toronto Board of Health

The sub committee of the Toronto board of health, which has been considering the housing problem for some time, recommend, that every house in the city should have an independent and convenient water supply; that the medical health officer take cognizance of this along with other features when deciding whether a house is fit for human habitation or not; that the medical health officer rigorously enforce the law regarding unsanitary houses and keep at it until all such houses are pulled down or reconstructed, and that steps be taken to secure for each house within the city separate closet conveniences, and to force every house where there is sewer accommodation, with sewerage connection.

It further says that suburban garden cities, with rapid transportation facilities at a single fare, are needed to solve the housing problem. The scheme of city planning is also needed, and the city should have control over the areas outside the city for a radius of five miles to prevent the creation of objectionable and unsanitary districts.

THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND

The Duke of Sutherland, who owns nearly the whole county of Sutherland in Scotland, and thousands of acres of land in other parts of Britain, has decided to become a great Canadian landowner. He has secured 12,000 acres of the irrigated lands of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Brooks, Alberta, and intends adding largely to this purchase. It is understood that his intention, as well as that of several other Scottish and English landowners is to secure immense tracts of land in Canada and to bring out Scotch crofters and farmers to settle on these lands and eventually to own them.

KAISER IN BUSINESS

He Takes a Personal Interest in His Decorative Tile Factory.

The German Emperor, in addition to his many sided attributes as Monarch, statesman, soldier, art critic, agriculturist and philosopher, is known to be a keen business man. His Majesty is the owner of a porcelain factory, where some of the finest china and earthenware work is turned out, and which every year shows a profit which fully proves the business capabilities and insight of its proprietor. The Kaiser is never ashamed to influence business in his own direction when the opportunity occurs, and, like a good business man, is always delighted when he pulls off a good deal. Recently a well-known restaurant in Berlin, Kempinskis, when renovating their establishment, decided to make a feature in one apartment of decorative tile work, and placed a very large order for high class tiles with the Imperial factory at Cadinon. The Emperor was so pleased with this stroke of business that he has declared his intention of paying a personal visit to Kempinski's and convincing himself by inspection that his customer has every reason to be satisfied with the goods.

COMMERCE FOR GIRLS

Mlle. Malmanche for Her Work Is Promoted to the Legion of Honor.

Promotions to the Legion of Honor are very rare among women. Attempts have been made by her admirers to obtain the distinction for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, but the name of the great tragedienne is not yet added to the role.

However, in the list of recent promotions figures the name of a woman Mlle. Malmanche, who has been made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in consequence of her successful efforts in organizing commercial education for young girls. Through Mlle. Malmanche's endeavors girls have been able to receive a training which has enabled them to fill positions in banks, business firms and in the public services. DRURY LANE MUSIC HALL

Hereafter in its Rebuilt Form It Will Have a New Name.

Familiar to the passing generation of Londoners as the "Old Mo," the Drury Lane music hall, widely known as the Middlesex, has just been reopened. During the summer the house was rebuilt, and the New Middlesex Empire as it will be called accommodates an audience of 3,000 with comfort, and will stage productions of nearly every kind. Extending 155 ft. one way and 115 ft. another, the new "Old Mo" has a larger frontage than any theatre in London. The auditorium has been built without columns on the Axel cantilever principle, and the features of the house will be saloons on each tier, bars, and a tea room.

THE DOWAGER DUCHESS D'UZES

Leader of the Parisian world of fashion, who is in danger of losing her prestige through her recent entry into "trade." The Dowager Duchess did not commit any crime so plebian as opening a shop, but she did permit herself to be quoted in a catalogue issued by her milliner, and the beau monde have not yet decided whether to take the matter as a joke or to censure the woman whose daring social fêtes have won her a proud position in European society.

FOR CLEAN MEAT

Decrease in Sales Said to be Due to Insanitary Handling

Constant criticism in the press is impressing the men in charge of the London slaughter houses and meat markets and as there has been a considerable and growing decrease in the sale of meat, meetings are to be held to consider what may be done to provide the people of London with cleaner and more wholesome meat. The first actual improvement it to be introduced at one of the great London docks where an automatic apparatus is being constructed for the conveyance of frozen quarters of beef direct from the refrigerating rooms on shipboard to the vans without any intermediate handling. The apparatus, which is the first of its kind in Britain, is really a kind of overhead cable road, a chain driven by electricity pulling small trucks or carriers along the rails to the vans. The only handling necessary therefore, is the hooking of meat on the carriers and the unhooking of the meat to place it in the vans. The ship comes along side the quay beside the shed, the meat is hoisted out of the hold and hooked on the carriers which then run it into the shed. There by a system it is directed along the runways to the waiting vans or to the cold storage rooms. Under the old system the beef is unhooked by hand, placed in slings transferred from the slings to handtrucks on the exposed quay in rain, dust or sun and then again removed to the vans of railroad trucks and sent either into the country or to Smithfield market. Under the new system much work will be obviated, and a considerable part of the handling rendered unnecessary. The carrier is designed to seat with 8 000 quarters of beef every [illegible]

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

Information Showing the Progress on the New Transcontinental Line

It is interesting to note the progress that is being made by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The following particulars regarding this great transcontinental railway are of interest. The lines at present in operation are as follows: Fort William, northwest via Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Edson, to Fitzhugh, 1,472 miles; Prince Rupert to Copper River, 100 miles; Canora via Yorkton and Melville to Regina, 151 miles; Tofield, Alta., to Mirror, 70 miles.

There is also a total mileage of about 900 on other sections of the Eastern Division which is in partial operation by construction trains. The following lines are under construction: Fitzhugh, Alta., to Copper River, B.C., 618 miles; Regina, Sask., via Moose Jaw northeast, 93 miles; Regina, Sask., to International boundary, 90 miles; Young to Prince Albert, Sask., 120 miles; Oban to Battleford, Sask., 50 miles; Mirror, Alta., to Calgary, 124 miles; Biggar, Sask., southwest, 50 miles; Alberta Coal Branch, 60 miles.

A prominent New York gentleman who has made a sojourn in Canada at the Laurentian Club, Lac-la-Peche, in a letter addressed to Grand Trunk headquarters, says: "I have been over the new Transcontinental line as far as Parent, five miles from the end of steel, and thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity of seeing this portion of your line. It is the same high standard of construction through a difficult country most of the time affording the expected comfort of travel even now. The whole territory is studded with fine lakes and rivers, and will surely open up like this at the Laurentian Club."

HON. GEORGE P. GRAHAM

A Clear and Ready Speaker and an Indefatigable Worker

Here and there, scattered through the history of the graphic arts, we have tales of the country boy who came in, got a place as printer's devil, and finally became owner and editor and a power in the community. The histories of the country boys who came in and got jobs and did not become owners and editors are rarely referred to. But the cases where the country boy started out as a genuine owner are rarer still. Yet this is the story of Hon. G. P. Graham. When his father bought the paper he made only a small payment on the plant, but under the energetic guidance of the youthful proprietor things began to move, and in a few years the debt was cleared off and the property greatly improved. As the paper grew in wealth and circulation its proprietor naturally grew likewise, in influence throughout the district, and soon we find him Reeve of Morrisburg in the county of Dundee. A hard, energetic worker, Graham applied himself so closely to his work, both public and private, that his health became undermined, and he was forced to take a rest. So after being in the publishing business 10 years he sold his paper, but not long afterwards was writing ten-ton editorials for an Ottawa publication.

There wasn't anything in that, that Graham could see, however, and he accepted a position from Mr. Thomas Southworth, now colonization agent for the province of Ontario, on the Brockville Recorder. This was in the early nineties. In 1895, when Mr. Southworth retired from the newspaper world altogether to accept a Government position, Mr. Graham took over entire charge of the paper.

On the platform, while not eloquent, Mr. Graham is a clear and ready speaker, and is regarded as one of the best "stumpers" of his party. His grasp of detail is one of his strongest points. He can present the most abstruse problem in a businesslike and clear-cut manner, and is always listened to attentively. His arguments are concise. He does not travel all over the map to reach a climax, nail an argument, or drive home a truth. He is an indefatigable worker.

PROGRESS AT PRINCE RUPERT

The Pacific City Has Big Municipal Improvements Under Way

Work is being rushed on the water works system at Prince Rupert, the cost of which is estimated at $550,000, $100,000 of which will be spent during 1911. The city is also spending the sum of $500,000 on the sewage system, and $500,000 on rock cutting and the grading of the streets. Last year $100,000 was spent on the water works system, $50,000 on the sewerage system, $500,000 on grading, and $100,000 on plank roads and walks.

TRAINING TREMBLAY

A Short Story.

With a last approving smile Timothy Tremblay stalked from the room. Molly Hastings looked up from her work.

"What a singularly intrusive person," she said, mildly. "Do you always let him come around and bother you like that?"

To a woman the Auxiliary gasped. "That was Timothy Tremblay," explained Miss Sexton, as though further comment was unnecessary.

"I know that," admitted Molly. "He came up to me after church last Sunday and insisted that I stay and meet the minister, though I explained that I had already met Mr. Cowan, and that I was in a hurry to get home."

"But you did wait," pursued Miss Sexton gently.

"Of course not," said Molly. "I was in a hurry. Is he always as busy as that?"

The Auxiliary gasped. Ever since they could remember Tremblay had run things in Chestertown. Sometimes they had secretly chafed at his ways, but he had never been called "bossy" before.

"Mr Tremblay is a splendid manager," put in Miss Sexton softly. "Of course we are very glad to have his advice."

"I'm not," said Molly rebelliously. "You people may stand for it if you want to, but he will not order me about."

The Auxiliary regarded Molly admiringly. The Hastings tennis had just come to Chestertown, where the First National Bank, of which Mr Hastings was cashier, was a branch of one of the city banks. Molly had dropped naturally into the life of the little town in the week she had been there. She was already a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary and had promised to sing in the choir next Sunday. Already, too, she had discovered the objectionableness of Mr Tremblay, and the incident of the afternoon showed her how completely he controlled the affairs of the church.

A single-handed revolution was a rather daring move, but she determined upon it, and when Molly set her heart on anything it usually came to pass.

The first blow was struck at the meeting of the Auxiliary the following week. Molly came to Miss Sexton's early. Tremblay was there before her, making suggestions, ordering people about and otherwise making a nuisance of himself. Molly waited in patience until the meeting had been called to order, and the women had slipped on their aprons and took up their sewing. Mr. Tremblay was finding fault with the design of the cloth used for the aprons on which they were sewing. Miss Sexton, flushed and troubled, welcomed the interruption when Molly slipped up to him with an apron and a sewing basket.

"My dear young lady, I thought you had been seated," he cried. "Let me find a place for you."

"I have a place, thank you." Molly's voice was cold and clear. "I offer you the apron."

"But, my dear child, I have no use for it," he explained, backing away.

"This is a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary," pursued Molly. "We are making up the aprons to be sold for the benefit of the organ fund. If you are not—" Molly looked meaningly at the door, and yet her manner could not possibly be termed rude. Tremblay backed further away.

"I shall see you later, Sister Sexton," he mumbled. "I have to get down town now. Just dropped into see that everything is all right."

He was gone before anyone quite realized what had happened. Molly quietly resumed her seat.

"Mr Tremblay has nothing to do with the auxiliary," she explained, "and he had no business to come here and find fault."

"We should be very grateful to Brother Tremblay for his advice," protested Miss Sexton weakly.

"I'm not," said Molly, rebelliously. "He was not giving us advice, he was finding fault. I'm sure I think this pattern is very pretty."

"But, you see, he's going to sell them in his store for us," explained Mrs. Bascom.

"I can sell them in the city to better advantage," Molly said quietly. "My uncle will give us three cents apiece more than Mr Tremblay offers, and he will pay cash."

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD

Was In Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not cured in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma or some other serious throat or lung trouble.

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtue of Norway Pine tree, which is combined with other absorbent expectorant and soothing medicines, making it without a doubt, the best remedy for all colds and coughs.

Miss N. McCamber, St. Marys, N.B. writes:—In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken two bottles I was completely cured. I can now feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy.

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark—price 25 cents.

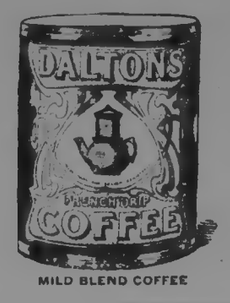
Why Don't You Drink Coffee?

Is it because ordinary Coffee does not agree with you?
Or because you can't stand the taste of boiled Coffee?
Or because you find ordinary Coffee too expensive?

Order 2 tins of Dalton's French Drip Coffee at 50c. a tin and your grocer will send you, FREE, this French Drip Coffee Pot worth $1.30

A cup of Dalton's French Drip Coffee—made in a Dalton French Drip Coffee Pot—is the most appetizing, wholesome, delicious beverage in the world. This is because Dalton's Coffee is so different.



MILD BLEND COFFEE

Instead of roasting Coffee in a cylinder, over a slow fire (which drives out much of the flavor) we throw the Coffee through an intensely hot flame, which roasts it so quickly that the volatile oils and rich flavor are held captive in the berry. A strong air-blast cools the freshly roasted Coffee and also blows away any dust, or chaff. The Coffee is then ground and another air-blast drives off the inner coat or shell of the berry. It is the inner coat—tough, indigestible and laden with Tannic Acid—that makes ordinary Coffee bitter and gives you headaches and indigestion when you drink it.

STRONG BLEND COFFEE

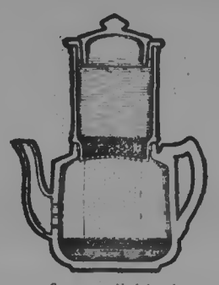
Dalton's French Drip Coffee is free of tannin and tough fibre. This is why you can drink Dalton's French Drip Coffee for every meal, every day, and be all the better for it.

It gives you all the good of the Coffee—the fragrance, satisfaction, deliciousness of the finest Coffee in the world. It will agree with you, even though you cannot drink ordinary Coffee.

If you enjoy the flavor of a rich cup of Coffee—if you would drink it in preference to any other beverage if it agreed with you—just try this new and better Coffee—

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE



Boiling drives off the aroma and increases the bitterness of ordinary Coffee.

The only way to make good, wholesome Coffee is to use Dalton's French Drip Coffee in a Dalton French Drip Coffee Pot or Percolator. Ordinary Percolators are very expensive, and are apt to get out of order. We have secured sole rights for a reliable inexpensive French Drip Coffee Pot. Coffee made in Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot is readily distinguished by its delicious aroma and the absence of bitter taste, and by the enjoyment with which people drink it who cannot drink ordinary Coffee made in the ordinary way.

These Coffee Pots would retail ordinarily at $1.30. In order, however, that you can make in your own home Dalton's French Drip Coffee as it should be made, we have arranged with your grocer to give you, absolutely free of charge, a Dalton French Drip Coffee Pot with your first purchase of Dalton's MILD Blend and STRONG Blend Coffee (a tin of each) at 50c. a tin.

You can't tell, until you try them, which of these Coffees you will prefer. We want you to get them both so you will be sure. The MILD Blend as its name implies, is a soft, delicately flavored Coffee of exquisite aroma—the STRONG Blend, is a rich, full-bodied Coffee, particularly pleasing to those who enjoy cafe noir.

To let you enjoy real Coffee, made as Coffee should be made—to give you the kind of Coffee you prefer—and to give you the means of making this Coffee promptly—we make this special offer—

This Dalton French Drip Coffee Pot—worth $1.30 ABSOLUTELY FREE with your first order of one tin each of Dalton's MILD Blend and STRONG Blend French Drip Coffee at 50c. a tin.

THE ECONOMY OF IT

Dalton's French Drip Coffee at 50c. a tin is really the cheapest good Coffee that money can buy. Careful tests show that TWO pounds of Dalton's will last as long as THREE pounds of ordinary Coffee when used as directed below.

It is economical because all the flavor is retained by our special processes of roasting and grinding—but more especially because it is ALL Coffee. No Chicory. No tough, indigestible fibre—no tannin, no bitterness.

Special Introductory Offer

We feel so sure that you will find either Dalton's Mild Blend or Strong Blend French Drip Coffee just the Coffee which you have been looking for, that we have authorized your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.30) absolutely Free with your first purchase of a tin each of Mild and Strong Blend. You buy two 50c. tins of our Coffee one of each blend to give it a fair trial and we give you the means of testing it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

CONNAUGHT IN TORONTO.

Ontario's Capital Gives Governor-General a Great Welcome.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Between ranks of flag waving, cheering humanity His Royal Highness the Duke and Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught triumphantly entered and peacefully captured this city yesterday. In the neighborhood of 150,000 people lined the two-mile route of march from the North Toronto C P R station to the City Hall. The special train containing the Governor-General, cars, the Cornwall and York, came to a standstill at the station at three minutes to three, and by four the welcome ceremony of welcome was over.

Rarely if ever has such a welcome been given by Toronto in the piping times of peace. It was indeed one of the biggest, if not probably the biggest reception ever tendered by Toronto when war-time excitement was not in evidence.

The outstanding feature of the welcome was the vast number of children, the coming citizens, who lined the street. It is estimated that 35,000 children were in the crowd. It was the children who provided most of the enthusiasm. They cheered themselves hoarse while the older and more dignified inhabitants of the city watched the proceedings deferentially, largely confining their demonstrations to lifting their hats when the duke passed.

The nearest thing to a calamity was when Mayor Geary stepped backward a little too far after presenting the address of welcome from the city to the duke and went over the edge of the platform. Had it not been for a clerically-attired gentleman standing beside the platform, who caught him, he would probably have fallen on his back. As it was, he landed on the lower level on his feet.

On reaching the City Hall all got out, walked up the steps, where Mayor Geary read the address of welcome, and the duke replied. Then the duke and duchess rode to Government House. A guard of honor of 150 men from the Grenadiers was lined up in front of the City Hall.

Rioting In Lisbon.

Lisbon, Nov. 28.—The disorders which occurred Sunday night owing to the expulsion of the Chinese women for the alleged exercise of a "cure" for blindness, at one time attained serious proportions. All the streets in the centre of the city were occupied by the cavalry, who charged continuously.

The populace, which was armed, offered a firm resistance to the troops and shots were freely exchanged. Suddenly a great explosion was heard on the Plaza Dom Pedro. The cavalry galloped up, unslinging their carbines and poured volley after volley through the windows of a cafe in which a great crowd had taken refuge and barricaded themselves with chairs, divans and other furniture.

The mob answered the attack of the troops until all the large panes of glass were riddled with bullets. Then they surrendered. Two persons were found killed and a large number wounded on the floor of the cafe.

Radial Cars Stop.

Welland, Nov. 28.—There are no new developments in dispute between Thorold and the Niagara, St Catharines and Toronto Electric Railway. The electric franchise expired yesterday, and the company, but wishing to accede to the demands of the municipality of Thorold for $1,000 yearly rental, and a five cent fare between Thorold and St Catharines, have ceased running their cars over the line. The cars are still down, and it is expected that a settlement between the municipality and the electric road will be reached shortly.

Thorold citizens are still able to visit St Catharines on the main line on the electric cars, which operates on a private right of way.

Troops to Quell Strikers.

Denver, Col., Nov. 28.—Labor troubles in the coal camps of northern Colorado, where a strike has been in progress for some time, have reached a stage where the advisability of calling troops is being considered, according to news received here yesterday.

At Louisville, Col., the situation is regarded as particularly critical. The mines there are owned by a Wyoming corporation. President Brown of the company said that unless conditions improved within the next two days he would ask for protection of federal troops.

Degree of Duke Deferred.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—The Duke of Connaught has been offered and will accept the honorary degree of LL.D. Queen's University, College wishes to confer the degree on the duke on the occasion of the duke's visit here Saturday, but owing to the fact that he will only be here three hours to visit the Royal Military College, the degree will be conferred at the spring convocation.

Two hundred people will come from Belleville Thursday morning to attend the consecration ceremony of Archbishop-elect Spratt.

Berlin May Buy Railway.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—At a meeting last night of the Berlin Light Commission a proposition to purchase the Berlin-Bridgeport Street Railway was considered. President Breithaupt made an offer to sell the road for $44,000. This will be considered further.

Steamer Ran Aground.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—The steamer Reindeer of Napanee, a small passenger steamer running on the Napanee River, ran into a mud bank and tore a large hole in her bottom. The passengers were taken off. The vessel is one of the oldest in this district and will be abandoned.

Nathan R. Bugg Arrested.

Berlin, Ont., Nov. 28.—Nathan R. Bugg, one of the promoters of the Peoples Railway, was arrested yesterday on a warrant from Owen Sound charging him with misappropriation of funds. He will be taken to Owen Sound today.

Modified the Decision.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 28.—The Supreme Court yesterday modified the decision in the International Harvester muster case, reducing the fine from $50,000 to $25,000. Judges Graves and Woodson dissented.

RELIEF FROM TAXATION ON IMPROVEMENTS NEEDED

Municipalities Should be Given This Power Contends Mr. Hall at Good Meeting at Lakehurst---Mr. Stratton Shows Where the Whitney Government Has Broken Its Pledges.

A largely attended meeting was held in the hall at Lakehurst on Monday evening. The electors of the locality turned out in large numbers.

Mr. Wilson, who occupied the chair, generally referred to the questions that were engaging attention at the present time. He regretted the result of the pervious election. He thought the farmers had missed their chance, which might not return in a long time. In introducing Mr. Hall, Mr. Wilson referred to the excellent work done by Mr. Hall when he was a member of the House of Commons. West Peterborough, he thought, could not do better than elect him to the Local Legislature. A good man could be useful, no matter on which side of the house he might have a seat, and if the government was honest, no matter from which side an appeal came in the public interests, it would be respected.

Mr. Hall on rising, referred to the pleasant time that he and the electors had when he was a member of the House of Commons, and the hearty way in which they cooperated together for the advantage of the township and the riding. The important works that have been erected in Harvey were there to speak for themselves, and the fact that after four years of service there were no complaints that anything had been neglected, showed the satisfactory manner in which he (Mr. Hall) had attended to all their wants. Harvey was what might be called one of the pioneer townships. It was a township with varying qualities of land, and special attention could be given to the specialties of the township if a member took the time and occasion to do so.

For instance, Mr. Hall said, a demonstrator should be located in Peterborough, who has a thorough knowledge, obtained at the Agricultural College, and practical experience as well. Demonstrating farms should be established in every township, so that the farmers would be able to take advantage of successful experiments that they saw made, and could profit from such successful experiments.

Every municipality should have the opportunity of relieving from taxation, improvements that are made upon the land. If a farmer builds a new barn, around come the assessor, up goes his assessment, and up go his taxes. If he paints his house, around comes the assessor and up go his taxes. If he builds a new verandah or the adds a kitchen, around comes the assessor, up goes his assessment and up go his taxes. The man who hoards his money in the bank or lends it out at a high rate of interest, owning nothing about the appearance of his premises, or himself, perhaps escapes taxation scot free, while the man who improves, beautifies, and gives employment, pay for it three or the more by having his taxes raised.

Sir James Whitney opposes, and Mr. Hall, any amendment to the existing law, while the Liberal party are pledged to amend the law and make the Assessment Act more equitable, giving municipalities an opportunity of assessing their lands as they deem best themselves.

Mr. Hall referred to the Workmen's Compensation Act, and its conditions under which men are forced to work in manufacturing establishments, and pointed out how while these matters did not affect them directly still he knew they desired to see conditions improved for the sake of humanity's sake generally. Mr. Hall then went into an explanation of the proposed Act and received much sympathetic applause at his address.

Mr. Hall showed how the Education department had mismanaged the affairs of the province from an economical standpoint and showed the overlapping of the schools. Harvey and Galway. That in one school house Harvey there was no teacher and they could not obtain one, and in addition to that many schools in the county cannot obtain pupils to necessary salary to secure a qualified teacher. In fact, in large portions of the province an elementary education is nothing obtainable to-day.

[illegible] with the legislature when Mr. Hall [illegible] Sir James Whitney, Hon. [illegible] Hon. Mr. Foy, Hon. Mr. [illegible] the only [illegible] Minister of Lands, and Hon. [illegible] and Mr. [illegible] Mr. Hall [illegible]

[illegible] increasing necessity of assisting those afflicted in our hospitals and other public institutions, and also that greater assistance should be given to the sick, the mentally deranged and those suffering from tuberculosis.

Mr. Hall believed that he could be of considerable assistance in the Legislature from a public standpoint, in probing into the doings of the government. The government has had an overwhelming majority of seventy, they have been able to ride rough shod over their friends and supporters alike; there has been no proper investigation into the public accounts; and what is really needed is to have a thorough investigation into the general and increasing expenditures that have been made by the government. The government are spending eight millions a year, are increasing the debt of the province at the rate of two millions a year. It is important for the people to know whether or not that money is being properly expended, or extravagantly used, to advance the interests of the Conservative party.

This province also owns hundreds of millions of forests, mines and lands. It is important to know, whether or not, the best price is being obtained for this property. The only way to tell is to have a live opposition to investigate and to expose wrong doing wherever it exists.

After dealing with the efforts of the Conservative party of West Peterborough to draw a red herring across the trail in the Hydro-Electric proposition, which is a farce upon the face of it, Mr. Hall concluded an able speech, which was heartily applauded.

In introducing Mr. Stratton, the chairman said he required little introduction, as he knew everybody, and everybody knew him.

Mr. Stratton, after a brief reference to the recent campaign, and the result, which had been so disappointing in many quarters, said he had accompanied his friend Mr Hall, to show his interest in, and sympathy with, his candidature, there, to give an address. As Mr Hall had fully dealt with his platform, the general condition of inefficient and extravagant administration that marked the record of the government, he would deal with two or three of the broken promises of Sir James Whitney. He promised that there would be no more land grants, yet, with one sweep of the pen, he gives away two million acres of the best available land in Ontario, in the clay belt of New Ontario. The great estate thus given away to the railway, was equal to a strip six miles wide from Montreal to Toronto, some 350 miles. It was the most vicious sort of grant, too. The land was given to the railway in alternate blocks, and could be ill-used, no more cared for in value by the improvements made by the hard working settler, than by the land railway baron in every other part of the province. Sir James promised law reforms by which suits could be tried without expensive procedure and without appeal after appeal. He has done nothing, after seven years opportunity. He promised [illegible] grants for roads, but as a matter of fact, the additional grants did not come. West Peterborough's way, and what did come, was spent—they know it, better than he, the [illegible] Sir James Whitney promised better returns from [illegible] but, what a [illegible] to the county of Peterborough. He promised to remove the [illegible] administration from politics. With what results. We [illegible] heard in West Peterborough, but perhaps couldn't see a card beyond party interests. Yet many could supply information for investigation that would startle the community. He professed to be grateful for Liberal support, and promised [illegible] Yet in less than a half months after an election, [illegible] were all [illegible] promises to reform [illegible] law, by nothing has been done to [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] existing [illegible] the [illegible] He promised [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

DEATH TO THE LABOUR CANDIDATE.

There is little ground for surprise that Sir James Whitney is opposed to or, at the best, indifferent to the claims of labour upon him and his government. It's in the blood. He sub-tracked the urgent demand of the labour organizations representing the working men and the working men's interests of the province.

For years the Workmen's Compensation Act has been a mockery as far as it is permitted, of justice to the working man and his family. Sir James Whitney, premier, had the advanced British act as a model upon which to form improvements of the Act. But instead of acting, he referred the matter to a commissioner, Sir William Meredith, who, no matter how great a jurist he is, is still the man of judicial mind, affected no doubt by his training and habit of political thought. He is a "Tory" by training and instinct, and is by habit opposed to new departures and is, insensibly perhaps, partial to the privileged classes.

Apart from this, the expedient of referring to a commission a pressing matter, which needs no deep legal knowledge, but a simple desire to do the fair thing, is merely delaying, shelving, the matter for a long time, as it has been shelved the past seven years.

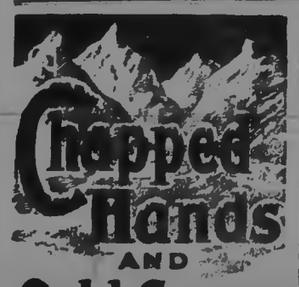
When we have this attitude of Sir James Whitney and his government towards labour and labour interests, it is not surprising that the word has gone out from the Conservative headquarters that Mr. Alan Studholme, the labour candidate in East Hamilton, is to be crushed. The Hamilton Spectator, of November, gives local voice to this appeal. It says:

Remember, every Conservative vote is needed to overthrow the conspiracy of the Liberals and Studholmites in East Hamilton, to overthrow the government candidate. Register at once!

What is Mr Studholme's crime that he is to be made the object of a direct and deadly attack from the party of the Whitney government? With a straight party majority of 70 in a house of less than a hundred members, certainly there is no great danger to the government from having in the Legislature one solitary representative of the Labour interests.

Mr. Studholme is guilty in the eyes of the Whitney government on three counts. He is independent, he will not fall down and worship and slavishly follow the head of the autocracy in Queen's park. Then he is a labour man, the representative of labour, the only direct one, in the House. He must be kept down. Labour must be kept in its place. It shall have nobody to speak officially and directly for it in the Legislature. Mr Studholme's presence in the House with his sturdy independence with his fearless advocacy of the rights of labour, makes the battle in favour of the privileged classes so much harder. Allan Studholme, of Studholmism, must be destroyed. Therefore, register at once! Register!

Mr Studholme's crime in addition is that he keeps bad company. He associates with the Labour men of the city, especially and [illegible] the labour men [illegible] the labour [illegible] the labour [illegible] the labour



Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Vellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring worm, cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. 50 all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

ED. DILLON NEW TRAINER OF THE HOCKEY CLUB

Was Appointed at a Meeting of the Executive Last Night---Training to Start at Once.

GROUPING DISCUSSED

[illegible] meeting [illegible] Executive [illegible] was decided that the teams will [illegible] training at once, in order that they may be in the best of physical condition when the ice comes. An effort will be made to make arrangements with the Y. M. C. A., by which the Intermediate and Junior players will be given a course of training for the next three weeks, in addition to what they may get at the rinks. When the time comes to select the [illegible] players will be picked or thin out for this preliminary training, of which a definite announcement will be made in a few days. Messrs. McGrath and Boyd were appointed as a committee to wait upon the Y.M.C.A. officials with a view to make the necessary arrangements.

The question of what grouping the different clubs would prefer was discussed, and it was decided that Peterboro, Brad Cleary in the intermediate and junior series, and that Bradburn, Lindsay and Cobourg come in both cases.

Messrs. Pearce and Grover were appointed a committee to get information as to the cost of rinks and caretakers, and report at the next meeting. The rink colors will be blue and white, as usual.

There will be another meeting of the Executive on Thursday night, at 8 o'clock, to hear reports from the different committees appointed last night.

WILL PETERBORO' CHRISTIANS FAIL?

To Raise the Usual Amount for the Deep Sea Mission You Must Act Promptly---No Ball in This Interest This Year ---Leave Your Subscription With the Examiner.

The well-known author, Norman Duncan writes this in his "Dr. Grenfell's Parish:"

Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell is the young Englishman who, for the love of God, practises medicine on the Coast of Newfoundland and Labrador. His profession round, quite out of the common, is two thousand miles of bitterly inhospitable coast, the Labrador and Newfoundland Coast. The folk are for the most part, insolated and desperately wretched, the shore fishermen of the remote Newfoundland coasts, the Labrador "liveyeres," the Indians of the forbidding interior, the Esquimaux of the far north. It is to such as these that the man gives devoted and heroic service—not for gain; there is no gain to be got in these impoverished places; merely for the love of God.

All the time, in storm and sunshine, summer and winter weather, Grenfell of the Deep Sea Mission goes about doing good. If it's not in a boat, it's in a dog sled. He is what he likes to call "a Christian man." But he is also a hero—at once the bravest and most beneficiently useful man I know. If he regrets his isolation, if the hardships of the life sometimes oppresses him, no man knows it. He does much, but there is much more to do. If the good people of the world would give a little more of what they have so abundantly—and if they could but know the need, they would surely do that—joy might be multiplied on that coast; nor would any man be wronged by misguided charity.

"What a man does for the love of God," the doctor once said, "he does differently."

Send it in at once.

SUCCESSFUL EXHIBIT OF WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

Hurrah for the suffragettes! The Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada have practically ordered and strengthened the motto of women's enfranchisement, and demonstrated her capability, if not her right, to take part in the management of the country's affairs—to vote—and so on up to that if there is any record of such for the winning sex. There should be no longer a doubt as to the ability of women for affairs, when a body of local ladies can organize and place before the public a magnificent loan exhibit of pictures, arts and crafts such as that to be seen today, and for every day of this week till Friday, inclusive, in the picture hall of the Public Library.

Last night was private view night, and the large number of ladies and gentlemen, particularly interested in art, who passed in review the results of a week's labor of water colours and other work in the picture room. This apartment looks the way excellently as a place for such an exhibition. It is a splendid space for the display of pictures, and exceeds the expectations of their satisfactory inspection and study. When the better light is not equal to day light the hall, last night, was very satisfactory in detail.

Though the artist represented is not very large, the number of subjects shown was very fine.

In water colours there was a large and interesting array of signatures, including Elizabeth Armstrong, who, we think, is for the first time in Canada or Peterborough, represented by the work of the art exhibition in Toronto.

Mr. H. Ernest Warring, of England, whose work has a wide vogue in the old land, and whose pictures are conspicuous at art exhibits across the water. Largely through the efforts of Mrs. (Dr.) Frederick, who, by the way, is a cousin of the distinguished artist, about forty of Mr. Warring's water colour work presented for first exhibition in Peterborough, and are now on view at the Public Library hall, and are well worth viewing.

It is impracticable to enter into detail of the pictures shown. It is enough to say that Mr. Warring's works are full of what the art critic calls "quality." His drawing is free and unconventional, but with a touch of [illegible] that is not by any means lost in the [illegible] being Mr. Warring's work. His pictures have a character, the depth and perfection of quality. The reader is not committed to any particular picture as especially deserving of merit. The general quality is so good, with so much to appeal to every taste, that in their great variety there is something sure to please. No one should miss the four days' opportunity presented to see such water colour art in its manifestations.

Miss Marion E. Jack, a Canadian artist, now in London, has three walls to herself. She is a native of New Brunswick, and has studied under Lavrar, the French artist, and other noted art and is represented by a mural decoration from [illegible] Hall. Miss Jack's work is characterized by variety and freedom, and the range of her art includes touching every possible kind of subject and with skillful effect. Several mural panels are well worthy of examination. Among her canvases a pathetic, evidently of a French dress, is a strong piece of genre work design. Miss Jack's collection is interesting both from its intrinsic merit and its large variety of subject and treatment, but especially because it is a revelation of the capabilities of a Canadian born artist.

Here [illegible] in a congenial company. The [illegible] of the hall is occupied by a number of the beautiful work of another Canadian artist, Miss Kath[illegible] Watson, a pupil of Mr. [illegible] with his own. The artist's [illegible] pencil drawings on [illegible] and [illegible] expressive [illegible] marks [illegible] to take our breathing [illegible] for [illegible] artist's [illegible] aquarelles of Warring [illegible] Marion Jack.

NO MORE HESITATION

ALL WHO HAVE NOT yet participated in the feast of Bargains which the hurried disposal of the high class stock of Robert Fair & Co., Limited, has meant to the people of this city and district, can still put the genuineness of the Sale to the test, and find almost as complete a selection as though they were among the first comers.

THE GREAT RETIRING SALE

has meant much to thrifty housekeepers, who have, by taking advantage of the most unusual reductions in prices on everything comprising this immense $65,000 stock of first grade goods, made their money go very much farther than it ever did before, besides making possible the purchase of many coveted articles that, at regular prices, would have been beyond the reach of such numbers of people.

There is a Big Choice yet in Carpets, Rugs, Squares, Linoleums, Curtains, Blankets, Flannelette Sheets, Linens, Dress Goods, Silks, Broadcloth, Ladies' Suits, Coats, Dresses, Waists, Skirts, Corsets, Ladies' and Children's Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Laces, Millinery in trimmed and untrimmed shapes of newest models, etc., etc.

Our Dressmaking Department can quickly make up Dresses, Suits or other garments in latest styles and guarantee satisfaction.

Women's Art Association. The meeting of the Art Exhibit of the Women's Art Association this afternoon will be Mrs Burnett and Mrs W H Hall. To-morrow, Mrs Hall and Mr Sherwood will act. The exhibit opened this afternoon and will be continued on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons and Friday evening.

That's all Right. Two golfers were upon a teeing ground preparing to drive, when a lady walked on to the green and quietly sat down in the direct line. Repeated shouts of "Fore" failing to disturb her the players drove on, and on recovering the lady one of them told her it was very dangerous for her to sit there. "That's all right," she replied, "I'm sitting on my knickerbockers."

Real Economy. "The extravagance," once said a famous preacher, "seems to me as foolish and wrong headed as the schoolboy who refused to play at the lunch interval." As this boy sat with a discontented look on a hard, stiff bench a comrade said: "Why aren't you playing, Jack." Jack frowned contemptuously. "Catch me playing," he said "If I played the time would go too fast."

Apples! Apples. Jame R Bell, Hunter street, has received a large quantity of extra selected hand-picked apples. Good cookers 20c, 25c and 30c per peck. Superior cooking Spies 40c per peck; specially recommended for mince meat. Fine eating Russets, 25c per peck. Tolman Sweets, 25c per peck and several bright red Snows, 35c per peck. View our stock before buying elsewhere. Jame R Bell, 161 Hunter street, 13 Hunter street. Phones 155 and 584.

Was Resentful. A presiding elder, in charge of an old fashioned camp meeting used to blow a horn to the people to assemble for worship. One morning his little six year old son, James, said: "Father, why do you blow that horn?" His father replied "To call the people together to make them good." James, who had been punished by his mother for disobedience, and was resentful, said, "I wish you would blow it at mother!"

Grape-Fruit a Necessity. At this season of the year, to save doctor's bills, best tonic on earth, acts mighty nice. Grape Fruit. Mamak.

Tiring Case. Man is often placed in an embarrassing position, and for the time being would give all he is worth to be out of it. The most heart rending case probably on record is explained by a note which was recently picked up in a rural post office. It read as follows: "Dearest one, the reason I didn't laff when you left us me in the post office yesterday was because I had a bile on my face, and can't laff. If I laff he'll burst. But I love you, bile or no bile, laff or no laff."

Patronize Home Industry. There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship are of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wall cases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade should send in their order as soon as possible, before the rush begins and not leave everything to the last two weeks. W. THEOBALD, manager; Factory, 700 Water St. Telephone 18 and 19. Machine 18.

An Interesting Debate. There will be an interesting debate in the lecture hall of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church on Friday night, between representatives of the Charlotte Street Men's Bible Class and the Y M C A on the subject "Resolved that Women are better as they are without the franchise." In addition there will be a splendid literary and musical programme provided. There is no admission charge, nor will any collection be taken up.

Leader Speaks at North Bay and Sturgeon Falls

NORTH ONTARIO'S NEEDS

North Bay, Nov 29 N W Rowell addressed a largely attended meeting yesterday in Sturgeon Falls and North Bay, afternoon and evening The Liberal leader was given a cordial reception and devoted his remarks principally to the development of New Ontario and bilingual schools.

He advocated placing the T & N. O. Railway on the same basis as other railways, and giving the people living on its line the same rights and remedies as those on any other. It should not be diverted from its primary purpose as a colonizing road He pointed out Ontario's need of a Hudson Bay port, and condemned any settlement of the question of the boundary between Manitoba and Ontario in which this province had not a fair say.

Dr G W Smith, president of the East Nipissing Liberal Association, was chairman.

A short speech was made by Mr Robert Rankin, Liberal candidate in East Nipissing, and Dr Bedard made a vigorous address in French.

He charged the present agitation against bilingual schools to the alleged vacillating policy of the Provincial Government in dealing with educational problems, and declared in favor of all children being able to secure a good English education but against any attempt to deprive French-Canadian children of their mother tongue.

He condemned Dr Pyne's statement that teachers should be confined to those whose mother tongue was English, thus depriving properly qualified teachers of other nationalities from employment.

The securing by Manitoba of the only two good seaports on Hudson Bay through the influence of Hon Robert Rogers at Ottawa was characterized as a specimen of the Rip-Van Winkle sleep of the Ontario Government.

Betrothal to Dead Girl.

Boston, Nov 29 Lines on which the defence may base its case in the coming trial of Rev. C V T Richeson charged with the murder of his one-time sweetheart, Avis W Linnell, are possibly indicated in statements which Dr H O Conner, a former member of the Federal State Prison Commission, says the minister made to him in jail.

Mr Conner is visiting eastern prisons. He quoted the accused minister as saying in substance:

"My engagement to Avis Linnell was broken by mutual consent, owing to the fact that Miss Linnell, who was a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, intended to pursue a professional career. I was in no way to blame for Avis's physical condition and accepted when she made a confession to me as her former pastor and in keeping with sympathy and trust which I found myself unable to express to the matter in which she pursued the course I have recited.

A Tennessee Murder.

Nashville, Tenn, Nov 29 Borrowing a shotgun, James Merritt, son of a wealthy planter, killed Adolph Layne and surrendered to the authorities yesterday. The killing was the outcome of a fight that began several months ago, when Merritt wounded Layne, claiming Layne's attentions to Mrs Merritt were obnoxious.

ATTEMPT AT BRIBERY?

Ex-U. S. Marshal Arrested in the McNamara Case.

Los Angeles, Nov 29 S L Brown, chief of the department of investigation of the district attorney's office, arrested Bert Franklin, an ex-U. S. marshal yesterday on the charge of having attempted to bribe a prospective juror in the McNamara case.

Brown asserted that he caught Franklin attempting to pass $4,000 to G. N. Lockwood, summoned on the twelfth venire, and that the money was now in his possession.

Last night a pleased prosecution and a dumbfounded defence took stock of the day's work of Samuel L. Brown, chief investigator of the state, who arrested three men and stacked District Attorney Frederick's desk high with bank notes taken from the arrested men's pockets in Frederick's presence. Bert H. Franklin, a former deputy U. S. marshal, now employed by the McNamara defence as an investigator, released late yesterday on $10,000 cash bail, is to appear in court day to answer charges of bribery and attempted bribery, sworn to by Brown.

George H. N. Lockwood, an unsummoned venireman, and C. E. White, an alleged stakeholder, both arrested with Franklin, are at liberty, and, according to District Attorney Fredericks, they will appear as witnesses against Franklin.

Five hundred dollars, taken from Lockwood's pockets, is declared by the prosecution to have been the first payment of a sum which he would receive if he should prevent an adverse verdict in the McNamara case, and $3,500 found on White was declared to be the balance to be paid when the jury was discharged.

Rumors of a grand jury investigation to determine where the money came from, flew thick and fast last night. No grand jury is in session, but one may be called. This is not necessary, so far as Franklin is concerned, because his case can be taken care of through an information filed by the district attorney. Investigator Brown said that no more arrests would be made to-day.

There was nothing commonplace about the arrest of Franklin. A former deputy marshal, acquainted with criminal methods and the methods devised to catch criminals through his former employment, was arrested on a street corner in the heart of Los Angeles wholesale quarter in broad daylight, while a detective, disguised as a laborer, stood close enough to hear what was said.

Detective Brown, sheltered by a building, was close enough with his assistants to catch three men before two of them could take their hands out of their pockets, after, it is alleged, they had stuffed the money into them.

So, hands in pockets, the men were marched to the hall of records, where the McNamara trial is staged on the fourth floor. District Attorney Fredericks waited for them on the eleventh floor. Hands in pockets, they entered the office. When the hands came out, Brown declared, the yellow bills clung to their fingers Twenty minutes later, Lockwood, the veniremen, and White, supposed stakeholder, went out of the swing doors free men, hardly enough time having elapsed to allow the dictation and signing of a statement, if this were done. Announcement that they would appear against Franklin, as state witnesses, followed them out

Must Study Greek.

Oxford, Eng, Nov 29. Advocates of the abolition of the study of Greek at Oxford University suffered another reverse yesterday. Their scheme for the general exemption of that course having failed last year, they tried to insert the edge of a wedge by the passing of a statute allowing students of mathematics and natural science to be exempt from studying Greek. At a convocation yesterday the proposal was rejected by a vote of 595 to 360.

MINISTER SCORED

Hon. Mr. Oliver Deals With the Minister's Maiden Speech

TOO MUCH ONTARIO IN IT

Ottawa, Nov. 29. "The Minister of Finance has denied that he is interested in the trusts, mergers, and combines. I am glad he can do so. At the same time he seeks to impose the voice of the province he represents, the province which declared in favor of the rule of the trusts, mergers and combines, on the whole of the rest of this great country of ours. He says he is not of the trusts and combines. If he is not of them they are behind him. The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau."

Amid a storm of Liberal cheering Hon Frank Oliver last night dealt in clear-cut, far-flung western vigor with the maiden speech of Hon. W. T. White, the new Minister of Finance.

He was greeted with prolonged applause from the Government benches when he rose to speak. He began by a reference to the personal reflections cast on him by the members for South Wellington and Welland (Hugh Guthrie and W. M. German). The former had asserted that he was the representative of the trusts, mergers and corporations. The latter had said that he had been forced into office because he had to obey the command of the head of his trust company.

"Now, sir, I desire to express an unequivocal denial of these allegations," declared Mr. White. "No more unjust accusation has ever been hurled across the floor of this House. The hon. gentleman in charge of this Government is not the man to submit to political duress, and I am not the man to accept a position under such circumstances."

With regard to mergers, Mr White emphatically declared that he, for his part, had never had any interest in them.

"Some hon. gentlemen," he said, "are unwilling to admit that reciprocity is dead. They seem to think that it is in a state of suspended animation."

Mr. White then shortly reviewed the economic argument of the Conservatives in the campaign. Farmers and manufacturers and labor men alike realized that they would lose a fine home market for a pact that had no assurance of permanency. "Every business man in Canada breathed freer at the result of the election.

"What about the improved business tone since Sept. 21?" he asked. (Applause.) "What about the judgment of the London market in regard to Canadian securities?" The rejection of the reciprocity pact constituted the greatest advertisement Canada ever received in Great Britain.

The Opposition thought the Government should have brought down a naval policy. "The Government has had no time even to consider the bill of repairs of the Canadian navy, much less to mature and bring down a naval policy." (Laughter and loud applause.)

The naval policy of the Laurier Government was not only unsatisfactory to Quebec, but to Ontario and the other provinces as well. It would prove a source of great expense in years and would be absolutely useless in time of war.

The Prime Minister proposed to consult the British Admiralty and then the whole question would be dealt with and the result would have the confidence of the people both of Canada and Great Britain. In conclusion Mr. White deprecated the attacks on the personnel of the Ministry, declaring that nothing but the best men should be promoted.

Hon. Frank Oliver maintained that Mr. White mistook Ontario for the Dominion. He had not the proper view of the scope and responsibility of his position.

"With regard to trusts, mergers and combines, if he is not of them, they are behind him. The voice may not be the voice of Jacob, but the hand behind is the hand of Esau," he said.

Mr. Oliver declared that the demand for reduction of tariff taxation was never more alive than at this moment, and would win out eventually.

Reciprocity, however, as a mutual agreement with the Republican party, was dead, as they would not extend the chance for another forty years. If reciprocity had been submitted to the people of the United States the same tactics that defeated it in Canada would have secured its defeat then.

There was the most gigantic aggregation of capitalistic influence brought together that this world ever saw (cheers from both sides) to win the fight for the trusts, mergers and combines.

When Mr Oliver suggested that the West had not gone against reciprocity because the means were not applied there, an Opposition member insinuatingly suggested "them dead inspectors." The ex-Minister quoted largely from the Toronto World as samples of economic arguments, which he brushed aside as childish.

The financial oligarchy of Toronto and Montreal held this country in a slavery more merciless than that of the trusts, mergers and combines of the United States, he declared.

REBELS LOSE GROUND.

Imperialists Win Engagements In Hupeh Province.

Pekin, Nov 29 Hanyang has been occupied by the Imperial forces, which crossed the Han River 20 miles above that place. Wuchang has made a provisional capitulation. It is evident the Imperialists are getting a strong hand in that part of Hupeh Province, where a few weeks ago the rebels seemed to have supreme control.

There is no news of Li Yuen Heng the revolutionary commander, and it is not known whether he led the defence of Hanyang or directed it from Wuchang. It is not believed that the rebels will surrender, as they fear slaughter, but will prefer to take chances in flight in the open country. The rebels Monday endeavored to obtain the terms offered by Yuan Shi Kai three weeks ago, but it is reliably reported that Lieut.-Gen. Feng Kwo Chang, commander of the Imperial troops at Hankow, has refused.

The foreign settlements suffered heavily. A Hankow consular report says it was a foregone conclusion that the Imperialists would win if they attacked seriously, because of their superior organization. During the attack every position the rebels claimed was heavily shelled. The Imperialists numbered probably 80,000 modern drilled men. The rebels were for the most part volunteers, perhaps equal in number to the Imperial forces.

Two days ago the Premier, Yuan Shi Kai's, position seemed hopeless. He was deserted by former followers on whose help he counted. Both Chinese and foreign residents in Pekin believed that the dynasty was on the verge of abdicating. Friends urged the Premier to capitulate. Soldiers, fearing his assassination, endeavored to persuade him to take refuge in the foreign concessions at Tien Tsin.

Killed Five Others and Himself.

New York, Nov 30 Ignoppia Fonpas, an Italian steamship worker killed his wife, his mother-in-law, sister and his two children, then shot himself to death in the rooms he had taken at Lodi, N J, a small town near Hackensack yesterday afternoon.

The murderer had quarrelled with his family and had been away for a week. He returned yesterday afternoon and went to the room where [illegible] customers were entertained, after locking the six doors. The bodies of the five were found on the floor, all shot through the head. A revolver and empty cartridge shells were found lying by beside the bodies.

SEA LORDS DISCHARGED

Winston Churchill Clears Up the Admiralty Office

DENIES FRICTION STORIES

London, Nov. 29—Important changes in the Admiralty are announced. Admiral Sir Francis Charles Bridgeman, commander-in-chief of the home fleet, is appointed First Sea Lord replacing Admiral of the Fleet Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg becomes second Sea Lord, replacing Vice-Admiral Sir George LeClerc Egerton. Captain Wm C. Pakenham, commander of the battleship Collingwood, becomes third Sea Lord, replacing Rear Admiral Charles Edward Madden.

Admiral Wilson has been offered a peerage, but declined, while the command of some important home port will be given to Vice-Admiral Egerton, on the first vacancy.

The changes in the Admiralty came as a surprise to the public and are evidently the outcome of Winston Spencer Churchill's transference to the Admiralty. Questioned in the House of Commons last night Mr. Churchill denied that the changes implied any reflection on the outgoing sea lords, who, he pointed out, were due to retire early in 1912. He explained that important decisions must soon be taken regulating the naval policy for the coming two years. The Government, therefore, considered it advisable to make the changes now. These, he said, were necessary to unify the Admiralty Board and would lead to more effective work and administrative efficiency.

WANT GOOD RELATIONS.

English Have No Quarrel With Germany, Says Morley.

London, Nov 29.—The House of Lords last night discussed Anglo-German affairs, without arriving at any fresh revelations. Lord Courtney, Liberal, attacked the Government and Lord Morley of Blackburn, and Lord Lansdowne defended it.

Lord Courtney desired to know why Great Britain could not come to an arrangement with Germany as she did with France, Russia and the United States. He declared that Chancellor Lloyd-George had made an outburst of which no Englishman could be proud, that it naturally promoted ill-feeling in Germany and brought the country into real peril of war.

Viscount Morley said that the entente of 1904 was an agreement that Great Britain should have a free hand in Egypt, and France a free hand in Morocco. Great Britain had had her share of the profits, and it would be intolerable if they refused France hers.

"The whole nation," continued Lord Morley, immensely desire friendship with Germany. There is no reason why the German naval program should diminish the desire, but we must consider all the circumstances."

He declared that Sir Edward Grey had said everything possible to encourage better feeling. No Cabinet ever met with more intent of not drifting into a single unnecessary antagonism.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition, said that the entente would remain a dominant factor in Great Britain's foreign policy.

Once To Be Enough.

Berlin, Nov 29. Dr H G. Lackner, for the past twelve years North Waterloo's representative in the local Legislature, will at the next session of the House, offer an amendment to the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act which will enable a young man once registered as a manhood suffrage voter to remain permanently in the voters' list so long as he remains a resident of the town or city. This would be, it is claimed, a great saving of time and money to many electors. Manhood suffrage voters could be put on part three of the voters' list and the tax collector would have an easier time collecting the poll tax.

Every village, town or city where poll tax is collected would always have its list prepared and disfranchisement would be a rare occurrence.

This amendment would also privilege any municipality to extend the franchise to the qualified voters of part three to vote at municipal elections.

Liquor In Railway Camp.

Brockville, Nov 29—The police magistrate's court in Brockville yesterday dealt with several alleged violations of the liquor law at Portland, in the local option County of Leeds.

Portland is the centre of construction for the C.N.R.'s new main line, and Hart and Stewart, contractors, rent a small house, where a gang of Italian navvies sold liquor. The firm were held liable and the magistrate imposed a fine of $200 and costs. The defendants will appeal.

Robert Scott, county constable, was fined $100 and costs on a similar charge and seven young men contributed $20 and costs each for being purchasers from Scott. Over $500 was collected in fines, and other cases are pending.

Clouston to Retire.

Montreal, Nov 29 It is understood that at the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal next week, Sir Edward Clouston will ask to be relieved of the general managership, owing to ill-health.

He will, however, retain the vice-presidency. H Vincent Meredith will succeed him as general manager.

Appeal to Prohibitionists.

Toronto, Nov 29 An appeal to the electors of Ontario to work and vote for the election of candidates who "are avowed and trustworthy supporters of temperance reform, who can be depended upon to do all in their power to secure at the earliest opportunity the enactment of effective legislation against the bar-room evil, and who will hold themselves free from party dictation in relation to such legislation," was issued by the executive of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, as the result of their deliberations of Monday night and yesterday morning.

The work of the Alliance was reviewed at the meeting, and it was pointed out that voting on local option would take place this year in seventy municipalities, and repeal contests in about fifteen.

Munched Complexion Dope.

Boston, Nov. 29.—Complexion tablets containing arsenic made a generation ago fell into the hands of Brighton school children this week, and now fifty or sixty pupils are sick, five or six of them in a dangerous condition. The tablets were part of a stock of a chemist who, when moving, threw many boxes of the tablets into waste barrels. Children got hold of the tablets and took them for candy.

QUALITY, SKILL, & CARE,
THE LADDER BY WHICH WE CLIMB
To Those Requiring Glasses.
Eight years is a short time in the life of man, but it is a period of sufficient length, in business, to carry with it a guarantee of honest effort and satisfaction.
For this number of years I have carried on an Optical business in this city and I have fitted thousands of people with glasses. The fact that I have been successful leads me to believe that my methods are right and for that reason, I wish to give you the additional assurance that there will be no change in them in the future. I am in a position to give you the best of everything that means eye comfort.
It is rarely possible that you are in need of new lenses, frame or an eyeglass and I would ask that you give me the privilege of giving your eyes a scientific examination and of providing the glasses for you if you need them.
I exercise the greatest care in the examination and fitting of the glasses. I do not overlook the feature of making glasses which will add greatly to the personal appearance of those who wear them. In other words, every detail will have my utmost consideration.
I carry the largest up-to-date Optical Stock in Peterboro, and grind all my own lenses. You will incur no obligation by calling and consulting with me.

HEART DISEASE CURED

Kingston Girl Saved by "Fruit-a-tives"

Heart Weakness and Heart Irritation are the common outgrowth of Indigestion. Gas is formed in the stomach and this accumulation of gas bulges out the walls of the stomach and presses against the heart. Palpitation, pain over the heart, and sometimes a feeling of smothering and dizziness, all are caused by the stomach and not because of any organic heart disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure this weak, irritated condition of the heart by curing the stomach.

91 CLERGY ST., KINGSTON, ONT.

"I suffered for some years with a dangerous form of Heart Trouble. My heart beat violently, and I had pain over the heart and down the arms. I also suffered with Constipation and Indigestion. I was treated by physicians and took many remedies, but nothing did me any good. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", and this medicine completely cured me of all the heart trouble, constipation and indigestion, and gave me back perfect health." (Miss) MABLE TODD.

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

They moved about the terrace. He scarcely knew whether he hoped or feared the more that they would descend and come nearer to him. After all, it was cruelly tantalizing. He dared not disobey the Baroness, or he would have stepped boldly from his hiding-place and gone up to them. But that, by the terms of his promise, was impossible. He was to make his presence known to Louise only if he could do so secretly. He was not to accost her in the presence of any other person. It might be days or weeks before the opportunity came—or it might—it might be minutes! For, almost without warning, she was alone. The others had left her, with farewells, if any, of the briefest. She came forward to the grey stone parapet, and, with her head resting upon her hand, looked out towards the woods.

His heart began to beat faster—his brain was confused. Was there any chance that she would descend into the gardens, dare he make a signal to her? Her head and shoulders were bare, and a slight breeze had sprung up during the last few minutes. Perhaps she would feel the cold and go in. Perhaps——

He watched her breathlessly. She had abandoned her thoughtful attitude, and was standing upright, looking around her. She looked once at the window. She was apparently undecided whether to go in or not. Wrayson prayed then, if he had never prayed before. He didn't know to whom! He was simply conscious of an intense desire, which seemed somehow formulated into an appeal. Before he was fully conscious of it, she was coming down the steps. She stood on the edge of the lawn for a moment, as though considering—then, carefully raising her skirts in both hands, she picked her way amongst the flower-beds, coming almost directly towards him. Glancing round, he saw her objective—a rustic seat under a dark cedar tree, and he saw, too, that she must pass within a few feet of where he stood. She walked as one dreaming, or whose thoughts are a long way away, her head thrown back, her eyes half closed. The awakening, when it came, was sudden enough.

"Louise," he called to her softly. "Louise!"

She dropped her skirts. For a moment he feared that she was going to cry out.

"Who is that?" she asked sharply.

"It is I, Herbert Wrayson," he answered. "Don't be afraid. Shall I come out to you, or will you come down the laurel path?"

"You!" she murmured. "You!"

He saw the light in her face, and his voice was hoarse with passion.

"Come," he cried, "or I must fetch you! Louise! Sweetheart!"

She came towards him a little timidly, her eyebrows arched, a distant smile playing about her lips. She stood at the entrance to the laurel grove and peered a little forward.

"Where are you?" she asked. "Is it really you? I think that I am a little afraid! Oh!"

He took her into his arms with a little laugh of happiness. Time and life itself stood still. Her feeble remonstrance were swept away in the tide of his passion. His lips hung burning against hers.

"My sweetheart!" he murmured. "Thank God you came!"

She disengaged herself presently. A clock from the stables struck. She counted the hours.

"Eleven o'clock!" she exclaimed. "Herbert, how long have I been here?"

"Don't ask me that," he answered. "Only to me how long you are going to stay."

"Not another minute, really," she declared. "They will be sending out search parties for me directly. And—Herbert—how did you get here?" she demanded anxiously.

"I climbed over the wall," he answered cheerfully. "There didn't seem to be any other way."

She seemed almost incredulous.

"Didn't you see any watchmen?" she asked.

"There was one at the gates," he answered. "I fancied he followed me up the road, but I gave him the slip all right."

"Be careful how you go back," she begged. "This place is supposed to be closely watched."

"Watched! Why?" he asked. "Are you afraid of robbers?"

"How much did the Baroness tell you?" she asked.

"Nothing, except that I should find you here," he declared. "She made me promise that I would wait for an opportunity of seeing you alone."

"And why," she asked, "have you come?"

He took her into his arms again.

"I have learnt what love is," he murmured, "and I have forgotten the other things."

"That is all very well," she laughed, smoothing out her hair; "but the other things may be very important to me."

"A man named Stephen Heneage has taken up this Barnes affair," he answered. "He saw you leave the flats that night, and she is likely, if he thinks that it might lead to anything, to give the whole show away. He warned me to get away from England and—but you want the truth, don't you. All these are excuses! I came because I wanted, you!—because I couldn't live without you—Louise! Couldn't we steal away somewhere and never go back? Who need we? We could go to Paris to-morrow, catch the Orient express the next day—I know a dozen hiding places where we should be safe enough. We will make our own world and our own life—and forget!"

"Forget!" She drew a little away from him. Her tone chilled him. "Herbert," she said, "whatever happens, I must go now—this moment. Where are you stopping?"

"The Lion d'Or," he answered, "down in the village."

"I will send a note in the morning," she said eagerly. "Only you must go now, dear. Some one will be out to look for me, and I cannot think I must have a little time to decide. Be very careful as you go back. If you are stopped, be sure and make them understand that you are an Englishman. Good-night!"

He kissed her passionately. She yielded to his embrace, but almost immediately drew herself away. He clutched at her hand, but she eluded him. With swift footsteps she crossed the lawn. Just as she reached the terrace, the windows opened once more and some one called her name.

"I am coming in now," he heard her answer. "It has been such a wonderful night!"

CHAPTER XXIV

The landlord of the Lion d'Or, who had appeared for a moment to chat with his guests while they took their morning coffee, pointed downwards into the valley, where little clouds of mist hung over the lowlands.

"The messieurs will find themselves hot to-day," he remarked. "Here only there will be a breeze. Eleven hundred feet up, and only three miles from the sea! It is wonderful, eh?"

Wrayson pointed across towards the chateau, whose towers rose from the bosom of the cool green woods.

"There, also," he said, "it will be very pleasant. The Chateau is as high as we are, is it not so?"

The landlord shrugged his shoulders.

"There is little difference," he admitted, "and in the woods there is always shade. But who may go there? Never was an estate kept so zealously private, and, did monsieur know? Since yesterday a new order has been issued. The villagers were forbidden even their ancient rights of walking across the park! The head forester had posted a notice in the village."

"I have heard something of it," Wrayson admitted. "Has any reason been given? Are the family in residence there?"

The landlord shook his head.

"Madame la Baronne was never so exacting," he replied. "One hears that she has lent the chateau to friends. Two ladies are there, and one gentleman. It is all."

"Do you know who they are?" Wrayson asked.

The landlord assumed an air of mystery.

"One," he said, "is a young English lady. The other—well, they call her Madame de Melbain."

"What!"

The exclamation came like a pistol shot from Wrayson's fellow-guest at the table, who, up to now, had taken no part in the conversation. He had turned suddenly round, and was facing the startled landlord.

"Madame de Melbain," he repeated. "Monsieur, perhaps, knows the lady."

There was a moment's silence. Then the man who had called himself Duncan looked away from them.

"No," he said, "I do not know her. The name was familiar, but there is no lady of my acquaintance bearing it at present."

The landlord lodged a brief disappointed.

"You will be remarked, I had hoped, since monsieur would have been able to tell me something of the lady. I would like to settle my account. Monsieur has been a good customer."

and farmers have received orders forbidding them to accept boarders at present, and I myself am asked—for a consideration, I admit—to receive no further guests. Naturally, we ask ourselves, monsieur, what does it mean? One does not wish to gossip, but there is much here to wonder at!"

"What is she like, this Madame de Melbain?" Duncan asked.

"No one has seen her, monsieur," the landlord answered. "She arrived in a close carriage, since when she has not passed the lodge gates. She has her own servants who wait upon her. Without doubt, she is a person of some importance! Possibly, though, she is eccentric. They say that every entrance to the chateau is guarded, and that a cordon of men are always watching."

Wrayson laughed.

"A little exaggeration, my friend, there, eh?"

The landlord shrugged his shoulders.

"One cannot tell," he declared. "This, at least, is singular," he continued, bending forward confidentially. "Since the arrival of these two ladies, several strangers have been observed about the place, some of whom have endeavoured to procure lodgings. They spoke French, but they were not French or Englishmen. True, this may be a coincidence, but one can never tell. Monsieur has any further commands?"

Monsieur had none, and the landlord withdrew, smiling and bowing.

Duncan leaned across the table.

"My French," he said deliberately, "is rotten. I couldn't understand half of what that fellow said. Do you mind repeating it to me?"

Wrayson did so, and his companion listened moodily. When he had finished, Duncan was gazing steadfastly over towards the chateau, and knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"Sounds a little feudal, doesn't it?" he remarked, drawing his pouch from his pocket. "However, I don't suppose it is any concern of yours or of mine."

Wrayson made no direct answer. He was fully conscious that his companion was watching him closely, and he affected to be deeply interested in the selection of a cigarette.

"No," he said at last, "it is no concern of ours, of course. And yet one cannot help feeling a little interested. I noticed myself that the lodge gates of the chateau were rather strictly guarded."

"Very likely," the other answered. "Women of fashion who suffer from nerves take strange whims nowadays. This Madame de Melbain is probably one of these."

Wrayson nodded.

"Very likely," he admitted. "What are you going to do with yourself all day?"

"Loaf! I am going to lie down in the fields there amongst the wild flowers, in the shade of the woods," Duncan answered. "That is, if one may take so great a liberty with the woods of 'madame'! This sort of country rather fascinates me," he added thoughtfully. "I have lived so long in a land where the vegetation is a jungle and the flowers exotics. There is a species of exaggeration about it all I find this restful."

"Africa?" Wrayson asked.

The other nodded silently. He did not seem inclined to continue the conversation.

"You are the second man I have met lately who has come home from Africa," Wrayson remarked, "and you represent the opposite poles to life."

"It is very possible," Duncan admitted. "We are a polyglot lot who come from there."

"You were in the war, of course?" Wrayson asked.

"I was in the war," Duncan answered, "almost to the finish. Afterwards I went into Rhodesia, and accidentally made money. That's all I have to say about Africa. I hate the country, and I don't want to talk about it. See you later, I suppose."

He rose from his chair and stretched himself across the lawn the landlord came hurrying, his face perturbed and uneasy. His bow to Wrayson was subtly different. Here was perhaps an aristocrat under an assumed name a person to be, without doubt, conciliated.

"Monsieur," he announced, with a little flourish of the white serviette which, from habit, he was carrying, "there is outside a young lady from the chateau who is enquiring for you."

"Which way?" Wrayson demanded anxiously.

"Monsieur will be pleased to follow me," the landlord answered.

Fearful Headaches

Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.

By reading Mr Domeral's letter you will be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Domeral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr Chase's Nerve Food. For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was never free from them.

"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and am like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this testimonial hoping that other sufferers may also find that Dr Chase's Nerve Food can be cured."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, or 5 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"
MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR, Blum, Tex.

Nervous exhaustion is a common occurence of modern life. The wear and tear on the nervous system is greater now than at any time since the world began. For sleeplessness, poor appetite and that "run down" feeling, nothing is so good as

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Your nerves are your life and lack of vital energy makes existence a misery. Dr. Miles' Nervine will tone up your nervous system.

The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere. Ask your dealer for a Rayo lamp—or write for descriptive circular to any agency of

A company of Edinburgh students were starting for Glasgow on a football excursion, and meant to have a carriage to themselves. At the last moment, however, just as the train was starting, in hastened an old woman.

One of the young fellows, thinking to get rid of her easily, remarked:

"My good woman, this is a smoking car, don't you know?"

"Well, well," answered the woman, "never mind. I'll mak' it dae." And she took a seat.

As the train started the word was passed round, "Smoke her out." All the windows were closed accordingly, every student produced a pipe, and soon the car was filled with a dense cloud of tobacco smoke. So foul was the air that at last one of the boys began to feel ill. As he took his pipe from his mouth and settled back into his seat the old woman leaned forward to him.

"If ye are dune, sir," she said in a wheedling tone, "wad ye kindly gie me a bit draw? I cam' awa' in sic a haste I forgot mine."—Sheffield Telegraph."

A Brooklyn Sunday school teacher once had occasion to catechise a new pupil whose ignorance of his Testament would have been amusing had it not been so appalling. One Sunday she asked the little fellow how many commandments there were. To her surprise the lad answered glibly enough. "Ten, ma'am." "And now, Sammy," asked the teacher, "what would be the result if you should break one of them?" "Then there'd be nine," triumphantly answered the youngster.—"Fun."

The old man drifted uneasily into the country store and stared about him. People stared at him, for he was a stranger to all but one man.

"That's old man Grimshaw," this one explained in a whisper; "he's a hermit. I guess this is the first time he's come out o' the mountains in ten years. He lives on roots an' cranberries an' things."

The old man leaned over the counter.

"Grimme," he quavered, "a nickel's worth o' cheese and crackers." The storekeeper regarded him sternly.

"We can't sell things that way," he said. "Why, man, cheese is 25 cents a pound and crackers are away up. Don't high, you know."

"But," said the old man, "last time I bought any they gave me a lot full o' crackers with a hunk of cheese in it." The grocer laughed.

"When was that?" he asked. The old man reflected.

"Bout eight years ago," he said "I been away."

"I should think you had!" the grocer exclaimed. "And didn't you use to buy a can of cove oysters, and get some crackers an' pepper-sauce and vinegar mixed in?" The old man nodded.

"A set on a barrel in the store," persisted the grocer, "an' make a lunch out of it?" The old man nodded again.

"Nothin' doing like that now," the grocer assured him; "times has changed."

"I guess so," the old man sighed, opening a dirty leather bag with his teeth; "gimme $2 worth o' crackers an' cheese. Do I pay extra for the bag?" Dallas "News."

AFRICAN BUFFALO DANGEROUS

A French cinematograph operator, M. Octave Friere, was gored to death, and Lieutenant Paul Gratz, who made a motor car trip through the wilds of Africa two years ago, was badly injured by wild buffaloes on the shores of Lake Bangweolo, at the source of the Congo, on 9ths September. It was just as the travellers had reached their goal, Lake Bangweolo, said by the natives to be the home of monsters of prehistoric ancestry an dsize, that the catastrophe occurred. By the riverside they saw three gigantic wild buffaloes, and immediately fired. Unfortunately, the beasts were only wounded, and the hunters followed them as they wheeled off in rapid flight. But suddenly the quarry turned and charged. Against this onslaught the men were practically defenceless. The infuriated beasts caught and tossed and crushed them, inflicting terrible injuries. Lieutenant Gratz had his jaws broken an dwas badly crushed. His colleague was knocked down, tossed, and gored, and only survived his injuries a few hours. The native servants sent runners with messages for help to the nearest station inhabited by white men, Kasama, in North-eastern Rhodesia. Dr. Randell, the district surgeon, and Mr. Cookson, the magistrate of Kasama, arrived, after two days' forced marches, and the lieutenant was carried back to the station. The French officer's body was buried at Chare . . . but will be brought to Kasama for final interment.—New York Evening Post.

POPULATION AND DEATHRATES

The increase in population during recent years has been due to decreased deathrate. This has resulted directly from the applications of science, medicine and hygiene, and not directly from the improved conditions of living which have been made possible. In all civilized countries the deathrate is gradually becoming smaller, but the deathrate is normally. But the deathrate cannot decrease indefinitely, and it has been possibly reached in Great Britain a lower level than can be maintained. A deathrate of 16 per thousand in a stationary population means that the average length of life is over 60 years, and as one-fourth of those who die are under 5 years of age the average age at death of those surviving infancy would be about 80 years. Odd as it may appear at first sight the decreased deathrate of a country such as Great Britain is largely due to a decreasing birthrate combined with an increasing population. Such conditions give a population in which there are fewer old people over 60, in which groups the deathrate is about 60 pe rthousand, whereas between the ages of 5 and 35 it is below 5. In France there are fewer children than have ever existed in any population, which reduces the deathrate; but there are more old people—twice as many as in Great Britain—which increases it. The proportion of old people will further increase in France, and will be tripled in Great Britain. It should be remembered that the deathrate of those over 45 has increased continually, owing mainly to the keeping alive of weakly people at earlier ages. "The Popular Science Monthly."

Health Declines When Kidneys Fail

Dr. Hamilton's Pills helped me from the first dose. Relief was immediate. They restored me, and my health is better than ever."

Hamilton's Pills Cured

All complaints kindred to kidney disease are conquered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Their use means . . . . . Dodds . . . . . No house should be . . . . . Sold by druggists . . . per box or . . . for $1.00.

'MARVELOUS' CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION

Four Children Constantly Scratching. Nearly Tore Limbs Off. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"Two of my daughters and two of my sons were suffering from very bad heads, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to rub some ointment, which he gave them, well into the sores. These sores started in small blotches which got larger and larger and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said it was eczema, but they seemed to be daily getting worse. The sores formed like little boils, then filled with matter, and looked like abscesses. They became all inflamed and irritated, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores burst, and the matter flowed all over their heads. We had to cut their finger nails and at times to put gloves on their hands, the irritation was so bad, to keep them from digging into the flesh, and at night they would nearly tear their limbs off. The bolsters would be literally covered with blood.

"The teachers would not let them attend school for fear of infection spreading among the other children, so I resolved to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I found to benefit my children greatly. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for one month, and the result is a marvelous cure." (Signed) George Arthur Robinson, 37, Fitzwilliam St., Hoyland Common, nr. Barnsley, Yorks., Eng., Jan. 3, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., 46 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

ANOTHER WORLD'S RECORD

What is said to be the world's record in roping and tying a steer was made at Canon City on Saturday by Thomas Mix of Oklahoma, who performed the feat in sixteen seconds. Seventeen seconds is the best time previously made in such a case. The exhibition took place at Sand Creek, half a mile from hat city, nuder precisely the same conditions that would prevail on the cattle ranges. As evidence of his prowess, Mix "bulldogged" a wild 4-year-old steer in twelve seconds, or one fifth of a minute, which, it is believed, has never been equalled. — Sterling, Colo., "Demorcrat."

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

If your scalp is itchy you have dandruff; and dandruff is the thieving little germ that will surely rob you of your hair. That germ must be killed if you want to save what hair you have and grow hair that is healthy and clean. SAGEINE is the acknowledged dandruff germ killer, it is sold at 50c. a large bottle by W. H. Kent in Peterborough and rigidly guaranteed to do as is claimed for it. You cannot afford to neglect your hair and your future appearance when such a hair tonic as SAGEINE awaits you at W. H. Kent's. It is daintily perfumed and is not sticky or greasy.

NO WORD FOR LOVE

It is impossible to "kick" a man in French. You must give him a "blow with the foot." The Portuguese do not "wink" at one; they "close and open the eyes." In the languages of many semi-civilized tribes there is no word with which to convey the idea of "stealing," perhaps because the idea of property is so vague. It is related of one of the early missioneries that, in attempting to translate he Bible into Algonquin, he could find no word to express "love," and was compelled to invent it.—"Harper's Weekly."

UP-TO-DATE MANCHURIAN CITY

The city of Dairen, formerly called Dalny, is said to be the most up-to-date town in Manchuria. Here the Japanese are spending large sums annually on street, sewer and lighting improvements. Good hotels are maintained by the South Manchuria Railway (which is a semi-official organization). This line now runs express trains four times a week to connect with the trains of the Siberian railway; they are unsurpassed in the Far East, being equipped with Pullman coaches, dining cars and sleepers. The railway also operates a twice-a-week steamer service to Shanghai. The wharves of Dairen are said to be the finest in the Far East, vessels drawing up to twenty-eight feet being moored alongside the quay. The port is open the year round, as the ice that forms in the bay is never thick enough to interfere with navigation. During the year 1910 1,369 steamers entered this port with cargo, and 47 in ballast, their tonnage aggregating 1,637,719 —"Scientific American."

WAS TROUBLED WITH

Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes: "I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

QUICK CHANGE THIEF

How Starke Deceived the Watchman of a Building Broken Into.

How a thief played the part of quick change artist and thus escaped arrest when the odds seemed to be all against him is told in the story of a midnight raid on a large butchering establishment.

Ascertaining that a considerable amount of money was kept on the premises, a Berlin shopkeeper named Starke with two companions thought to effect a burglary. Starke entered the building through a window, but just as his companions were about to follow, they discovered they were detected by a street watchman, and decamped. Warned by the disappearance of his comrades that something unexpected had happened, Starke threw off his jacket, donned a butcher's blood-stained apron, and cap, switched on the electric light, and, seizing a butcher's knife, began to work furiously on the meat. When the watchman appeared and asked the supposed butcher if he had not observed the suspicious behaviour of the two men outside, Starke replied nonchalantly that he had seen the rascals, but that on catching sight of him they had run off. The watchman then withdrew, satisfied that everything was in order. A short time afterward, when he had robbed the cash-till and packed up some choice pieces of meats, Starke opened the door with a key which he had found on the premises and quietly departed.

MADMAN FOR COMPANY

A Lunatic in White Apparel Jumped on a Van Beside Driver.

A terrifying adventure befell the driver of the motor mail van which runs between Stirling and Bathgate, Scotland. While driving towards the former town at dead of night he was suddenly startled by the apparition of a white-clad figure rushing to and fro on the road in front of him. Impeded by the strange object, which paid no attention to his warning the driver was compelled to stop at Linlithgow Bridge. He had no sooner done so than the figure which proved to be a man clad in white shirt and trousers, stepped to the van. The intruder was carrying a heavy chain, and, realising that he was demented, the driver set the van in motion again, but failed to dislodge the madman who jumped on to the seat beside him. Roused to fury by his shadow on the glass screen the lunatic screamed and swung his chain round his head in a terrifying manner.

It was not until Falkirk was reached that a policeman was seen. The lunatic attempted to escape, but the constable, securing a horse, succeeded in capturing him and placing him under restraint.

STATUE OF FAMOUS BEAUTY

Honor to the Women Who Refused to be "King's Mistress" in France.

A charming statue of the famous beauty, Marquise de Savigne, has been unveiled at Vitre and people are flocking to the place to see the statue of a woman who had the courage to refuse the honor of being the king's mistress at a time when such a refusal might easily mean incarceration for life. Those who follow the Woman's Rights Movement in France are proud of the honor done to a member of their sex, for statues have only, so far, been erected to Joan of Arc, Empresses or Queens. That a woman who became famous by the letters she wrote to her daughter should be immortalized in marble is flattering to women in general, but are there not women in the past who have a greater claim to that distinction? Mme. de Savigne, however, was undoubtedly feminine, for even, to-day, two centuries after her death, we fall under the charm of this graceful and delightful little woman. Her husband was killed in a duel seven years after his marriage, and was said to have been one of the lovers of the famous Ninon de Lenclos. Speaking of her scapegrace husband the Mme. de Savigne used to say: "The difference between us is that whilst I love him but do not respect him, he respects me but does not love me!"

After his death she lived for a long time in the pretty mansion where the Carnavalet Museum is now established, and many were the admirers who tried to win her, but in vain. She concentrated her affections on her daughter, who, according to Bensérade, Louis the Fourteenth's official poet, was the belle of France. In fact, when Vallier's star was waning, Bussy and other courtiers tried to raise Mlle. de Savigne to the exalted rank of "King's Mistress," but her mother declined the honor of her, and promptly married her to M. de Grigbab.

RAILWAY DEVELOPMENT

Many New Districts In the Far West Being Opened Up

The most important line of the Canadian Northern Railway in its programme of Alberta construction, is that which is intended to connect the great agricultural prairie district which surrounds the Peace River and its tributaries, in Northern Alberta, with Edmonton and civilization. The pioneer settlers and their families who have taken up their abode in the region during the past three years are said to number over fifty thousand, and communication heretofore has been very primitive. A stage line connects Edmonton with Athabaska Landing, on the Athabaska River, a distance of 90 miles, where a small steamboat runs in the summer to the foot of Lesser Slave Lake, about 100 miles. Here a trail leads across the portage into the Peace River, and travellers have to go the rest of the way to their homesteads in their own boats. The Canadian Northern is now building a line from Edmonton to Athabaska Landing, which will probably be open before the end of the year, and the new scheme, as outlined in the application to be made to the Legislature in the name of the Canadian Northern Western Railway Company, calls for a further line from Athabaska Landing to Peace River Landing, in the heart of the district.

Another important line in the programme is that which it is proposed to construct in a south-westerly direction from Strathcona, across the river from Edmonton, for a distance of fifty miles. This will open up a rich country not now served by any railway at all. Some of the other proposals are: A line northward for 70 miles from Calgary, nearly parallelling the Canadian Pacific; a projection of the branch between Big Valley and Stetler, to a junction with the main Saskatchewan-Calgary line; from Athabaska Landing north-easterly to Fort McMurray, on the Athabaska River, and thence easterly to Lac la Biche, now several hundred miles from civilization.

"Mamma," he said, "is this man my step-papa?"

"Yes, dear, he is your step-papa."

"Well, mamma," pursued thoughtful Thomas, "you call me your little lad, don't you?"

"Yes, dearie, you are mamma's little lad!"

"Then, mamma," concluded Tommy, "I suppose I must be my step-papa's little step-ladder."

CANADA AND BAHAMAS

Sir William Grey-Wilson Urges the Islands be Annexed to Canada

Sir William Grey Wilson, Governor of Bahama Islands, discussed before the Canadian Club, Toronto, the possibility of a commercial and political union with Canada, and stated his belief that should Canada accede to the desire of the Bahamas the whole of the rest of the British West Indies would speedily follow. Speaking of the United States, with all their tropical and semi-tropical possessions, Sir William thought the flocking down to the Bahamas of Americans in vast numbers was a tremendous tribute to the finest climate in the world. They had only had seven hot days in 1911, and the temperature varied from 62 to 77 degrees. The bathing was unrivaled, and the brilliancy of the colors of the marine scenery was such that eminent artists told him they dare not attempt to portray such rainbow brightness. The Bahamas are three days from New York, or 17 hours from Florida. Commercially, the Bahamas are important, as having the largest territory in the British West Indies. The main steamship lines of the world intersect the islands. The opening of the Panama Canal will greatly increase the traffic through the islands. The islands require the produce of the north, which is not grown in the West Indies. Nearly 80 per cent. of the American imports are from the United States, and only 2½ per cent. from Canada.

"I ask you, gentlemen," he said, "why the 80 per cent. now imported from the United States should not be imported from Canada? It is a reproach to us, who seek to draw together the outlying portions of the empire, if we do not endeavor to divert the whole of that 80 per cent. from the United States to Canada."

The constitution of the Bahamas was based on a suffrage akin to that of Canada. Anyone possessing a house worth $10 a year had a vote. The blacks were as three to one, and the black man invariably elect a white man to represent them. The black man recognized that, though of a wild race, the British had extended to him unswerving, undeviating British justice. If it were not for that unswerving justice, Britain could not hold the position she does. Sir William testified, from experience in the west of Africa. Black or white were impartially punished in every case.

SALMON ON THE COAST

A Tremendous Quantity Has Been Marketed, Says J. Durney

Mr. Joseph Durney, who made a two weeks' visit to the Columbia River, Puget Sound and British Columbia salmon canneries, writes from San Francisco that after seeing everyone in connection with the business in those districts he found that there is positively nothing to offer in chinooks, Alaska red or medium red, and that there is very little Alaska pink unsold. Stocks on hand, he says, consist almost entirely of Puget Sound humpbacks and Alaska chums. "When you take into consideration the stock on hand in comparison with the quantity packed," he writes, "it is astonishing to find what a tremendous quantity of salmon has been marketed. The total pack of salmon will be a record-breaking one, several hundred thousand cases larger than any previous pack. We estimate the total 1911 pack as 3,000,000 cases Alaska, 1,350,000 cases Puget Sound, 500,000 cases Columbia River, spring and fall, 750,000 cases British Columbia and 250,000 cases outside rivers, a total of 5,850,000 cases, or 800,000 cases more than any previous year in the history of the salmon business.

"Of the vast quantity of fish packed, there are unsold less than 200,000 cases, consisting, as already said, almost entirely of Puget Sound humpbacks and Alaska chums. Very few Puget Sound Cohoes or chums have been packed so far and the outlook is for a short pack of these grades.

"When you stop to consider that of the season's pack 2,500,000 cases are pinks and chums, as against 1,400,000 cases, the largest previous pack of these grades, you will understand that dealers and consumers have at last realized the value of pink salmon, and you can count on it as being probably the most popular grade from now on, not only because of the price, but on account of the excellent quality.

"The unsold stock of Puget Sound humpbacks is in very firm hands. Hence there is no possibility of a decline in price, because everyone competed with the salmon business knows that as next year is the off year no humpbacks will be packed on the Sound. As 1913 is the big year on sockeyes, packers will devote their entire attention to the packing of that grade."

PERSIA'S IMPENDING FATE

Persia's days of independence are ended. The Russians have been in control of Lahaz for two years; it is the most important strategic point in the kingdom. It is the second city in size (70,000) and is the capital of the large north western province in which Turkey attempted to effect a permanent lodgment. Its Blue mosque is one of the grand possessions of the Moslem world.

As I have said, the sun of Persia, as an independent power, has set for ever. Hereafter Russia and Britain will rule its people, whether they are pleased or not. British claims are being advanced from the head of the Persian Gulf, a point almost directly south of the Caspian and the extension of Caucasia which Russia is so intent upon making.

The partition of the vast Euphrates valley will follow. A region of this earth that has been neglected for more than two thousand years will become populous and vastly productive within the lifetimes of people now living. Likely as not, a combination of commercial interests will open the old bed of the Oxus—a great river now flowing into he Aral Sea—and cause it to resume its way to the Caspian, thus giving Russia water-way to the northern side of the Hindoo Kush and restoring to Balk the supremacy it possessed at the time of Alexander the Great.

These predictions are not pipe dreams, but actual possibilities, in an age that gives to commerce a canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

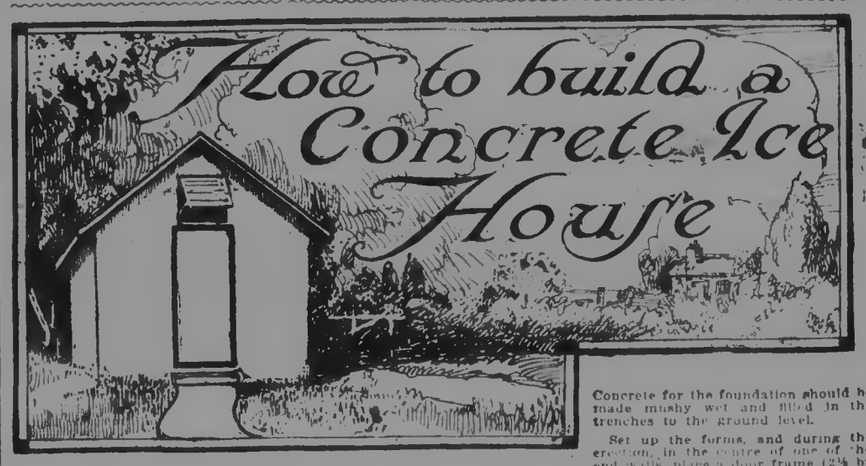
How to build a Concrete Ice House



THERE are few improvements possible which do more to make farm life pleasant than an ice house. Its stored blocks not only make it possible for the farmer to increase his profits by improving the market value of his dairy products, but also, to enjoy the comforts of a home supply of ice.

It is so easy and inexpensive to have an abundant supply of ice all summer that it is really surprising that every farm is not provided with an ice-house. The spread of concrete construction on the farm has been followed by the erection of such buildings in all parts of the United States and Canada, and it is the purpose of this article to give some suggestions which may help those who have not yet built, to plan their ice-houses.

Concrete, being indestructible and not easily penetrated by heat or cold, is a splendid material for the walls. It has the added advantage of being comparatively cheap, since sand, stone, gravel and water are usually available on the farm, and the work can be done by the farmer or his assistants, at seasons of the year when spare time is plentiful. Moreover, concrete walls are not affected by the continual dampness and do not rot like wood. The saving in painting and repairing, to say nothing of superior ice-keeping qualities, in a few years amounts to more than the first cost of the concrete building.

Location.

In determining the location of the ice-house, a place should be chosen where the building can be well drained by an underground line of drain tile. If possible, it should be placed where the shade of large trees, or larger structures, will protect it from the heat of the midday sun.

The concrete for the walls should be made of Portland cement, clean sand and a hard crushed rock, or screened gravel. Instead of the sand and rock, clean cinders from the furnace, or burned clay or cinders may be used.

Naturally the size of the ice-house will depend upon the number of loads needed daily and the number of days he will be used. A cubic foot of ice weighs about 57 pounds, and a ton, with 10 per cent. allowance for air spaces between the cakes, occupies 38 cubic feet. It is not necessary to pack the ice between the walls, but on the floor, around the sides of the building and on the top of the ice there should be placed 12 inches of sawdust, well rammed. An [illegible] the sides of prairie or marsh hay may be used instead of the sawdust packed [illegible] is well weighted down [illegible] top of the ice. Making allowance for sawdust packing and 8-inch concrete walls, a house 10 feet square inside (100 square feet) and 8 feet to the eaves will hold 10 tons.

The materials may be hauled to the site at odd times, and piled so as to be convenient for working.

The wooden forms for the concrete may be either fixed or movable. Fixed forms are merely two boxes without top or bottom, which fit one within the other with an 8-inch space between for the concrete. Such forms are made of 2 by 4 inch studding spaced two feet and sheathed next to the concrete wall with 1-inch siding. The forms should be held in place at the bottom by timbers called "liners," and should be well braced. To save lifting the concrete, the outside boards may be nailed on as the concrete is placed in the forms. Movable forms require less lumber than the fixed variety. Such forms are built in sections 2 to 4 feet high and in lengths convenient to handle, usually 8 to 10 feet. The 2 by 4 inch uprights are spaced three to four feet. Cross-cleats at the top are provided to keep the forms eight inches apart. Near the bottom twisted wire ties are used to draw the forms up tightly against the previous day's concrete work. Each succeeding day the wires are cut and the forms raised.

The sheathing and rafters for the wooden roof may be used in the forms. It is not necessary to carry them; their ends may simply be allowed to project beyond and above the walls.

Foundation trenches should be dug 10 inches wide along the lines laid out for the building and should be carried down to solid ground and below frost, usually three to four feet. Bring a drain tile up within the building lines to the point where the door will be.

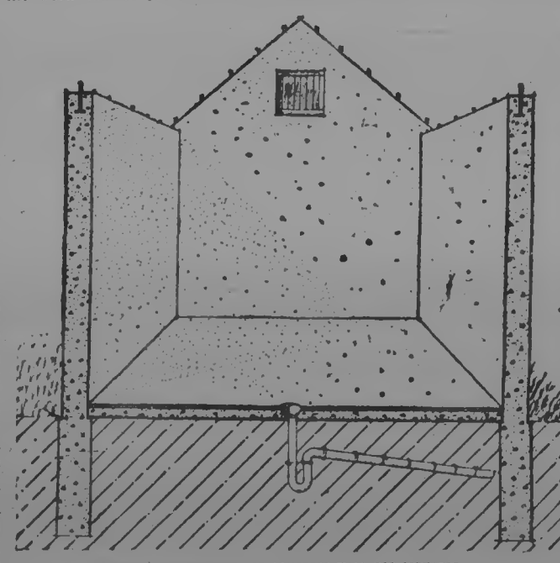
Mixing.

In mixing the concrete a tight wooden platform should be used. The proportions are one part Portland cement to 2½ parts sand to 5 parts crushed rock. Or one part cement may be used to 5 parts bank run gravel. In measuring, count one bag of cement equal to one cubic foot. Concrete for the foundation should be made mushy wet and filled in the trenches to the ground level.

Set up the forms, and during the erection, in the centre of one of the end walls, place a door frame (2½ by 6 feet clear) within the forms. Brace it well so that the concrete will not bulge it out of shape. Place the concrete in layers 6 to 8 inches thick carried around the entire building. In the concrete walls of each gable end set a frame for ventilating doors (2½ by 2½ feet) in the same way as the large door frame was placed.

As the forms are filled, at intervals of 18 inches, imbed bent iron rods or twisted wire in the concrete around the corners of the building. Likewise put two ¾-inch rods or small wagon tire in the concrete 1½ inches above the door opening. When the side and end walls have reached their full heights and while the concrete is yet soft, set ½-inch bolts, 8 inches long, heads down, 5 inches in concrete and 32 inches up. To these bolts will be fastened the 2 by 4-inch plates for the roof.

After the building is a week old the forms may be removed and the 4-inch concrete floor built directly on the ground. Begin at the back of the building and slope the floor ¼-inch to the foot in the direction of the drain tile at the door. Lay the last few sewer pipes of the 5-inch drain with well-cemented joints and include a tile known as a "trap," having a bend which always contains water. The water acts as a seal to keep out the warm air in the drain. Cover the floor end of the drain with a trash strainer.



SHOWING CONSTRUCTION OF CONCRETE WALL FOR ICEHOUSE.

The Roof.

The roof may be covered with shingles or any other good material. Close the door opening next to the ice, with removable sections of boards fitting in slots or grooves and provide a door swinging out. Hang the little doors in the gables with hinges on the outside, so they may be cracked to provide the necessary ventilation and at the same time keep out the rain. Store the ice as previously instructed.

Success in ice-keeping depends largely,

On an air-tight, heat-proof building.

On good drainage, with the drain "trapped" to keep out warm air.

On careful and thorough packing of the ice.

On well regulated ventilation in the roof space over the ice.

A well-built concrete ice-house fulfils these conditions. Every year it is ready for use without repairs. And by means of ice, farm life can not only be made more comfortable and attractive, but fruit, poultry and dairy products can be marketed to better advantage.

For an ice-house 10 by 10 feet, 8 feet to the eaves and 13 feet to the roof peak, with 8-inch walls, 4-inch floor and a foundation 10 inches by 3 feet, the following materials will be required for the concrete:

Crushed rock 15 cubic yards.

Sand, 7½ cubic yards.

Portland cement, 21 barrels, and 16 ½ by ¾-inch round head bolts.

SEEN AND HEARD

THE MARBLE HEART

Frederick Trevor Hill, the brilliant novelist, is the secretary of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, and the other day at the Century Club, apropos of charity, Mr. Hill said:

"The best charity at this season is the children's country week movement. To see a pale, gaunt child of the tenements growing rosy and strong beside the windy sea or in the perfumed air of some old-fashioned garden is a joy, and they who will not help this charity seem to me as stingy as the Sunapee man.

"A Sunapee man was sitting off on the Little Weetamo for a week's holiday in Boston. The township beggar said to him on the pier:

"'Japhet, ye might leave me a dime or so to drink success to yer journey.'

"'Sorry, but I can't do it,' Japhet replied. 'All my spare dimes I give to my mother.'

"'That's strange,' sneered the beggar. 'Yer mother told me ye never give her nothin'.'

"'Well, said Japhet, coldly, 'if I never give my old mother nothing, what sort of a chance do you think you've got?'"—Washington Star.

TRAVELLING LIGHT.

Henry E. Dixey, at a luncheon in New York, praised the "honeymoon special," the automobile route between Chicago and New York.

"This route's only drawback," he said, "lies in the fact that you can't take much luggage with you. Your luggage, in fact, must be almost as limited as Grogg's.

"Grogg had been contemplating a visit to the seashore over the Fourth, and a couple of days after the Fourth I met him on the Rialto.

"'Well, Grog, old boy,' I said, 'did you enjoy yourself at the shore?'

"'Yes, fine,' said he, 'only I lost my luggage.'

"'Lost your luggage? How was that?' I asked.

"'The cork came out,' he explained."—New York Tribune.

THE COLONEL IN A NEW ROLE

"Teddy Roosevelt!" cried one of the boys.—Churubusco (Ind.) Truth.

THE OPINION OF ALBANY

The address made by Bishop Nelson on Saturday night to the commercial travellers was timely and sensible. It should serve as an antidote for much that is both feverish and impracticable. Bishop Nelson called attention to facts that of late have been either forgotten or overlooked. It is a shame and a disgrace, said he, that a city having such a large share of industrial enterprises, commercial advancement and civic spirit should be exploited as Albany has been.

Muckrakers are still muckrakers, whether they are hired by the state or by sensational publications to pay their contential trade. The people of the city of Albany have expressed in emphatic opinion upon the elaborate and costly attempt to defame the city by.

Evils have existed ever since the days of Adam, but Bishop Nelson told the travellers: They always will exist. It would be unfortunate to the greatest extent possible.

The use of plantains [illegible] more general in the United States. Although it is sometimes [illegible] among the poor, the wealthy [illegible] it can rarely be found [illegible]

Of course, [illegible] plantains are used in the homes. The plantain, gathered green, [illegible] good, and [illegible] Very [illegible] the tropical [illegible] dry and [illegible] Boiled in a [illegible] mealy [illegible] the taste [illegible] potato, [illegible] of [illegible]

There are many processes of preparing it for the table. The favourite form is a kind of porridge, prepared and served in the same manner as other leguminous farinaceous substances, which has a decided saccharine taste and is very palatable. It is served in this form to children and convalescents. It is sometimes made into flakes and served with cream as a breakfast food, and is also made into different kinds of bread and cookies. When served with milk or cream it compares favourably with the best breakfast foods on the market. For making bread it is a splendid substitute for wheat flour, and is often given preference by the Dominicans. It is possible for the plantain meal to be marketed profitably, by exploiters of breakfast foods.—United States Consular Reports.

SPANISH POLAR EXPEDITION

Several recent occurrences in Spain have betokened an awakening, in that country, of interest in scientific matters. Accordingly we are not surprised to hear that the Spaniards are planning an arctic expedition. The project was submitted to a recent meeting of the Royal Geographic Society of Madrid by F. J. Gisbert who has had some experience in polar exploration, and a committee has been appointed to raise the necessary funds, which it is estimated will amount to $12,000. Senor Gisbert proposes to drift for three years in a trans polar current a la Nansen, starting from a point north of the Alaska coast, in 160 degrees west longitude, whence he expects to reach the Greenland sea. Side trips are to be made on sleds, in order that exploration may cover a zone of 100 miles on either side of the ship's position.—Scientific American.

WHY SHOULD WOMEN SUFFER?

Those that are almost daily afflicted with headache, back pains, depression, neuralgia, and "don't care" feeling, can be quickly cured by "Nerviline." Just a few drops of this wonderful remedy in sweetened water makes you feel better at once—gives you relief from unnatural aches and pains. Thousands use Nerviline every day—it does them good. Why not you?

The Peerless Peninsular

a cast-iron range with modern oven and equipment

A wealthy mustard manufacturer once said that he made his profit not out of what people ate, but what they left on their plates.

The coal dealer might say about the same thing.

It's not the coal you use that buys his six-cylinder car, but the coal that goes up the chimney.

You might as well save some of that coal.

Building ranges to do good cooking and at the same time to save coal has kept us thinking and working over in Preston for upwards of 50 years. Every year improvements in range construction have been made. The flues have been widened here; a wall made thicker there; weight reduced in one spot and added to another. But every change has made the oven heat with less fuel and the construction of the range strong and durable. The perfect range which these years of study have produced is called "Peninsular."

Nickel ornaments, the number of lids, the special features or the size do not affect the internal construction or honest materials and workmanship that go into the "Peninsular." So that when buying one, a housewife may feel free to consult her own tastes as regards finish and appearance. If the range is "Peninsular" she will know that it will give her good bakings for the least amount of coal.

The Peerless

The PEERLESS Peninsular is a modern cast-iron range. Modern, because it has all the advantages of cast-iron and none of its disadvantages. In fact, it should be called a "combination range" a combination of cast-iron steel. It has the firm close-fitting parts, the durable everlasting frame and the cosy home like appearance, dear to all women; but—and here it differs from other cast iron ranges—it also has a quick oven, an oven that heats evenly on every side, top and bottom, a square oven big enough to cook four pies at once; and it has a drop-oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

The PEERLESS Peninsular may be had with a steel warming closet and hot water reservoir and with a low closet under the oven for pots, pans and irons.

The PEERLESS is a perfect beauty and has many a convenience not found on other ranges.

Take the top of the Peerless Peninsular.

It is made in three separate sections which are interchangeable and which slide along or lift out whenever you want to clean the flues.

In most ranges the oven is either "on" or "off." That is, it is getting full heat or none at all. The Peerless Peninsular oven is regulated by means of a sliding damper so as to get just as much heat as you need. This is another way you save fuel.

Get "The Cost"

"THE COST of a Range" tells more about these Peninsular Ranges not a list of pictures and prices, but a book showing that the after-cost is the big cost and how the "Peninsular" cuts it down. Yours, for the asking.

CANADA GETS CRUISER.

H.M.S. Aboukir Is Sold to Dominion For Fleet.

London, Nov. 29. (C.A.P. Cable.)—The cruiser Aboukir has been purchased by Canada and her crew are being paid off. She will be thoroughly overhauled and transferred to Canada next spring.

In reply to a question in the Commons by Craig, M.P., who asked what effect the dropping of the Canadian navy by the present Ministry would have on the status or careers of those officers lent to Canada, and whether it prejudiced their positions and prospects of promotion, Hon. Winston Churchill said the contingency contemplated the officers on the active list who had been lent, would return for service in the Imperial navy.

Service in the Dominion navy counts as though in the Imperial navy.

Joe Martin, M.P., asked if an officer had just been found guilty by a court-martial of negligence in running his ship on the rocks, and whether another was now being tried for a similar offence. Mr. Churchill said: "I don't think it is desirable for me to reply without an opportunity of verifying the facts."

The Aboukir, built in 1900, has fourteen guns, 12,000 tons displacement and 21,000 horsepower. She is a first-class cruiser with 21 knot speed. Her captain was Richard F. Phillimore and commander, Godfrey Tuke. The Aboukir is an armored vessel.

A DOUBLE LIFE?

Will Brings Up Strange Story of Woman's Two Names.

Toronto, Nov. 29. Mr. Justice Middleton has reserved judgment on an application by L. F. Heyd, K.C., which reveals a strange case of a woman who was known for over thirty years in Toronto as Catherine Gordon and in Montreal as Catherine Ryan.

She died in St. Michael's Hospital in March, 1910, leaving $2,800, which was to be distributed by her executor, Judge Angus. She left $1,000 to her sister, Maria Gordon of Ottawa, and $1,000 to Nell Bendick of this city. The balance of her estate was left to the Sisters of St. Joseph, for the use of St. Michael's Hospital. After advertising, Judge Angus received word from Maria Allison of Ottawa to the effect that he had a sister, Catherine Ryan, but there was no identification, and the matter dropped. Mr. Justice Anglin failing to locate the heirs, turned the estate over to the Sisters, receiving a bond of indemnity from them.

This spring the husband of Maria Allison died, and she went to Montreal to look up her relatives. She then found that Catherine Gordon came to Toronto after the death of her mother in 1879, and that she was known by the name of Catherine Gordon. She then instructed Mr. Heyd to claim the $1,000 legacy.

No person in Toronto knew her save as Catherine Gordon, though she worked for the J. D. King Shoe Co. for 22 years. She frequently visited Montreal, where she was known as Catherine Ryan, and on her last visit left her night gown, which was marked with the name "Gordon." Affidavits from people in Montreal and Toronto seem to complete the identification.

Ontario Welcomes Duke.

Toronto, Nov. 29.—Officially and on behalf of every person in the Province of Ontario, Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were welcomed yesterday by Sir James Whitney and his colleagues in the Provincial Government, in the Legislative Chamber, at the Parliament Buildings, where the simple but most impressive ceremony was held, there had gathered together to honor the royal visitors representatives of the Government, the Methodist Church in Canada, the Associated Boards of Trade of the province, St. George's Society, St. Andrew's Society, the Empire Club and the United Empire Loyalists. In addition to the officials of these organizations and associations several hundred men and women filled the galleries and occupied every available foot of space in the commodious chamber, which had been profusely and beautifully decorated.

Speaker Bans Liquors.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—"For the first time in the history of the Canadian Parliament all wines and intoxicating liquors will be excluded from the dinners and all social receptions held in the Speaker's chambers, says yesterday's Journal. Then it adds:

"This significant decision has been arrived at as a direct result of the expressed desire of Mrs. Sproule, wife of the Speaker, who will be hostess. A similar order of things was observed at the Ontario Legislature under the late Speaker St. John. Another fair example has been set by Lieutenant-Governor Macgregor of Nova Scotia, who issued a similar mandate on his accession to office."

Juvenile Discretion.

"Pa, can't I have this picture I find would say [illegible] be presented some day [illegible] the [illegible] with [illegible]. "It's much too soon to start a boom."

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, In Plain English; or Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, paper bound, sent for 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only. Cloth-bound, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

REGISTRATION WAS COMPLETED LAST NIGHT

Total For the City of Peterborough This Year is 1442, Which Is 340 Less Than at Federal Election

THE COMPLETE FIGURES

The registering of municipal ultimate voters for the Provincial election as far as the City of Peterborough is concerned, was completed last night. The grand total for the city was 1442, which while 340 short of the registration for the last Dominion election, is larger than the return for the first couple of days would lead one to expect. Mr. Hall's workers are satisfied with the result and feel that they have had a majority of the name added to the list. The figures are as follow:

South Ward	384
Centre Ward	265
West Ward	300
North Ward	291
East Ward	202

POTATO CROP GOOD

A representative of the firm of Scott Hatfield, produce merchant of Nova Scotia, was in the city a few days ago to see Street merchant he contracted was in charge of twenty-five carloads of potatoes. Seven of these cars had been disposed of between Nova Scotia and Peterborough, and the other fifteen would be taken on to Winnipeg. The potato crop in Nova Scotia was exceptionally good this year, running out an average of 120 bushels to the acre. About one-half of the crop has been sold. The farmers representative stopped over in the city for a day and took the opportunity of ascertaining the existing conditions in regards the potato crop with a view to shipping a few cars here later on.

THE CAMPAIGN ISSUES DISCUSSED AT ENNISMORE

Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton Address Electors at Well Attended Meeting---Defects in Educational Policy of the Government Clearly Pointed Out by the Speakers---Many Schools Without Proper Teachers, Some With None At All

Notwithstanding the disagreeably wet evening, the town hall Ennismore was well filled to greet Mr. Hall on his first appearance in Ennismore. A large number of the ladies of the township turned out to hear public questions discussed.

Mr. Mitchell in the occupied the chair and in introducing Mr. Hall, took the opportunity of testifying to the good work Mr. Hall had done when he was a Dominion member. His energy, activity and ability were unsurpassed wherever he was known, and he had no doubt that at the election West Peterboro elected Mr. Hall as in this contest, it would have one of the best members in the province and the riding would have its wants well looked after. He had known Mr. Hall for many years. While he had been Reeve he had come into contact with Mr. Hall, in his representative capacity, and he had always found him to take a large and business like view of the matters in question. He hoped the Township would give Mr. Hall a large vote, and he was satisfied that they would make no mistake in so doing.

Mr. Hall, on rising, was loudly applauded and made one of the best speeches of his campaign, dealing with the subjects involved in the contest in an able and comprehensive manner.

Mr. Hall said that he never knew of an election that had taken place in any Province of the Dominion of Canada, where the Government of the day has been so severely criticized by its own friends as the Whitney Government has during this present campaign. Nearly all the leading Conservative newspapers in the Province have, in one way or another, added their share to the condemnation of the Whitney Government in one Department of the Government, or another.

It is only the other day that the Toronto World ridiculed Sir James Whitney's stand upon bilingual schools. It cartooned Sir James Whitney sitting at his desk in a temper, declaring that there are no such things as bilingual schools, and then in the next breath declaring that it has taken Dr. Morehard over nine months to inspect the bilingual schools that today exist in the Province of Ontario.

When the Whitney Government abolished the Model Schools they cut off the supply of qualified teacher for outside portions of the rural sections of this Province. When we find that there is between 60 per cent and 70 per cent of teachers unqualified in a large portion of the Province it is time for a change.

"When I was in Buckhorn," said Mr. Hall, "I found that the Public School was in charge of a lady because they had no teacher. That is my experience of many of the schools in the Province. The children are not being educated at all."

On the question of tax reform, I contend Mr. Hall the Ottawa Citizen has roundly denounced the Whitney Government for refusing to grant the municipalities the option to exempt improvements from taxation. If a mechanic builds a new verandah, or paints his house under the existing law, around comes the Assessor, up goes his assessment and up goes his taxes. There is no encouragement given to a man to improve, or beautify his property because the more he improves it the more he is taxed.

The Toronto Telegram, which is owned and controlled by John Ross Robertson, an ex Conservative member of Parliament for the City of Toronto, has roundly denounced the Whitney Government for doing absolutely nothing during this last seven years, for the development of New Ontario. It points out that the Whitney Government has gone to sleep on the job for this last seven years. It ridiculed Sir James Whitney's Minister of Crown Lands, by likening him to Rip Van Winkle, who slept for twenty years, and got nothing but a cold potato when he woke up.

This country is spending large sums of money in building railways into New Ontario, and still we find the priceless man, the farmer, is not being encouraged to go in and settle in that rich hill-tract. A half mile on both sides of the Trans-continental Railway is reserved by the Whitney Government and settlers are not allowed to settle upon these lands, but must just blaze their way through the woods for half a mile before they can reach the land upon which they are at liberty to settle.

It is not so very long ago since the Toronto News, a leading Conservative organ in the City of Toronto, denounced the Whitney Government, in account of its waton interference with private rights and vested interests. It likened the Whitney Government to a irresponsible South African Republic, that had no regard for right or wrong.

If the leading Conservative newspapers throughout the Province of Ontario are denouncing and have from time to time denounced the Whitney Government, it shows altogether too plainly that they are not deserving of the confidence of the people and therefore it would not be a matter for surprise if their majority of seventy were completely wiped out.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hall's able speech Mr. Stratton addressed the gathering. He dealt with the broken promises of the Whitney administration, which he instanced in a very effective manner. Referring to the finances of the Province, and showed how the expenditure and debt were both increasing at an alarming rate. He hoped the electors would take a public-spirited view of their duty. Ontario was a great Province, with very great possibilities, and it needed progressive Government, and West Peterborough a progressive and energetic member which they would have in Mr. Hall, who had shown by his past services as Dominion representative that he had the interests of the riding at heart, and had the ability and energy to work for their promotion.

A most enthusiastic and successful meeting was brought to a conclusion by hearty cheers for the King and Mr. Hall.

How Thousands Of Ontario French Children "Get In Wrong" From The Start

There are three hundred schools in Ontario in which bilingual text books are used.

These text books are poor affairs and in the hands of incompetent and unqualified teachers they are just that much worse.

You may have heard Sir James Whitney or have read about him saying that "there is no such thing as bilingual schools in Ontario."

Here is a sample lesson, page 8, Premier Lavre De Lecture First Reader. French on one side, English on the other, used in the 300 bilingual schools in this Province:

Le chat voit une souris	The cat sees a mouse.
Courez, souris, courez!	Run, Mouse, Run!
Si tu ne cours pas,	If you do not run
le chat va te prendre	the cat will catch you
Voici la souris;	This is the mouse;
Le chat ne l'a pas prise.	The cat did not catch it.

Do you believe what Sir James Whitney says, or do you believe your eyes?

Conversations are from the French-English First Reader. These unlucky French children are all wrong from the start. They are not getting a fair chance to obtain a decent elementary English education.

There were 5,000 French children shovelled into the population of Ontario. They grow up without a working knowledge of the language of the native country.

VOTE FOR R. R. HALL, and a thorough English education for every child in Ontario.

D. RUSSELL LOST CASE

Unsuccessfully Sued Pinkerton Detective Agency for Libel

JUDGE'S DECISION

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL NOV 29 David Russell loses his case against the Pinkerton Detective Agency and W. J. McNamara, agent for $252,000 damages, which he claimed from them, alleging conspiracy to abduct him, and have him declared insane and incarcerated in a lunatic asylum. Judge Archer delivered his decision in the case this morning, before a crowded court room. The plaintiff took the decision without apparent agitation, merely leaning over occasionally to offer a suggestion to his counsel, who was busy taking notes. In regard to the charges that there was conspiracy to have been declared insane, the Judge declared that the evidence showed that his friends was justified in being anxious to his mental condition. Mr. Campbell, one of Russell's lawyers remarked: "This is only the first block for the defence."

NO WINE FOR SPEAKER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, NOV. 29.—The Hon. Dr. Sproule, Speaker of the House of Commons, has given orders that wine or intoxicating drink of any kind will not be allowed at any of the dinners of social functions held in the Speaker's Chamber. This move of the Speaker's, while showing he has the courage of his conviction, is not a popular move. Many of the members of the House of Commons and the Senate do not approve of the Speaker's action. The Speaker is supposed to be the leader of the social functions at Ottawa. The last Speaker did not hold up the honours of the chair, but not for the same reason.

SOLD BY AUCTION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, NOV. 29.—There was an auction sale at Rideau Hall on Tuesday. The Government, who administer Government House, disposed of a whole lot of wood fittings at a small price to make way for newer and more suitable furniture for their Royal Highnesses. The Piano was one of the first things sold and was disposed of for $4.00. It was an article that did not seem to be required anywhere except in a Vice regal establishment. A peddler was the purchaser. A handsome set of black walnut sideboard, the walnut alone could not be purchased for $100 and which originally cost over $700, realized $7. A large quantity of valuable fittings was disposed of at nominal prices.

SEVEN MONTHS SENTENCE FOR TORONTO CHAUFFEUR

Roy Britnell, the Automobilist Who Ran Down and Killed Whitby Woman in Toronto, Sentenced by Mr. Justice Riddell This Morning.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO NOV 29.—"I do not impose a fine. We should not recognize that money can pay even in part for blood." This was the conclusion of the five newspaper column judgment in which Mr. Justice Riddell today sentenced Roy Britnell, the automobilist, convicted of wilful negligence for running down and killing Mrs. Elizabeth Salter of Whitby on Yonge street some months ago. The sentence was seven months in the common gaol. The case caused a great deal of interest here, being the first conviction in Ontario of an automobilist following many deaths from automobile accidents all over the province.

His Lordship dealt at great length on the way the excessive speed and carelessness in automobiling endangered human life in cities large and small and in country highways. Incidentally he spoke of the right of all human beings to breathe pure air, which was not possible in the wake of some machines. He criticised the methods of the defence strongly, saying it was conclusively evidenced that somebody had tampered with the machine between the time of the accident and the time of inspection by court experts.

THE 'PRENTICE HAND STIRS HORNET'S NEST FOR THE BORDEN COALITION CABINET

The Bee in the Faddist's Bonnet Let Loose in the House of Commons

Mr. Walsh, the Press Gallery representative of the Montreal Herald, contributes the following:

There is quite a little mild tearing of hair over the speech Mr. Burnham, of Peterborough, delivered on Friday. The official explanation of the victory of September 21st, rules the Ne Temere decree out of the list of contributory causes. The Montreal Star, and other papers, say it is a shame to speak of such things. Mr. Burnham rudely upset that apple cart by telling Sir Wilfrid plainly that the decree had a lot to do with his being beaten. Mr. Maclean of Halifax, Mr. Pugsley and Mr. Macdonald got him to repeat, again and again, that the decree played a most important part in securing the defeat of the Government in Ontario, and Mr. Monk, who apparently did not like the trend of affairs, did not succeed in stopping him. Part of what he said is now seen to be charged with high potential of embarrassment to the present Government, and that is why there is such a fluttering in the dove cots. His grievance against Sir Wilfrid was that, when asked "Has the Dominion Government power to legalize or validate any or every marriage solemnized anywhere in Canada?" Mr. Aylesworth replied, "The Government does not consider that it possesses any such power." It was by giving this answer, Mr. Burnham says, that the late Government inflamed Ontario opinion against itself. His own method of answering it, which somewhat uncomfortably applies to the present Cabinet, is this: "If the Government are asked a question whether they have power to enforce the laws of this country, then they should say yes, if they think they have; if they think they have not they should cause an enquiry to be made as to why they have not." This indicates, perhaps, the trend on the debate on Mr. Lancaster's bill will take. Anyhow, Mr. Burnham reiterated, to the scandal, no doubt, of the Montreal Star, that in the elections "the cowardice of the Government in respect to the matter has played a very important part." So far the present Government has not exactly made a reputation for bravery.

PEANUT CASE HEARD IN POLICE COURT TO-DAY

Accused Admitted Taking One Peanut From a Bag---Was Convicted by the Magistrate and Allowed to Go on Suspended Sentence.

A local young man was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of stealing a quantity of peanuts from the C.P.R. freight sheds. He pleaded not guilty, but on the evidence of Mr. Pinchin, who had caught him on and Mr. W. S. Dodd, the young man was proven guilty and allowed to go on suspended sentence.

"You are charged with stealing a quantity of peanuts from the C.P.R. Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the magistrate.

"I am guilty of stealing a quantity of peanuts, but I took only one," reported the accused.

Mr. Pinchin then gave his evidence to the effect that Mr. Dodds had given him instructions to keep a watch on the freight sheds, as there had been several robberies in the last six months. He stated that on the 24th inst. 10.45 a.m. he noticed three young men in the freight sheds, and he crept into the bonded warehouse, where he hid and watched the proceedings. He stated that the accused went over to a bag and loosened it, took out some peanuts and threw some over to his chums. He (Mr. Pinchin) then came out of the warehouse and took the lad into the office where he and Mr. Dodd questioned him. Mr. Pinchin further stated that the lad admitted taking the peanuts to eat himself. Mr. Dodd and Mr. Pinchin's statements were also found in his books.

To this evidence was then put in the box, and gave evidence to the effect that he went down to the shed for some freight, and as it began to rain he and the other two boys lay down in the shed to wait until the rain was over. While they were there he got up and looked over some of the addresses on the goods, and on his rounds came upon a bag of peanuts. It was not very tightly fastened and one nut was sticking out. He said that he just took this one and upon request, gave half of it to one of his friends. He denied having any peanuts in his possession, when Mr. Dodd and Mr. Pinchin spoke to him in the office. Mr. Dodds questioned him: "You admitted taking the peanuts to me?" "I admitted taking a peanut," retorted the prisoner. "Peanut, not peanuts."

The Magistrate then stated that as the accused's statement was very different from Mr. Pinchin's, one must be wrong. He argued that unless the bag had been opened by some person that peanut would not have been sticking out. Considering the evidence, he said that he could do nothing else than find the accused guilty, but as it was the first offence, and one that is often committed by young men according to what Company officials say, he would allow him to go on suspended sentence.

A pickpocketer was fined $22.60, this being his second offence.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortriss, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

PETERBOROUGH LADY SHUT UP IN HANKOW

Mrs. Thos. Jewitt Receives an Interesting Letter From Her Sister Who Was in Wuchang, China

FIRST CITY TO FALL

Mrs. Thomas Jewitt, of 505 Patterson street, city, has just received the following letter from her sister, Mrs. Shantz of Wuchang, China. Mrs. Shantz was Miss Davidson of Peterborough. It will be remembered that Wuchang was the first city to fall into the hands of the revolutionists:

Hankow, October 13th, 1911.

My Dear Sister,—No doubt long before this reaches you, you will have heard of the trouble in China. Again, for the third time in China, we have had to leave our home and belongings, so here we are in Hankow, with only a suit case of clothing for Albert and myself. Last Tuesday morning, not knowing of any trouble at all in the city, I planned to go over to Hankow with one of our family. About an hour before we were to start, we got news that the city gates were shut, and no one could go out. It seemed rather strange to us, but we did not go out to see. Later on we heard the gates were open, but did not feel we should try to go without one of the gentlemen, and they were busy. Then we heard again the gates were shut, and we began to realize we were really shut in, and at the mercy of 2,000 or more Chinese soldiers, who seemed to be running loose all day Wednesday. A lot of them were on a hill just a little way from our place. They had there four or five cannon and guns and swords. They kept shooting all day long. We found out that the rebellion was not against the foreigners, but against their own government, and so these rebels held the city. We were uneasy, and did not know at what time they might turn on us. Wednesday night was very quiet, but shots were fired off and on. There were so many of us (ten missionaries and some children) that had we had to flee for our lives, we would have had a hard time. Mrs. Stewart was with us with a month old baby. Her husband had gone to the mountains to look after building, and when he came back he could not get into the city. We could not get any word from Hankow, and they could not get any word from us, but on Thursday a London mission doctor and another missionary got out over the city wall, and when they got to the river they saw an American launch going by and waved for it to come near to the shore. Who should be in it but the American Consul and several others who were coming over to try to get into Wuchang to get us all out. They succeeded in getting into the city and got permission from the head of the rebels to let all the foreigners and the students in our schools out of the city. Then we all gathered at the American Church Mission and about 40 missionaries marched out of the city. The launch took us to Hankow where it is safer in a way, as we were not shut up, and there are lots of foreign gun boats and soldiers here to protect us. But the three cities are in the hands of the rebels and we have no idea what will come next. We may have to go to Shanghai, but we hope not. The children are in kuling at school. We will leave them there unless we go to Shanghai. It may be a good thing for China if the government is changed, but we would all prefer to be out of China while the change is going on.

Oct 14—We hear this morning that 40,000 troops are coming from the north. If this is so we will have some fighting. Well, the Lord is able to care for us, and we will trust Him, who never makes a mistake. Now do not worry yahoot us. I will let you know quite often how things are going. We cannot say there is no danger, but we hope for the best. From where we are we can get a steamer in ten minutes if need be. The Lord is good and will care for us. With lots of love.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 29, 1911

A LATTER-DAY BOURBON.

The Ottawa Citizen, the leading Conservative organ at the capitol, says: "Sir James Whitney shows only too plainly each time he talks on tax reform that his study of the question has been very superfluous." Perhaps, remarks the Globe, the editor meant "superficial". In fact, both words fit the case. All Sir James' study is "superficial" because he will not take time. It is "superfluous" because he never learns anything.

HOW BROCKVILLE BLUNDTRED.

The riding of Brockville did a grand thing for "king and country," "constitution and British connection" (and for Henri Bourassa and all the anti-British Nationalist brood) when it defeated a statesman like Hon. G. P. Graham to give place to the present brilliant representative, Mr. John Webster, M.P. This gentleman made his "debutt" on Monday in the House of Commons, and the House had an opportunity of learning what manner of man it was the riding of Brockville had preferred to Hon. Geo. Graham. When the revelation was complete, Brockville stood some pegs lower in the estimation of the House. Mr. Graham was a House of Commons favourite. It is the House that has given him the certificate which guarantees for him a brilliant future. Here was a man who could actually charm his opponents into doing his work for him. And the way his successor can mishandle the King's English is something truly marvellous. He is against "religious dissensions, and race suicide," he finds Canadian cheese (precariously) "standing on top of the ladder", he observes that the slogan of the party in the last election was "the grandest war cry that ever was unfurled"; he informs "Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House," "that we have been holding a post-mortem on a dead corpse"; he addresses the members, not like the ordinary men, through the Speaker, but as "friends," and "brothers." He had a whale of a time, beyond any manner of doubt, for the best part of an hour; but he did no more than convince a not overly impartial audience that Brockville had blundered.

PRINCIPLES OF GOVERNMENT.

The Review seems proud of being the apologist of the stainless Whitney government, of high morals. Yet it preaches this doctrine. After assuming that when Mr. Hall is elected he will be in opposition, the organ says

"Those who know that Whitney will be returned to power once again, will realize that in Ontario there is little to expect from a member who is in opposition."

For once, the Review takes the proper measure of the head of the Whitney government. It acknowledges that Sir James Whitney is an autocrat and it feels right in concluding that "in Ontario (under Whitney) there is little to expect from a member in opposition." This may be true when Sir James snubs and coerces and denounces even members of his own party in the House, when they introduce or suggest measures that do not dovetail with his autocratic ideas—measures that grant popular rights. Sir James Whitney may be returned to power, and the organ furnishes the best kind of argument for a substantial reduction of his majority in the House. With his present majority, he can play the tyrant and make it possible "to expect little from a member of the opposition." If he had a smaller majority, he could not defy public opinion and crush the opinion, even of his own followers. A member in opposition, however, if he is the right sort, if he stands for right principles, for popular rights and popular reforms, can be of more real use to a constituency than a member that is an out and out unswerving supporter of a reactionary government. Mr. Hall stands for a platform of popular rights and reform in laws that affect the people adversely, and for the predominance of the popular will in their government. Mr. Peck stands for an "as-you-were" policy that takes a stand against popular rights—and practically says, "the people be hanged."

CONDEMNED BY FRIENDS.

The License Commissioners of West Peterborough take pride in claiming that, under the Whitney Government the License Law is fearlessly administered, and without reference to politics, that its inspectors never sleep and never even "wink". But sometimes, where party skin is not so thick, the Government gets a little reminder of its failure in this regard from some of its own party friends. Below is a report of a little outspoken criticism from two of the Government's own friends, ex-presidents of the East Durham Conservative Association, regarding the enforcement, or failure of enforcement, of the License law. The report says:

The Conservative meeting at Garden Hill the other evening was a very stormy one, and Mr. J. J. Preston was told in very plain terms that he was not looking after the interests of Durham. Dr. A. C. Beatty and H. B. Lawson, two ex-Presidents of the Conservative Association, took Mr. Preston to task, and the meeting was in sympathy with these two gentlemen.

Dr. Beatty asked if any person had ever heard Durham mentioned at a Conservative meeting. He never had, and the Doctor went on to enumerate the good things in the way of public institutions which Durham had lost and was losing, until to-day there was nothing left in the county—not even a Model school. He also spoke of the referendum and the recall, and pointed out the great loss the country suffered in not being able to withdraw a member when that member did not do his duty.

Mr. H. B. Lawson demanded the resignation of License Inspector Kennedy—one of Mr. Preston's own appointments. He stated that Mr. Kennedy was not the right man for the position, and resided in a portion of the county where it was impossible for him to attend properly to the duties. Mr. Lawson, who is a staunch Conservative, was unmistaking in his attack and concluded his address by refusing to allow his name as a delegate to the next convention.

The East Durham license inspector must be a shade more useless than our own, whom a demand for his recall is made.

There is a lesson in this for those who claim to place their temperance principles above party considerations. Here is a chance for them to show that they can show the Whitney Government an example of how to place principle above politics. Mr. Rowell, leader of the Liberal party, pledges himself to the abolition of the three-fifths' clause in the local option law, which has given a black eye to the movement, and kept in commission hundreds of bars that the electors declared by substantial majorities, should be closed, and were kept more than three-fifths open—kept wide open.

CONDEMNED PIECEMEAL.

For a stainless and progressive government, the Whitney government comes in for a good deal of condemnation from its own friends. A Mr. Butler of Toronto, a prominent Conservative, asserts that Sir James Whitney "deserves to lose every seat in Toronto" for keeping the "incompetent Railway and Municipal Board" in existence. But Mr. Butler approves of the general management of the Whitney government and is "off" only on this one matter. But if we were to go through the list, we should find that the piecemeal condemnation of the government makes an aggregate of condemnation, as strong as any Liberal or independent elector entertains. The Tory Toronto Telegram scores the Whitney government to the bone for living up to Sir James' opinion of New Ontario as the "land of the stunted pop" by neglecting its development. The Tory Ottawa Citizen and Hamilton Spectator flay Sir James for his opposition to tax reform and disregard of popular rights. The Tory Toronto World is down on Sir James Whitney for his neglect of educational and other reform, and it is justified in its opposition, since in all his campaign Sir James has never once referred to the planks in the Liberal platform, and the World's hobby, favouring the public ownership of, and operation of, telephone lines. Other Conservative journals and thousands of Conservative electors, condemn Sir James Whitney's hedging and evasion on the subject of bilingual schools. He declares in one breath that there is no such thing as bilingual schools, and in the next excuses his inaction by stating that he is waiting for the report of Dr. Merchant, appointed by Sir James himself, to make investigation into the conditions of schools where Sir James says do not exist. Other Conservative journals laugh out of court Sir James Whitney's absurd and despotic plan of dealing with the teacher famine by compelling them to teach a year in the province before granting them a certificate. When Sir James cannot satisfy progressive and consistent Conservatives, how can he expect to ask the support of Liberals, who feel and know that he is antagonizing and outraging every principle of the democratic government of the province. If we lump the separate objections of Sir James Whitney's friends, we should find that their piecemeal condemnation would make a pretty strong indictment against a "perfect" government, headed by a premier who is backed by a majority so big and bigotted—on party lines—that, he is said with all due respect, Sir James yields to the temptation to realize the metaphor of Bosh Billing's egg, too full of itself to hold anything else.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.

German Rubs Hot Salt Into Borden Government Sores

In the Dominion Parliament on Monday, Mr. W. M. German, Welland, thus dealt with the "Coalition" Government of Mr. Borden:

Mr. German followed. He vigorously attacked the coalition Government on the ground of concessions made by Mr. Borden to Mr. Monk. The latter was described as a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"—Dr. Jekyll in the House voting and Mr. Hyde at home in bed thinking up schemes with which to inflame the minds of the people of Quebec. "Nationalism is a doctrine of treason, a disloyal proposition," declared Mr. German. "The men who hold it should not sit in a Canadian Parliament let alone occupy a position in the Goverment. The Prime Minister has done even worse. He proposes to make Deputy Speaker one of the very men who made some of these statements in the Province of Quebec, to place in succession to you, Mr. Speaker, one of the men who has never denied some of the statements attributed to him in 1910."

MR. BLONDIN'S PROTEST

Mr. P. E. Blondin, of Champlain, the Nationalist member at whom Mr. German was aiming, rose and protested. "These articles were denied in an article in Le Devoir which began: 'Mr. Brodeur, Public Liar,'" he exclaimed.

"I have never heard him deny in the House that he said that in 1837 it was necessary to bore holes in the British flag in order to breathe the air of freedom," persisted Mr. German. "Let him deny it now if he can."

RUBBING IT IN

Mr. Blondin made no move, and Mr. German went on. "Send that to the eighteen ultra-loyal Liberals of Toronto, who signed that manifesto," he said. "Send it to the loyal Orange lodges of Ontario. Put it on the desk of the Prime Minister—for he, too, was very loyal then—that in succession to the Past Grand Master of the Orange lodges he is putting a man who made these statements."

"The hon. member has denied that he made them, and his word must be accepted," interposed Mr. Speaker Sproule.

"I bow to your ruling, of course,," replied Mr. German. "But I deliberately ask him to deny them, if he dare now, on the floor of the House."

Mr. Blondin paid no attention, and was greeted by a roar of Liberal jeers and laughter.

WARNING TO THE PREMIER

Mr. German concluded by warning Premier Borden that he was "tied up to a bad crowd," and that unless he cut loose from it "his political cart will get a jolt from the people of Ontario that will send him and his Bourassa and his Nantels and his Monks into political extinction."

HOW PREMIER WHITNEY BUNGLES TEACHER PROBLEM

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Does Sir James Whitney really believe that by the withholding of teachers' certificates for one year, during which period they must teach in the Province of Ontario, that he will hold them permanently within the borders of this section of the Dominion; if he does believe that such a lame display of rest-tapeism will keep teachers in this Province, instead of remedying the widespread retrograde conditions that now exist, then his, indeed, must be a hopeless case of political blindness.

What are the incentives, or, rather call them rewards—for the word is allowable—to any young man taking up the profession of public school teaching in this province? I don't refer to High School teaching, for in that higher branch of the profession there is, I will admit, many fairly lucrative principalships held out to the aspirant. It has been charged frequently by the Liberal candidates, during this campaign, that the Whitney Government has continually discriminated in favour of the University of Toronto versus the public schools, when the question of educational appropriations were before the House. With that charge I fully agree, and, indeed, will supplement the accusation; for, not only has the present Government favoured the University of Toronto, in its annual expenditure on education, but it has also favoured the honour graduates of that University as against the many public school teachers, with first-class certificates, who have had a long and honourable career in the teaching profession.

The regulations existing insist that a public school inspectorship shall only be given to honour graduates in classics at the University, not even a Bachelor of Arts degree sufficing. Whatever advantages the acquisition of these honours gives to a public school inspector is not only highly debatable, but laughably absurd. There are several public school inspectors in this Province who do not possess even a B. A. degree; yet, whose ability, instead of ever having been questioned, has been largely extolled. Why, then, this "honours" clause? The regulations also provide that an Inspector shall have had seven years' experience as a public school teacher in this province. Surely it would be a much more reasonable course to extend this teaching period to ten years, whereby they would gain ten thousand times more knowledge of practical pedagogy than they would in expounding Homer within the classic shades of University College. It is the legitimate ambition of many public school teachers to qualify for the office of Inspector, in the course of time; it is, apparently, the ambition of Sir James Whitney and his colleague, Dr. Pyne, to make that office the prize not of marked ability in the realm of purely pedagogical knowledge, but of academical pedantry.

This is one, and not by any means, the least, cause of the unattractiveness of the profession, as the abolition of the model schools is the prime factor of the scarcity of qualified teachers in the profession. You cannot, unconditionally, centralize education in a province whose aim is so great, and whose interests are so great, as is Ontario. Yet the Premier, by the abolition of the model schools in the northern districts, the consequent segregation of the Normal schools into the wealthier sections of the Province, and the unnecessary toadying to the University, has attempted to do this in his legislation.

He has shown an unalterable obstinancy in his whole educational policy. If he will not change this policy let the electorate change the Government.

Yours truly,

KING'S DAUGHTERS
The King's Daughters wish it to be understood that the proceeds from the Charity Ball, to be held on New Year's night, will be devoted to their work in Peterborough, not to the [illegible] S. M. A misunderstanding having arisen in the Ministerial Association, owing to a mistake in the Monday's edition of the morning paper, which mistake was corrected in Tuesday's edition.

A WONDER WORKER
"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

DR. GRENFELL IN PETERBORO'

When Dr. Grenfell was in Peterborough two years ago, the Opera House was well filled with an admiring audience, which applauded most heartily the talk which he gave concerning his work. How intently the people listened as he told of his experience, floating out seaward on the cake of ice—how he had to kill his dogs and get the skins to keep himself from freezing—how simply and humbly he told the story and how the audience cheered at its conclusion.

YOUNG MAN IS FINED $10 FOR ASSAULTING GIRL

Ralph Watson who was arraigned in "disapproval of this conduct," concluded the Magistrate. "I find him guilty of assault and the sentence is that he pay a fine of $10 and costs to be paid forthwith."

"He has no money," said Mr Kerr "can't your Worship give him some time to pay it."

"A young man working like he professes to, and no person to keep but himself, should have some money," retorted the Magistrate.

"But we find that he has not," answered Mr Kerr.

"Yes, I suppose you would be likely to find that out first," concluded the Magistrate, but he did not alter the judgment.

HEALTH OF CITY GOOD

Dr McPherson, Medical Health Officer, reports that the health of the city is exceptionally good at present. There are a few cases of scarlet fever and one of diphtheria. This represents the sum total of contagious diseases within the precincts of Peterborough. The condition of the water is also good and free of bacteria.

MUNICIPAL MELTING POT

The name of Mr. R. N. Jones, builder and contractor, is being whispered around in municipal gossip, it being assumed that the owner of the said name will aspire to aldermanic honors in the coming municipal elections. When questioned by the Examiner to-day, Mr. Jones was very indifferent about the matter. He said that he had been approached by certain parties about the matter, but as yet was undecided as to whether he would run or not. Mr. Jones has never tried to enter the field on two former occasions.

Mr. E. N. McWilliams has also been mentioned as a possible candidate. But to the Examiner, he flatly refused to enter the contest pleading lack of time and pressure of business as his reason for standing aloof.

SERIES OF SERMONS

Next Sunday, the Rev. W. C. Riddell will continue his series of sermons at the Park street Baptist church on the general theme "Some Questions the Peterborough Public are asking and their answer." The sermons will be preached in the evening at 7 p.m.

December 3rd—A question for business men. What Christ offered or patronized, and how to help the poor.

December 17—A question for children. Should Santa Claus be Honored or Ignored in Christmas Celebrations?

December 24—A question for getting ready for Christmas morning. What is Christmas? Why Celebrate it?

Mr. Riddell extends a cordial invitation to all to hear these questions discussed. Special music will be rendered by the choir.

THE WAY VOTERS LOSE THEIR VOTE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I went to registrar my name at 264 Rubidge street, as I had a postcard from Mr. Peck, stating that it was my place to put my name down. Of course I went around and did so, Monday night. Now, I was informed while at work that I had made a mistake in booking my name there. I believe this person is either on the committee, or else a worker for the Conservative cause. For I saw him in the committee rooms. He asked me which side I voted on, and I didn't give a satisfactory answer. He began stating that if I would vote for Peck he would see I got my vote, in spite of my name being on the wrong books; if not, then he hinted it would be taken off their books, and my vote would be in jeopardy. You see, if I told him I would vote for Mr. Peck I should have no trouble, but if not, then I have to take my chances for a vote. It would be a help if we voters were properly informed as to where we should book. I live opposite King and Park streets and that, I believe cuts me out of No. 1 boundary, of which I was unaware. Another man lost his vote in the last election through the same course as mine. I am sorry that the principles of some workers are not fair. I am a British-born subject, born in London, England, and did much political work, although I am only very young. I am respected at my work and at home, and I think we should not be treated this way.

Yours truly,
Edwin J. Hamilton.

Note.—This gentleman need not be afraid of losing his vote. If his name is on the voters' list, as a registered elector, he will have full right to vote in the division where his name appears on the voters' list. An agent of Mr. Peck has no right to, or power to promise, the right to vote to any man, even his corrupt promise that if the candidate for registration would "vote right," he would be "passed," has no bearing on the undoubted right to vote of a man officially registered. The voter should not be dependent, and will not be deprived of his vote on a mere technicality.

HOCKEY

All T. A. S. members interested in hockey, are invited to attend a meeting at St. Aphonsus Lyceum tonight.

Messrs. McGeachie and Picard, the committee appointed by the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club to arrange the matter, have completed arrangements with the Y.M.C.A. by which the players of both intermediate and junior O.H.A. teams will begin training in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on Friday night. Mr. J. J. Thompson, physical director of the Y.M.C.A. will put the boys through a complete course of training with the object of having both squads in the best of physical condition when they get into the game. The course will consist of dumb bell drill, free hand exercise, mat work, basketball, running and swimming and classes have been arranged for three nights each week as follows:

Monday night, 7 to 8 p.m.
Wednesday night, 7 to 8 p.m.
Friday night, 7.30 to 8.30 p.m.

In order to put on this work, Mr. Thompson has had to change his regular class schedule and the management of the hockey club appreciate very highly the interest he is taking in the work. Every player, junior or senior, who expects to play this winter, will have to turn out for this preliminary training and all players are asked to be present at the meeting of the executive at the Examiner office to-morrow, Thursday, night at 7.30 o'clock, when details will be completed in connection with the first workout at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night. All intermediate and junior players who are going to turn out this winter must attend this meeting to-morrow night and also take in the training course.

Physical condition counts a lot in hockey as well as in other games, and the executive plans to have every man physically fit when hockey parade begins. Mr. Thompson will make the work interesting as well as profitable.

FELL FROM A WINDOW

A somewhat serious accident befell Mr. Herbert McCannon of Park St., this morning.

He was engaged in removing the scaffolding of a building on High St., and in leaning out of the window to the progress of the operation, he fell out. The Spence Ambulance was sent for, and, arriving shortly, took the injured person to the Nicholls' Hospital, where he was tended by Dr. McCulloch.

It is understood that the injuries sustained in the fall are rather serious.

BITTEN BY DOG

A motor-cyclist Thomas Smith, from Toronto, was the victim of a dog bite this afternoon, when attempting to separate two dogs, which were fighting on Charlotte street, near the G. T. R. station, one of them attacked him, biting him somewhat severely on the ankle. The wound was cauterized, and no bad results are anticipated.

Long Service Awards

A meeting of the executive committee of the Peterborough Rifle Association was held last night at the conclusion of which Major L. M. Hayes was presented with the Colonial Auxiliary Forces officer's decoration, certifying that he has been an officer for twenty years and Major W. H. Atwood received the Colonial Auxiliary Forces long service medal for twenty years service. Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg made the presentation and both others made suitable replies.

YOUNG MAN IS FINED $10 FOR ASSAULTING GIRL

Ralph Watson who was arraigned in the police court a week ago on a charge of assaulting a young lady named Charlotte Savage, again appeared this morning and convicted. A fine of $10 and costs to be paid forthwith was the punishment meted out by Magistrate Dumbleton in the police court.

Watson was represented by Mr. F. D. Kerr and pleaded not guilty. After the evidence had been taken, the case was adjourned until this morning when it was proceeded with. Miss Savage being recalled by the defence. She gave her evidence in part as follows: "I was waiting for my girl friend to come out of church on Sunday night. I walked up and down the main street, and getting tired waiting, I started to walk to where I am employed as domestic, on Lock street. As I walked down past Charlotte street, the accused, who apparently had been standing on the corner, followed me. He stepped up to me when we got down a little further and asked to see me home. I refused, but he came on, and we walked on down as far as the C.P.R. station. All the time I kept telling him that I did not wish his company. He kept talking to me all the while, but I merely answered him. He said that he knew he had seen me on the previous Saturday night and that he knew I was a stranger in the city. (Witness was English and in the city only a couple of weeks.) He said that he was only in the city a week or so, and was also a stranger. Just as we reached a Salvation Army corner, he caught my arm. I said, "Oh, it's alright," for I did not like him to do that. He hung onto my arm, and would not let me go, and kept asking me how far I had to go. He held onto my arm tighter and I pushed him away, and he said, 'Never mind, there is no person looking.' Then when we reached the gate, he grabbed me and kissed me and I went to go into the house, but he held me and said, 'Don't go yet, kiddy, it isn't 9 o'clock.' He he asked me to go for a walk, and I refused. He tried to make a date with me and I refused. He then let go my arm and I went inside the gate, he following, and just as I got in he grabbed me by both arms, and kissed me again. He lifted me right off the ground. As soon as he let go I went into the house. I had previously told him if he did not let me alone, I would make trouble for him.

Watson in the box. "I met her at the corner of George and Simcoe Sts. and spoke to her and as she smiled, I stepped up to her and asked to see her home. She did not refuse, and I went down street with her. When we crossed Charlotte street she stopped, and I caught her arm and said, 'Thank you.' I held onto her, she did not object and went to the gate with her, the previous conversation coming to be agreeable to both."

What brought about this peculiar demonstration asked Mr. Kerr.

"I don't remember," replied the witness. "When I kissed her, she said, 'I must go now,' and then I kissed her hand and kissed her once, and that ended it. There was no impropriety, but he seemed to take offence because I kissed her the second time so I left saying that I did not been welcome on the last."

His Worship: "When a man takes onto a girl up from a strange city he does not go with any decent or proper motive. Those were my sentiments precisely. He evidently thought he was a woman of the street. He could be liberty to act in a manner that no decent woman would stand for."

P. C. Mather was called and identified the accused as the man he had arrested with the assistance of Mr. Detective Duvall. Deputy Reeve and Mr. Anderson also identified the prisoner as the man they had seen with the girl. Evidence for the defence was then taken.

MUNICIPAL MELTING POT

The name of Mr. R. N. Jones, lawyer and ex-mayor, is being whispered around as municipal gossip. It is understood that the owner of the said name will aspire to aldermanic honours in the coming municipal election. When questioned by the Examiner to-day, Mr. Jones was very reticent about the matter. He said that he had been approached by certain parties about the matter, but as yet was undecided as to whether he would run or not. Mr. Jones has retired to cover the field on two former occasions.

Mr. E. N. McWilliams has also been mentioned as a possible candidate. But to the Examiner, he flatly refused to enter the arena. Pleading lack of time and pressure of business as his reason for standing aloof.

THE WAY VOTERS LOSE THEIR VOTE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I went to registrar my name at 204 Rubidge street, as I had a postcard from Mr. Peck, stating that it was my place to put my name down. Of course I went around and did so, Monday night. Now, I was informed while at work that I had made a mistake in booking my name there. I believe this person is either on the committee, or else a worker for the Conservative cause. For I saw him in the committee rooms. He asked me which side I voted on, and I didn't give a satisfactory answer. He began stating that if I would vote for Peck he would see I got my vote, in spite of my name being on the wrong books; if not, then he hinted it would be taken off their books, and my vote would be in jeopardy. You see, if I told him I would vote for Mr Peck I should have no trouble, but if not, then I have to take my chances for a vote. It would be a help if we voters were properly informed as to where we should look. I live opposite King and Park streets and that I believe cuts me out of No. 4 boundary, of which I was unaware. Another may lost his vote in the last election through the same course as mine. I am sorry that the principle of some workers are not fair. I am a British-born subject, born in London, England, and did much political work, although I am only very young. I am respected at my work and at home, and I think we should not be treated this way.

Yours truly,
Edwin J. Hamilton.

Note.—This gentleman need not be afraid of losing his vote. If his name is on the voters' list, as a registered elector, he will have full right to vote on the division where his name appears on the voters' list. An agent of Mr. Peck has no right to, or power to promise, the right to vote to any man, even his corrupt promise that if the candidate for registration would "vote right," he would be "passed," has no bearing on the undoubted right to vote of a man officially registered. The voter should not be dependent, and will not be deprived of his vote on a mere technicality.

HOCKEY

All T. A. S. members interested in hockey, are invited to attend a meeting at St. Aphonsus Lyceum, tonight.

Messrs. McGeachie and Picard, the committee appointed by the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club to arrange the matter, have completed arrangements with the Y.M.C.A. by which the players of both intermediate and junior O.H.A. teams will begin training in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on Friday night. Mr. J. H. Thompson, physical director of the Y.M.C.A. will put the boys through a complete course of training with the object of having both squads in the best of physical condition when they get into the game. The course will consist of dumb bell drill, free hand exercise, mat work, basketball, running and swimming and classes have been arranged for three nights each week as follows:

Monday night, 7 to 8 p.m.
Wednesday night, 7 to 8 p.m.
Friday night, 7.30 to 8.30 p.m.

In order to put on this work, Mr. Thompson has had to change his regular class schedule and the management of the hockey club appreciate very highly the interest he is taking in the work. Every player, junior or senior, who expects to play this winter will have to turn out for the preliminary training and all players are asked to be present at the meeting of the executive at the Examiner office to-morrow, Thursday night at 7.30 o'clock, when details will be completed in connection with the first workout at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night. All intermediate and junior players who are going to turn out this winter must attend this meeting to-morrow night and also take in the training course.

Physical condition counts a lot in hockey as well as in other games and the executive plans to have every man physically fit when hockey practice begins. Mr. Thompson will make the work interesting as well as profitable.

FELL FROM A WINDOW

A somewhat serious accident befell Mr. Herbert McCannon of Park St., on Saturday.

He was engaged in removing the coffin-plate of a boarding on High St., and in leaning out of the window in the progress of the operation, fell out. The Stevens Ambulance was sent for and, arriving shortly, conveyed the unfortunate to the Nedahi Hospital where he was tended by Dr. McCulloch.

It is understood that the injuries sustained in the fall are rather serious.

BITTEN BY DOG

A young lad Thomas Smith, from Ennismore was bitten by a dog last Saturday afternoon when attempting to separate two dogs, which were fighting. Constable Carter, near the G. T. THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I ALWAYS see the darkest side of things when I first wake up. I shall feel very differently about this matter as soon as I have bathed and had my breakfast.

Across foot of the bed in the home of one of my friends hangs a little pen-pictured card on which the above words are written in her own hand-writing.

When I naturally inquired what was the significance of this most peculiar wall decoration, she ruched hastily. Then she colored down and explained.

"When I wake up in the morning," she said, "I am apt to feel very much depressed. If there is any little trouble on my mind it looks like a mountain to me. For the first few minutes after I wake up I hate myself and everyone else and I wish I were dead, or better still, had never been born. But in an hour or two after I've bathed and had my breakfast, I begin to feel quite differently. I see things then in quite another light. I'm sure an thing that's troubling me is going to come out all right and I'm happy just to be alive.

"Well, when Cousin Ann was here last spring — you know she's that very original bachelor cousin of mine she used to laugh at me about this sudden transformation. And when she'd come into my room in the morning, find me blue and depressed and afraid I couldn't get this thing done right, or that terrible thing was going to happen, she'd remind me that I had felt just the same the day before and get all over it in an hour or two. And I'd always say, 'Yes, but this is different.'

Finally one morning after breakfast when I had just decided that I was glad I had been born after all, and that I would probably be able to make that speech before the mothers' club, and that if I didn't the world wouldn't come to an end anyway, she brought me a pen and paper and made me write down that statement, you see. Then she passe-partouted it and hung it at the foot of the bed where I'd have to see it as soon as I opened my eyes. Of course, I often laugh at it, but it does help me not to get so absurdly blue and depressed."

A very eccentric idea?

Yes, I suppose so. But is it necessarily such an absurd one?

How many times you face some obstacle, saying, "I never CAN overcome that!" Of course, you do overcome it, but when the next obstacle rises up you face just the same way and face just the same things with the same conviction. How many times when the encouragement has set back do you say, "For me I shall never get over this." I'm not getting the least bit better." And then he has two or three good nights' sleep, things go well with him, and he is all optimism to think it can't be so quick. But when the next setback comes, you go to the bottom of the dumps and are discouraged as ever.

How many times the road ahead looks so dark to you that you do not believe it can ever be bright again. And then by and by things straighten out as they always do, the sun comes out from behind the clouds, a slant of sunlight falls athwart your path and then another and another until all the gray heaven has vanished. And yet the next time the road looks black you are just as certain as ever that the sun never could come out from behind those particular clouds and that your road will be gloomy to the journey's end.

Now why shouldn't it be so useful to preserve a record of your optimistic and cheerful moments as a sort of landmark to cheer you the next time you travel the road of discouragement.

The wave-ebbs on the sand a record of its highwater mark achieved at last, and no matter how long the tide ebbs, we never doubt but that it will find its way back again to that highwater mark.

Why should it be so absurd for us to mark little records to remind ourselves of our high-water marks of happiness and achievement and to reassure us when the tide is ebbing that it will surely flow again?

WASHES AWAY PIMPLES
YES—OVER NIGHT

No remedy that we ever sold for Eczema, Psoriasis and all other diseases of the skin has given more thorough satisfaction than the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

But our patrons find that D.D.D. not only gives instant relief to the itching, burning skin, quickly driving out all the disease germs, but it is also the most delightful wash for the complexion they ever used. Absolutely harmless and pleasant to use, D.D.D. cleanses the skin of all minor impurities such as rashes and pimples, over night, and used with the wonderful D.D.D. Soap, it leaves the skin as clear and smooth as that of a child.

It is now generally known that there is nothing that can equal D.D.D. as a household remedy for all skin troubles, no matter what they are.

We ourselves are fully convinced of the merits of this wonderful remedy. If you have a pimply skin trouble don't let it develop into a chronic skin disease.

Better drop in and talk it over with us, or write at once to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 19 Colborne St., Toronto, for a free trial bottle. We know D.D.D. will bring relief.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Two good games were played in the Interclub cross-basket league last night. The first brought the Hustlers and Dimes together and it sure was some game. The Hustlers started off at a fast clip and had a comfortable lead at half time, but after the breathing spell the Dimes took a brace and were within two points of them, the score when Bat of the Hustlers dropped in three baskets from centre floor, and Ole of the Hustlers also added two, which put the game on ice for the Hustlers. Score, Hustlers 24, Dimes 17. The second game was also very fast and after some fast work the Shamrock defeated the Buccaneers. Score 7 to 4.

INFORMATION WANTED

The following letter is self-explanatory.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 21, 1911.
Editor Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont., Can.

Dear Sir,

Can you give me any information regarding the descendants of Thomas Page, who formerly lived at Lousia Ter. Mass., that moved to Ostan or Upper Canada, as it was then called, about 1795. It is supposed that some of his descendants now live in your locality, though possibly those now there are not named Page, but may be Wright, Guernsey, Dunn or some other name which married into the Page family at an early date.

It appears that owing to the death of other heirs a large property amounting to several million dollars reverts to this branch of the family and has been lying dormant in the hands of the trustees and executors for many years past.

It is supposed that Thomas Page lived until about 1830, but it now becomes important to trace the time and place of his death and names of his descendants.

Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated by

Yours very truly,

A RUNAWAY

A disastrous runaway occurred yesterday about 2.30 on Charlotte street, west, wherein a team of spirited horses, attached to a light market wagon, belted while left standing in front of a residence. They ran west on Charlotte street, and when out near the boundary, a front wheel caught on an electric light pole, with the result that the wheel was demolished, and the tongue pulled out, smashing the front of the wagon badly at the same time. The horses ran on with increased speed, until they reached the depot on the hill where they took to the dirt. Here they ran amuck, one kicking over a ridge, hanging the other on top of it. Some men who had witnessed the whole proceedings, ran out and grabbed one of the horses by the head, and managed to restrain them. The horses' legs were badly cut, where their shoes came in contact. The wagon was a total wreck, and the horses will require rest after being for some time.

DON'T SAY YOU'RE OLD

You Can Feel Younger by Keeping Up Your Strength

It is a mistake for elderly people to let themselves think they are getting old.

What if you have had 60 or 70 birthdays? You can keep your mind young and active, and you can also feel younger than your age if you guard your bodily strength.

Mr. George B. Smith, aged 71, of Smithville, Ont., says that Vinol cured him of a case of stomach trouble of long standing, and that he now feels as strong and can do as good a day's work as he did thirty years ago, which he owes to Vinol. "I think it is worth its weight in gold for any ailment of old people," says Mr. Smith.

This delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, strengthens and invigorates all feeble run down people, and it is the unanimity of thousands of old persons who say it has prolonged their years. We guarantee that Vinol will do all that we say, and put back your money if it does not. A. Try our Cobbling Department. We'll make your old shoes look as good as new.

We repair all kinds of shoes. We repair them far better than most shoe stores do—at a less price, too.

This is easy to say and easy to prove. Hunt up any old pair of worn out shoes you have at home, bring them to us—we'll make them as good, or nearly as good, as new.

This is only possible by the perfect equipment of our repair shop.

We use only the very best oak-tanned leathers.

Let us "make one pair of shoes now" and we'll convince and convert you.

Prompt service.

TONE

It is possible maybe—to build a piano that in exterior appearance might resemble a though this is doubtful, so largely does real art enter into the making of these Dominion-wide pianos. But there is no duplicating the tone of the genuine Heintzman & Co. piano. It is the outcome of half a century of patient study and labor. This cannot be equalled and tone is the real test of a high-class piano.

MORE OF WHAT "ONE WHO KNOWS" KNOWS ABOUT PARTIZAN LICENSE ADMINISTRATION

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of November 11th, there appeared a letter written by me in reference to license administration in Peterborough, and I showed in that letter that party politics played a big part in the granting, and putting the law in force, from the time of dismissing Mr. George Cochrane, up to the present time. I backed up what I said with facts, which have not been disputed, because they cannot. I thought that the Ministerial Association would take the matter up. They are, I should think, interested in it, as the law put in force. But they seem to be satisfied to preach about the evils of liquor, but are slow to move when facts are placed before them.

In my first letter, I showed how Mrs. Bowman, a widow, and her son-in-law had been treated about the license in the C. P. R. Hotel. I showed that the Bradburn estate and the Chamberlain estate had got a permit good enough in quarters while others who had enjoyed the law, had been refused, at great loss. I showed how Mr. Lamquin had been forced to buy out Mrs. Bowman, if he wanted to stay in business, and it is holy to relate that the Licence Commissioners do not know of the methods of the Inspector.

Now, I want to say something more and get down to the present time. We, our Inspector, Mr. Joseph Stewart, is a funny man. He wants the public and the preachers to think that he is carrying a great responsibility. He wants the public and the preachers to think that as Inspector he is Johnny on the spot. He was away telling the Lord's Gang of Police that if they or some of the shebeens here that many of the liquor men were breaking the law, no matter what time of day or night, he would be there like a flash. Well, the phone was used [illegible] a certain hotel at 4 o'clock on a certain Sunday, but to Mr. Joseph Stewart's flash, appeared to be much, when he answered the phone, he went to one hotel in five minutes. He was, I understand, at 5 o'clock, the police entered the peaceful, made a good capture, and then was a 50-to-1 that conviction. Joseph Stewart spent an hour and three minutes after the phone rang. What a flash! This Inspector always does his work so that the press has to make him straight [illegible] as I always has been. Does he not remember the great detective [illegible] showed in apprehending light the Express Bandit on a certain occasion? Mr. Stewart's light has not vanished like smoke. Does he think the people of Peterborough do not know of the new scheme he is about to launch, whereby an innocent person can get blacklisted. Does he not get wise to the way [illegible] up about liquor sent from Peterborough to a temperance house outside the corporation, which he was told how to work this points to get a big haul. But he bungled the job by making a seizure before the goods were delivered and put himself in the soup and spoiled the whole thing. He was too much of a flash Jack. It was only the other day that he was waiting to the peak of politics and talking like a lunatic against knocking a man down with the sword or gun or arm. How does the [illegible] Inspector Stewart think he can [illegible] to not remember the raid of the police upon the gambling and liquor rooms in the National Hotel some [illegible] time ago. Well does he not know that he had nothing to do with it. He was not the one who made the capture at all. Yet, at the Presbyterian church, when he was speaking on a speech what a great Sunday work He made. He was the cold wind, brilliant capture he had made of the [illegible] lawyers and other prominent citizens in an hotel, gambling. Everybody knows that he had nothing to do with the business, but only came late on the scene after he had been phoned for. Does he think that the people do not remember [illegible] Does he think that the people do not know where the police got the liquor when Crozier's house was pulled? I could ask him a lot more puzzles but I will leave them and refer to Mr. Stewart's own words in the Commissioner's office, when he said that the law as been disregarded, but [illegible] after it with all my might. It make me tired to see and hear them speak [illegible] and boast of how they are enforcing the law with [illegible] justice.

One Who Knows.

GO FORTH CLUB CONCERT A SUCCESSFUL EVENT

A splendid concert was held last night at the Knox church, under the auspices of the Go Forth Club. There was a large audience and the musical numbers, which were of an exceptionally high order, were listened to with marked attention. The proceeds of the concert will go to the charity. Following is the programme:

Solo—The Orchestra.
Duet—Misses Geraldine Beer and Olive Johnston.
Tableau—The Ten Virgins, [illegible] parts.
Duologue—Mrs. Morgans, Operator of Cooks, Suppers and Bachelors, Miss [illegible]; Geraldine Beers, Ethel Shepherd and T. Harvey.
Duet—Misses Jessie Miller and Olive Barrett.
Selection—The Orchestra.
Solo—Miss Mabel Pearce.
Recitation—Miss Ethel Shepherd.
Duologue—"The Conversation of the Comfortable Misses Mary Jane and Ann Adelaide," Misses Mary Jane Ann Adelaide and Ethel Doolittle.
Instrumental—Miss Olive Johnston.
Monologue—Dorothy [illegible].
Selection—The Orchestra.

After the programme refreshments were served and the evening ended with the national anthem.

Rink St. Drain Matter Settled City Will Furnish Pipes---Board Of Works Has Busy Session

The Board of Works met last evening with Ald. Metherall in the chair.

Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Quaker Oat Co., waited on the Board and suggested that a 12-in. or 15-in. main be put in at this point to drain the ground around there. The company's drain would be made to feed into this main. The Board drew attention to the rough condition in which the crossing on Hunter street is placed. The City Engineer was instructed to look over the crossing and also into the condition of draining and report back.

Ald. Metherall said that the meeting was called principally for the purpose of considering the reply from Mr. Burnham regarding the Rink street drain. Mr. McClellan was present and gave the Board some idea of the conditions. He said that if the Council would furnish the pipes, the Government would continue the drain from where they left off up to the lake.

"Would you guarantee to keep it opened?" asked the Mayor.

"No," said Mr. McClellan, "we could not make such a guarantee."

The dock is being filled up, and the drain will have to be extended 100 ft. will be put through the clay fill. ing of the wharf. Mr. McClellan stated that he would have an inspector there, but they could not make a guarantee to keep the drain open. Rink street is the lowest part of the drain.

Ald. Butler: I think we had better accept this proposition. I think we should lay the pipe and they will put it in. It is quite a saving to the city.

Ald. Metherall: We have spent a lot of money there and it was all fresh and they began the wharf.

Ald. Butler: I told you it was foolish to do that when you were doing it.

Ald. Butler moved that the proposition be accepted.

The Government to be spoken to again.

Mr. McClellan: I will give you a letter stating that it is to be left open.

That was satisfactory.

The City Engineer asked that the city be allowed to have a manhole in the drain, to which Mr. McClellan agreed.

Ald. Butler moved, and it was seconded and carried.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. McDonald, that the Board of Works purchase 1,000 feet of 12-in. pipe and a number of 15-in. pipe for Rink street drain, April. Some people have to be moved at the end of the [illegible] to be notified to move them.

A letter was read from [illegible] ginger re a culvert on Hunter street. It was found that there was not a leak in the water pipe on the private property. The [illegible] of the water works [illegible] was no leak, but [illegible] if there was not a leak there was a strong spring. The [illegible] pected, however, that [illegible] been opened up and the water [illegible]

The Bell Telephone Co. [illegible] be allowed to erect poles on Mark street. The power company were trying to get [illegible] were cut off their poles and [illegible] the night that the current was [illegible]

REGIMENTAL CONCERT ANOTHER SUCCESS

The second of a series of weekly concerts held at the armouries last evening was a great success. Enthusiasm is now warming up concerts [illegible] and the musical numbers were an improvement upon last week. Arrangements have been made for an open night next Tuesday when all members are invited to bring their lady friends. A special programme will be organized.

At last night's concert Co.-Sgt. Sneed occupied the chair and the programme consisted of the following numbers:

1. Drummer Dyer—Recitation.
2. Qm.-Sgt. Edwards—Song.
3. Pte. Gray and Gosden, mouth-organ duet.
4. Sgt. Skates, instrumental.
5. Co.-Sgt. Sneed—Recitation.
6. Drummer Dyer—Plate-Baton work.
7. Pte. Eccleston—Instrumental.
8. Pte. Gosden—Song.

BREWERY VS. "BANISH THE BAR"

To the Editor of the Examiner

Dear Sir,—Will you give me space enough for temperance friends to remember when they go to the polls on next Thursday that we can be under 11th thirty in favor for Mr. Peck, they are voting for a director of the Calcutt Brewing Company. What encouragement or temperance views, or what temperance [illegible] can be expected from one who is so closely identified with the liquor trade. North ward, [illegible] party have come out with a temperance declaration to [illegible] and I will not be content [illegible] to abolish the bar, but I would be willing to [illegible] step [illegible] to vote for [illegible] and I appeal to temperance people [illegible] and trust [illegible] temperance people [illegible] temperance people [illegible] to vote for Mr. Peck on next Thursday.

Yours truly,

WILL TAKE THE OATH

The Final Ceremony in Creation of New Cardinals Takes Place To-day

HATS WILL BE GIVEN

Rome, Nov. 30—The final ceremony in the creation of the new members of the sacred college will take place today in the Hall of the Beatification, when the red hat will be conferred upon the eighteen new cardinals, including Mgr. Falconio, formerly papal delegate to Canada and the United States; Mgr. Farley, Archbishop of New York, and Mgr. O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston.

The Pope expressed the hope that the example of Catholics in England and Holland would influence the return of other countries to the bosom of the church. He spoke sorrowfully of the persecution of the church in France, trusting that divine mercy would hasten the day of repentence and end by imparting the apostolic benediction.

The new cardinals have received the text of the oath which they will take today before entering the public consistory. It is a modified form of the ancient oath, and is as follows:

"I ..... of the Holy Roman Church, cardinal of ..... promise and swear from this hour forward as long as I live to be faithful and obedient to the Blessed Peter, the Holy Roman Apostolic Church and the Most Holy Lord Pius X., and also his canonically elected successors. I swear to give no counsel, not to concur in anything and not to aid in any way against the Pontifical Majesty or person, never to disclose affairs entrusted to me by the Nuncios, or in their letters, willingly or knowingly, to their detriment or dishonor; to be ever ready to aid them to retain, defend or recover their rights against all. I shall fight with all my zeal and all my force for their honor and dignity. I shall defend the legates and nuncios of the apostolic see in all places under my jurisdiction, provide for their safe journey, treat them honorably on their coming, during their coming and on their return, and resist, even to the shedding of blood, whoever would attempt anything against them.

"I shall try in every way to assert, uphold, preserve, increase and promote the rights, even temporal, the liberty, the honor, privileges and authority of the Holy Roman Church and our lord the Pope and his successors. When it shall come to my knowledge that some machination prejudicial to those rights, which I cannot prevent occurring, I shall immediately make it known to the Pope, his successor, or someone qualified to convey such knowledge to him.

"I swear to observe and fulfil the regulations, decrees, ordinances, dispensations, reservations and provisions of the apostolic mandates and constitutions of Sixtus First of happy memory and to combat with every effort, heretics, schismatics and rebellious utterances against our lord the Pope and his successors."

A promise to obey all summons, not to sell property of the church, and to remain free of civil powers follows, after which the oath concludes.

"Likewise I shall observe minutely each and all decrees, especially those which have emanated from the sacred congregation of ceremonies, or come to come from it relative to the sublime dignity of the cardinalate. Nor shall I do anything repugnant to the honor and dignity of the cardinalate."

Next Friday afternoon all the new cardinals will go to the Vatican and on their arrival they formed into procession, and preceded and accompanied by the Swiss and Noble Guards and personages of the papal court, passed through the magnificent halls to the state apartment.

The newly-created cardinals, were then introduced into the presence of the pontiff. Pius X permitted each of the cardinals to kiss his hat, and his foot, afterwards imposing upon each the red hat as a first tangible proof of their supreme dignity.

Cardinal Falconio, being the dean of the newly-created cardinals, delivered an address warmly thanking the Pope, presenting his respectful homage and placing the services of the new cardinals at the complete disposal of the pontiff.

SHUSTER MUST GO.

Otherwise Russia Will March Into Persia.

Teheran, Nov. 30.—Russia's ultimatum has been delivered to Persia. Russia demands the instant dismissal of W. Morgan Shuster, the American treasurer-general of Persia, whose administration of the financial department has resulted in complications and indemnity for the expenses incurred in sending Russian troops to Persia.

Should the dismissal of Mr. Shuster not be carried out with 48 hours, Russian troops will march on Teheran, and the additional expenses will be added to the indemnity. It is stated confidently that the National Council will not comply with the demands. Mr. Shuster, in an interview yesterday, said that the cancellation of his contract rested entirely with the Persian National Council.

Whatever may be the feeling of the Persian people in the present affair—and it is said to favor Shuster—Persia is helpless before the Russian Cossacks. In some quarters it is rumored that the Russian action, which is looked upon as an affront offered to American prestige, will be resented by the United States Government, and Mr. Shuster was recommended for the position he holds by the State Department at Washington.

The presentation of the Russian ultimatum has put an end to the Cabinet crisis. After a stormy sitting the National Council yesterday approved another Ministry, formed by Premier Samsamus Saltaneh, with Vosoughed Dowleh as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Hindu Women May Come.

Ottawa, Nov. 30—It is understood that, as a result of a conference between the Hindu delegation now in Ottawa, and British Columbia members held in the office of Hon. Robert Rogers, yesterday, it is possible that an arrangement may be arrived at under which the Hindu people now in British Columbia, will be allowed under strict regulations, to bring their wives and families to Canada.

The delegation asked that the amount required from Hindus entering the country be made uniform with other nationalities, and that the present $200 be abolished. They undertook to give a bond that no Hindu shall become a public charge in Canada.

The matter was thoroughly discussed in the presence of Mr. W. D. Scott, commissioner of immigration, and Mr. W. W. Cory, Deputy Minister of the Interior, and the Minister promised careful consideration. The concession mentioned above, however, is likely to be the only one granted until the matter has been taken up with the Imperial authorities.

Two Murders In Sydney.

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 30—The second murder within a week has occurred in the manufacturing district. During a drunken row Tuesday night among negro colored residents of the coke ovens, George Halford, colored, was shot and killed by another colored man, whose name is not known. The police have arrested five in connection with the affair.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Amendment Defeated by 44 Votes

LIBERAL WHIP ATTACKS

Ottawa, Nov. 30—The Borden Government, on the first division in the House of Commons, the result of which was announced at 4.30 yesterday afternoon, had a majority of 44.

The division was on the amendment to the address, moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier a week ago last Monday, for the reason that there was no mention of the Government's naval policy in the speech from the throne. The amendment set forth "that it is a fundamental principle of constitutional government that the advisers of the crown shall be heartily in accord on all important questions of public policy, and in consequence declared that the inclusion by the Prime Minister in the present Cabinet, of men holding diametrically opposite views on a question of the highest importance to the Dominion and the Empire is contrary to the well and tried principles of responsible government, and should not receive the approval of the House."

On this challenge the vote stood Government 121, Opposition 77. Government majority 44.

As the division indicates 198 members voted. The full membership of the House is 221 members, but as Lennox and Addington each occupy two seats and the Yukon member is not yet been introduced, there are but 218 members at the present time. Of the 20 absentees, including the members for the Yukon, the only members not paired were Girard of Chicoutimi, and Thompson of the far north constituency.

Assuming that he would have voted with the Government the Ministerial majority, not including the Speaker, is 46.

As was to be expected great interest was taken in the division, and the galleries were crowded. It took half an hour for the assistant clerk to call the names, and his work was retarded by the constant rounds of applause which greeted new members as they rose to cast their first votes.

Premier Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier got ovations when they rose to the members of the Chamber each received a hearty round of applause from the Ministerial benches.

When the House met the debate on the address was continued by G. H. Boivin, the new Liberal member for Shefford, who made his maiden effort. He referred to the circumstances under which he was returned, and to the representations made by the Liberal party, in such a way as to convey the impression that Canada had received a blow from the United States.

The Liberals would continue to be the party of the plain people and have confidence in their trade. They [illegible]

Sir Wilfrid Laurier [illegible]

Another protest from the Liberal side of the chamber, quite similar in tone to the one made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the time of the election of Dr. Sproule as chief commoner, only this time it was Fred Pardee, chief Liberal whip, who spoke.

"It does seem," said Mr. Pardee, "that in the filling of this position the Government might have selected for this important post some one whose loyalty to the Mother Land was absolutely unquestioned, some one who stood first, last and all the time for the solidity of the British Empire, and the continuance of the British connection."

Mr. Borden spoke briefly, but with considerable warmth. He said the observations just given were very much of the same flavor as the House had been accustomed to since the beginning of the session from the members of the Opposition. These criticisms were part of a dangerous attempt to set section against section and race against race in the interest of a political party.

Mr. Borden said in conclusion, that he believed Mr. Blondin to be every bit as loyal as Mr. Pardee himself. If the attacks of the present character were persisted in, the Government members would take a hand in the matter, and would present to the House and the country some of the Liberal leader's and members' words as to the British Empire and British connection.

Cattle Season Closes.

Montreal, Nov. 30—The export live stock trade from the port of Montreal for the season of 1911 was for night to a close yesterday by the sailing of the steamship Montreal of the Canadian Pacific Line, with 616 head of cattle for London. The season has been a very disappointing one, as the total number of cattle exported has been the smallest for the last 20 years, or since 1892.

The total exports this year were 45,966 head of cattle, 3,724 sheep, and 456 horses and mules. As compared with a year ago, cattle show a decrease of 26,589 head, sheep an increase of 3,172, and horses and mules a decrease of 39.

Of the total number of cattle, there were 15,691 head from the United States, making the actual shipments of Canadian Northwest ranches and Ontario cattle only 30,275 head, while a year ago the total exports amounted to 72,555 head, of which there were only 175 head from the United States.

Storm In Reischsrath.

Vienna, Nov. 30—The Lower House of the Reischsrath was the scene of a violent outbreak yesterday during the debate concerning judicial appointments. The czech deputies started the riot by refusing to hear the explanations of the Minister of Justice and hooting him down whenever he attempted to make himself hear.

A scene of indescribable confusion followed. The czechs, resenting what they termed insults hurled at them by the Germans, stormed the Ministerial benches, throwing ink wells and brandishing chairs. Several deputies were knocked down and severely injured. Friends of the Minister of Justice surrounded him and closed on his toes while he made his escape.

The session was finally declared adjourned. The interior of the chamber was badly wrecked.

Notable Speakers For Banquet.

N. W. ROWELL AT BARRIE

Leader Took Issue With Government on the Hydro-Electric Question

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS

Barrie, Nov. 30—N. W. Rowell, K.C., the new leader of the Opposition, addressed a large audience in the opera house here last night in the interests of H. E. Avery the Liberal candidate for Centre Simcoe.

Mr. Rowell asked: "What benefit would it be to the electors to send A. B. Thompson, the Conservative candidate, down to Toronto if he differs with Sir James on matters affecting the welfare of his constituency. When Sir James had made up his mind what shall be done, he would simply be told as others have been to go back and quietly sit down. If, on the other hand, he does agree with Sir James, his presence there would not be necessary, as he would have nothing to say."

He took issue with the Government on the question of the Hydro-electric power question, claiming that a better service could be procured by a commission than if it were placed under the supervision of a Cabinet Minister.

In dealing with the bilingual school question, he deplored that the male teacher had almost completely disappeared, placing the onus on the Hon. Dr. Pyne for not providing a means of supplying the demand caused by the great number of teachers going to the west. He believed in giving every child the best opportunities possible according to its merits, and if they could master two languages, they were better equipped for the struggle of life than the child with only one language.

Touching bilingual schools, the candidate stated that the law provides that every child between certain ages shall attend school, and that they shall receive an English education. There would be difficulty if the French language were wiped out of the schools at a stroke, but he believed that English should be taught in that school through the medium of the French language, the mother tongue of the child.

C. T. Young of Haileyburg addressed the meeting as the advocate of the Liberal party's policy regarding the opening up of Northern Ontario.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Stewart Haig, aged 14, was drowned while skating near Stirling.

Harry Atkinson was struck by a train near Whitby and killed.

The Turks, under Enver Bey, have gathered in force at Benghazi.

Henry Shaver was killed near Camsville, being thrown in front of a railway engine when his horses started.

N. R. Brigg was committed for trial at Owen Sound on a charge of selling People's Railway stock with false representations.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Toronto yesterday.

Harry Brownlee, a 10-year-old boy, was killed by a train at London, Ont.

The C.P.R. steamer Tees struck a rock off the Pacific coast. Assistance has been sent to her.

A final decree of divorce was granted yesterday to Captain P. C. Haine, the slayer of W. E. Annis. Captain Haine brought action several months ago, in which Annie was named as co-respondent.

At the command of a man armed with a revolver, but unmasked, Teller A. D. McLeod of a Vancouver branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, yesterday handed over $1,000 cash, and the robber made his escape.

Suffragettes, in pursuance of the policy of militant tactics, recently revived, invaded the City Temple, London, last night, and by noisy interruptions, prevented Premier Asquith from delivering a speech on settlement work.

Quebec Fears Smallpox.

Montreal, Nov. 30—"The whole Province of Quebec, and as a consequence, the city of Montreal, is threatened with an epidemic of smallpox this winter," declared Dr. Pelletier, provincial medical health officer.

"The condition of affairs has resulted from the sheer neglect of the necessary precautions in a great many municipalities. It is true that in the large majority of the 1,200 municipalities in the province, an ordinance has been passed making vaccination compulsory, but how many of them really enforce it," he said.

Morse Seriously Ill.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30—Charles W. Morse has been removed to the post hospital, Fort McPherson, from a federal penitentiary in this city seriously ill. The former New York banker appeared to have lost fully eighty pounds since the day he left the Tombs, New York, and is the ghost of his former self.

Morse is suffering from a severe attack of Bright's disease of the kidneys, and the chances are that he will never fully recover, although he may live several years.

Fighting Around Tripoli.

Malta, Nov. 30—Many fierce attacks have been made by the Turks and Arabs on the Italian positions at Derna and Tobruk, according to refugees here. The losses on both sides are said to be 1,500. The Italians do not dare to advance beyond the range of the naval guns.

Q. What is astigmatism of the eye?

A. Astigmatism is an uneven curvature of the eye and causes a double focus. As the eye always strives for clear vision, this double focus annoys the brain, and causes headache and nervousness. We make lenses called cylinders to correct astigmatism.

Q. What causes double vision?

A. Double vision is caused by the eye not being in line, that is, one may turn up or have a tendency to do so, or both may turn in, a weak muscular system is the cause, a weak nervous system is back of it all.

We would be pleased to have you call and let us fully explain how such conditions can be relieved by glasses.

BRINGS IN ESTIMATES.

Hon. W. T. White Accepts Most of Fielding's Figures.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—In the Commons yesterday afternoon, Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, tabled the estimates for the seven months of the current fiscal year from Sept. 1, to March 31, 1912. They amount to $48,683,472, or about $100,000 less than those tabled by Mr. Fielding in July last for the same period. Here and there a few deductions have been made, but the estimates are practically those brought down by Mr. Fielding.

As estimates to the amount of $79,218,107 were voted by the late Government, the total for the current year will be $127,913,310.

It is explained on behalf of the Government that, while the estimates of the old Government will be voted, including the naval estimates, it does not necessarily mean that in all cases the money will be expended. If not spent, the appropriation will be allowed to lapse.

In view of the fact that the estimates were prepared by the former Ministers, and have been adopted by the new Government, it is not expected that much difficulty will be experienced in putting them through the House, and a record is likely to be made with the business of voting supplies between now and the date of adjournment for the Christmas holidays.

The estimates for the fiscal year 1912-1913 will be introduced later on in the session. They are at the present time being prepared by the various Departments.

QUALITY, SKILL, & CARE,
THE LADDER BY WHICH WE CLIMB
To Those Requiring Glasses
Eight years is a short time in the life of man, but it is a period of sufficient length, in business, to carry with it a guarantee of honest effort and satisfaction.
For this number of years I have carried on an Optical business in this city and I have fitted thousands of people with glasses. The fact that I have been successful leads me to believe that my methods are right and for that reason, I wish to give you the additional assurance that there will be no change in them in the future. I am in a position to give you the best of everything that means eye comfort.
It is barely possible that you are in need of new lenses, frame or an eye glass and I would ask that you give me the privilege of giving your eyes a scientific examination and of providing the glasses for you if you need them.
I exercise the greatest care in the examination and fitting of the glasses. I do not overlook the feature of making glasses which will add greatly to the personal appearance of those who wear them. In other words, every detail will have my most careful consideration.
I carry the largest up to date Optical Stock in Peterboro, and grind all my own lenses. You will incur no obligation by calling and consulting with me.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Louise was alone in a victoria, drawn up before the front door of the inn. Wrayson saw at once that something had happened to disturb her. Even under her white veil he knew that she was pale, and that there were rings under her eyes. She leaned towards him and held out her hand in conventional manner for the benefit of the landlord, who lingered upon the steps.

"Come round to the other side of the carriage, Herbert," she said. "I have something to say to you. The coachman does not understand English. I have tried him."

Wrayson crossed behind the carriage and stood by her side.

"Herbert," she asked, anxiously, "will you do something for me? Something I want you to do very much?"

"If I can," he answered simply.

"You can do this," she declared. "It is very easy. I want you to leave this place this morning, go—away, anywhere! You can go back to London, or you can travel. Only start this morning."

"Willingly," he answered, "on one condition."

"What is it?" she asked quickly.

"That you go with me," he declared.

She shook her head impatiently.

"You know that is not what I mean," she said reproachfully. "I was mad last night. You took me by surprise and I forgot everything. I was awake all night. This morning I can see things clearly. Nothing of that sort is possible between you and me. So I want you to go away."

He shook his head, gently but firmly.

"It isn't possible, Louise," he said. "You mustn't ask me to do anything of that sort after last night. It's too late, you see, dear. You belong to me now. Nothing can alter that."

"It is not too late," she answered passionately. "Last night was just an hour of madness. I shall cut it out of my life. You must cut it out of yours."

He leaned over till his head nearly touched hers, and under the holland coat which covered her knees clasped her hand.

"I will not," he answered. "I will not go away. You belong to me, and I will have you."

She looked at him for a moment without speech. Wrayson's features, grave distinguished in a general way by delicacy than strength, had assumed a curiously set and dogged appearance. His eyes met hers kindly but mercilessly. He looked like a man who had spoken his last word.

"Herbert," she murmured, "there are things which you do not know and which I cannot tell you, but they lie between us. They must stand between us for ever!"

"Not that," he said. "I mean to be in London. And until you tell me how they are, I shall treat them as though they did not exist."

"I come here," she said, "to ask—to beg you to go away."

"Then I am afraid you must write," he answered drawing a letter-book from his pocket and scribbling hastily. "Here is the address. Write to me there. Now I must go. I have an invitation to dine tonight at the chateau. It is only a verbal one, but perhaps you will forgive that."

The colour streamed into his cheeks. He could scarcely believe his ears.

"Louise!" he exclaimed. "You mean it?"

"Yes," she answered softly. "It will arrive for you at seven o'clock. Get! But it you will not do that, hape, for me, if you would do as I not come to the chateau. A carriage there is no reason why you should ask—if you would go away and for- would be better for you, better, per-

"And you will come with me again into the gardens?" he whispered passionately.

"Perhaps," she murmured.

The horses, teased by the flies, tossed their heads, and the jingling of harness reminded Louise that halt the village, from various points of vantage, were watching the interview between the young lady from the chateau and the visitor at the inn.

"I must go at once," she said to Wrayson. "About to-night, do not be surprised at anything you see at the chateau. I have no time to say more. If you see anything that seems to you at all unusual, accept it naturally. I will explain afterwards."

She spoke a word to the immovable man on the box, and waved her hand to Wrayson as the horses started forward. They were round the corner in a moment, and out of sight. Wrayson turned back to the inn, but before he had taken half a dozen paces, he stopped short. He had happened to glance towards the upper windows of the small hotel, and he caught a sudden vision of a man's face, a familiar face, transformed, rigid, yet with staring eyes following the departing carriage. Wrayson himself was conscious of a quick shock of surprise, followed by a sense of apprehension. What could there possibly have been in the appearance of Louise to have brought a look like that into the face of his fellow-guest—

CHAPTER XXV.

The two men did not meet again until luncheon-time Anglorized into a seven o'clock meal for their benefit. When seated at the table they found a short, fat man, in the costume of a pedestrian tourist. He wore a tweed knickerbocker suit, and a knapsack lay upon the grass by his side. As Wrayson and his fellow-guest arrived almost at the same time, the newcomer rose and bowed.

"Good morning, gentlemen!" he said. "I trust you will permit me a seat at your table. It appears to be the only one."

Duncan contented himself with a nod. Wrayson felt compelled to be a little more civil. The man certainly seemed harmless enough.

"A very delightful spot, gentlemen," he continued, "and a fine, a very fine church that in the valley. I am spending my holiday taking photographs of churches of a certain period in this vicinity. I am looking forward to exploit this one."

"I am afraid," Wrayson remarked, "that I do not know much of ecclesiastical architecture, but the aesthetic effect of this one, at least, is very fine."

The newcomer nodded.

"You are an artist perhaps, sir?" he asked innocently.

"I hope so—in some degree," Wrayson answered. "Every one is fundamentally an artist, I suppose, who is capable of appreciating a work of beauty."

Duncan smiled slightly to himself. So far he had not spoken.

"It is all new country to me," the newcomer continued, "but from what I have seen of it, I should think it a grand place for painters. Not much for the ordinary tourist, eh?"

"That depends," Wrayson answered, "upon the ordinary tourist."

"Exactly," Quite so!" the little man agreed. "Of course, I once wanted a night time what could be more than this? There must be others who think so besides yourselves."

"Who?" Wrayson asked.

"You tell me guests here."

"We have no fellow guests," Wrayson answered, a little incautiously.

The newcomer leaned back in his seat with a disconcerted look.

"Then I wonder why," he exclaimed, "the landlord told me that he had a couple room—"

Wrayson bit his lip.

"I cannot help that," he said. "The landlord is at liberty to tell the truth if it likes people stay—"

"Then I must get on a little farther," the newcomer interrupted, with a sigh. "I dined at a farmhouse with the landlord, and I thought I should get a room. I am dead tired. I have walked—"

"Perhaps you can tell me to whom the chateau there belongs?" Wrayson interrupted.

"Madame la Baronne de Sturm," Wrayson answered. "At least, so our host told me yesterday."

"It is a very beautiful place, very beautiful," the stranger said reverently. "I dare say there is a chapel there, too! Can one gain admission there, do you know?"

Wrayson laid down his knife and fork.

"Look here," he said good humouredly, "I'm not a guide book, you know, and I only arrived here yesterday myself. You've reached the limit of my information. You had better try the landlord. He will tell you all that you want to know."

Duncan pushed his chair back. He had eaten very little luncheon, but he was filling his pipe preparatory to leaving the table. As soon as it began to draw, he rose and turned to Wrayson. "The little tourist he absolutely ignored as he had done all the time during the meal.

"I should like a word with you before you go out," he said.

Wrayson nodded, and followed him in a few minutes to the summer-house at the end of the lawn. Duncan, and I might add that it is a hopeless mystery to me. All I know is that a crime was committed; that this young lady was present under suspicious circumstances; that I, in certain evidence I had o give, concealed the fact of her presence; and that now a third person turns up, who also knew of the young lady's presence, but who was not called upon to give evidence, who is working on his own account to clear up the whole affair. He happens to be a friend of mine, and he warned me frankly to clear out."

"I am beginning to follow you," what about Madame de Melbain?" Duncan did not beat about the bush.

"That little brute over there," he said, inclining his head towards the table, "is neither an Englishman nor a tourist. I have seen him before and I never forget a face."

"What is he, then?" Wrayson asked.

"Heaven knows what he is now," Duncan answered. "I saw him last at Colenso, where he narrowly escaped being shot as a spy. He is either a Dechman or a German, and whatever he may be up to here, I'll swear ecclesiastical architecture is not his game."

There was a moment's silence. Wrayson had turned involuntarily towards he chateau, and Duncan had followed suit. They both looked up the broad green avenue to where the windows of the great building flashed back the sunlight. At the same moment then mutual action was recalled by both of them.

Wrayson first turned away and glanced round at the table which they had just quitted. The little man who was still seated there, had lit a cigar and was talking to the waiter. He looked back again and noticed his head thoughtfully in the direction of he chateau.

"He asked questions about the baron," Wrayson remarked. "Do you suppose that there can be anything going on there to interest him?"

"You should know better than I," Duncan answered. "You received a note this morning from one of the women who are staying there."

Wrayson turned a little pale. He looked at Duncan steadily for a moment. A giant in height, his features, too, were of a large and regular type. His eyes were clear and truthful; his expression, notwithstanding a certain gloom which rarely ascended with his years and apparent health, was unmistakable honesty. Wrayson felt instinctively that he was to be trusted.

"Look here," he said, "I should like to tell you the truth as much as it is necessary. I happen to know that the young lady with whom you saw me talking this morning, and who is a friend of the Baroness de Sturm, is suspected of certain matters of high importance to the general all of which took place recently in London. I can tell you the whole affair, and whether it is necessary or not, I want you to help me. I know already nothing of me, Wrayson answered. I want to see where the young lady was going to Baroness de Sturm, with whom he was living in London, and I came over to watch her."

"The young lady was living with the Baroness de Sturm," Duncan remarked. "Is she, then, an adventuress?"

"No!" Wrayson answered. "She is not, mind you. I do not know who exactly she is, but I am perfectly sure that she is not an adventuress. She was forced to come over to track her down. She is English, I believe."

Duncan stared deliberately into the bowl of his pipe, and then looked at his companion with a curious expression.

"Then I wonder why," he exclaimed, "the landlord told me that he had a couple room—"

"Never tasted such good porridge before."

"Made from Tillson's, did you say?"

"Well, I guess I have been asleep on the porridge question."

After you have eaten Tillson's you'll admit there's a difference in porridge. First the flavor. That's because we pan-dry Tillson's Oats by a different process.

We evaporate the moisture—not the aroma nor the flavor.

Then the appetizing qualities. These are due to the careful rolling of the oats which keeps every flake whole and unbroken. All the gluten and starch in the oats is retained in the flake, so that your porridge will not have that sticky, gelatinous, unpalatable consistency.

You know that porridge is unexcelled as a nourishing food. You will know when you try it that porridge made from Tillson's Rolled Oats is unexcelled as a delicious breakfast dish.

Danderine

Grows hair and we can prove it

Hair Becomes Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous and Beautiful Immediately After a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance, an incomparable lustre, coloring and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Try it—you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or any dirt or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most it will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh shower of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its hair-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you can then have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine. Real surprise awaits you.

RECIPES FOR HOUSEWIVES

To remove a rusty screw, apply a pointed piece of metal heated red hot to the screw head, when the screw is well heated it will move readily with the screw driver.

The best duster is a damp cloth (not moist or wet) passed lightly over the surface, and changed often for a clean one. A feather duster only stirs up the dust, which settles either back on the surface just brushed or somewhere else.

When sweeping or dusting, if there is much dust (and there generally is) always have windows or doors open and begin sweeping on the side of the room into which the wind comes, and the dust will be carried ahead of the broom out of the house.

For deodorizing or disinfecting, a solution of chloride of zinc, used in proportion of one pint of the zinc to four gallons of water, is one of the most efficient agents. This will promptly neutralize noxious effluvia and arrest animal decay and vegetable rotting. For sink pipes, water closets and like outhouses, this is invaluable.

Any acid spilled upon marble will quickly disfigure and spoil it. Its effects should be neutralized by pouring on a solution of any alkali such as washing soda, borax, or ammonia, over the stain at once. Restore the polish by rubbing with powdered pumice stone moistened with water. It will call for much patience and work to restore it to its first condition.

PREVENT SALT FROM CLOGGING

Into the salt cellars put three teaspoonfuls of corn starch to a cupful of fine salt, mixing thoroughly, and it will not clog or lump.

FOR THE LAUNDRY

Shave a pound bar of good soap into one gallon and a half of water as hot as the hand can bear, and stir until the soap is dissolved. Add to it one tablespoonful of turpentine and three tablespoonfuls of household ammonia. Stir the compound well, and see that the soap is all dissolved. If necessary, the soap may be set on the back of the stove until dissolved, in which case the turpentine and ammonia are not to be added until it is ready to use. Put the clothes to be washed into a tub, add to the dissolved soap enough water to cover the clothes, having the added water hot as the soap liquid, and pour over the clothes, cover closely, and let soak for two or three hours, after which wash in the usual manner. After the suds have been used for one tubful it can be used again by reheating, and adding to it a second proportion of the soap, turpentine and ammonia. There will be little rubbing needed, and the clothes will be beautifully white and clean. Neither turpentine nor ammonia will in any way harm the clothes.

PUMPKIN PIE

Mash two cupfuls of pumpkin that has been cooked very dry, sweeten well, stirring in gradually while warm three well-beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of sifted flour, the grated rind of one lemon, a pinch of powdered cinnamon, allspice and mace, each one tablespoonful, of butter and about a cupful of rich milk, enough to thin to a thick batter; beat well, fold in one cupful of chopped figs and one-fourth of a pound of seeded raisins cut in half. Have nice pastry shells and bake until a golden brown in a moderately hot oven.

APPLE PIE

Line a pie tin with any good pastry and heat it with pared, cored and sliced apples having the apples ripe and tart; when full add bits of butter, one half cup of sugar, and dust over all a heaping teaspoonful of flour; cover this (rather half) with pastry and add enough water to cook the apples; bake until done and the apples soft. Eat with whipped cream.

BOILED RICE AND CHEESE

Boiled rice with grated cheese is nice and nourishing. Boil a half cup of rice, drain as usual then stir a tablespoonful of grated cheese, toss it through with a fork. Heap in a dish, sprinkle all over with tablespoonful of cheese over it, after putting some dots of butter on the rice. Set in the oven for a few minutes until the butter is melted and the cheese is browned; then serve in the same dish while very hot.

A NEW MARMALADE

We are told that a woman who had some two scattering trees made a nice dish by mixing together peaches, pears, quinces and tiny lemon peel. The skins and cores were cooked separately to make the syrup which formed a jelly-like consistency calls this hodge-podge jam.

COOKING SWEET POTATOES

There are so many ways by cooking sweet potatoes, that one need never be at a loss. Baked in their jackets, or scraped and cooked with fresh meat or fowls; boiled and sliced, and fried in hot fat, or scraped and sliced laid in a baking pan, and boiling water to cover poured over them, with salt, pepper and bits of butter, and baked, or boiled, sliced, laid in a pan with butter, pepper, salt, bits of butter and spices, are but a few of the ways to prepare them.

TURNIPS AND POTATOES

Winter turnips should always have potatoes added, allow four potatoes to six turnips, but do not put them on to cook until the turnips are nearly tender enough for the table. Turnips should be put on in cold water, salted and boiled slowly until tender, the potatoes should be peeled and quartered, and when both are done, mash together, and season with plenty of butter, with salt and pepper.

POP CORN PLEASURES

For the children there is nothing more amusing than a pop corn party. The small folks invited are requested to wear their play dresses as there is apt to be more or less "muss" before the entertainment is over. The kitchen supplied with an open fireplace makes an ideal place. Lacking that the stove can be used. The poppers should, says Rural New Yorker, be heated before the corn is added, and then the corn slightly sprinkled with water and heated gradually until the kernels swell, then the heat increased until the grain are all burst. When a quantity is prepared for immediate use, some of the older ones can make some boiled and crisp cakes, which are very delicious if prepared just right. To make the balls place one pound of granulated sugar in a saucepan, add half a cup of water, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and half cup of butter; cook until the syrup will spin a thread, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Place some of the popped corn in a deep dish, pour the candied syrup over the corn slowly, stirring the corn so that every grain will be coated. While still warm press into medium-sized balls and roll in colored or white sugar. Then set aside to cool.

The molasses corn cakes are made by boiling two cups of molasses and half cup of butter until a lump will harden when dropped in cold water. Have ready one quart of the popped corn crushed fine, stir into the boiling taffy, remove from the fire and pour or rake into a flat buttered pan. Press down smooth, mark in squares when cold cut through squares.

Buttered pop corn is delicious and easily prepared. Set a panful of the popped corn in the oven several minutes, then pour over some melted butter, stir corn thoroughly, add salt, and serve.

MAY BE REVOLUTION IN MEXICO

EL PASO, TEX., NOV. 30.—Adjutant General Henry Hutchings of Texas has sent a report to Governor Colquitt that he believes there is a possibility of a revolution in Mexico. He believes that Emilio Vasquez Gomez is working up the revolution in Texas and that his brother Dr. Francisco Vasquez Gomez, is in Mexico, and advices received from Dr. Gomez himself admits that he is to carry out what he says Madero failed to do.

[illegible] which has its centre in Monterey. Governor Colquitt has received information from [illegible] Mexico stating that he believes [illegible] the revolution is being planned in Mexico and that its leader is Emilio Vasquez Gomez, former vice-president and recently appointed to Madero.

Dr. Francisco Vasquez Gomez has [illegible] General Pascual Orozco [illegible] Cesar Lopez [illegible] to the border after the [illegible] Mexico City. It has not been completed and that he is still carrying out the San Luis Potosi plan for which the Maderistas fought against the Diaz government.

Dr. Vasquez Gomez in his letter says that this plan will be carried out by him as the present government of Mexico is not doing it. This is the strongest statement yet made by any of Madero's opponents.

One hundred additional rurales from Chihuahua were brought to Ciudad Juarez from the capital today and will be added to the permanent Ciudad garrison.

This makes the garrison in the city number 500 men, as 100 were brought to the city a week ago and added to the garrison.

TROUBLE FEARED IN JUAREZ

Trouble is feared in Juarez over the municipal election held Sunday, the first ever held in the city, where a mayor was voted upon, the office having in the past been a gubernatorial appointment. Juan N. Medina, an ex-army officer, is elected, but the Maderistas have protested his election and charge frauds.

Medina is an anti-Madero man and was relieved from the office of acting mayor last August when General Orozco raided the gambling dens in Juarez and found them all running wide open.

If Medina is a Reyes man his election by a majority, which it is then, it will amount to 200, will indicate that the Reyista sentiment in Juarez is strong. It is openly charged on both sides of the river by the enemies of Medina that he is a Reyista.

MUNITIONS OF WAR SEIZED

WASHINGTON, NOV. 30.—The seizure of a quantity of munitions of war, said to be the property of Mexican revolutionists, by United States authorities at Laredo, Tex., was reported to the war department. Two complete field wireless sets were included in the material confiscated.

According to information received at the war department Laredo is the chief centre of the activities of the revolutionists and their anti-Madero sympathizers. Other places along the Texas-Mexican border are reported quiet. A squad of cavalry has been sent to Brownsville, Tex., for the purpose of patrolling the border in that section.

REYISTAS ATTEMPT TO CAPTURE CITY

MONTEREY, MEX., NOV. 30.—Telegrams received here from Topo state that a large number of Reyistas have made an attempt to capture the city. After taking possession of the city they went to the barracks and took all arms and ammunition available. There being no federals present they were not molested. After this they went to the city treasury to secure the funds on hand, but the federals arrived and fired on them. The Reyistas retreated to the mountains.

95 Summonses

TORONTO, NOV. 30.—Ninety-five summonses charging breaches of the Insurance Act were served on Charles E. Ring, Edward M. Carroll, and Louis Gurofsky. They are the outcome of the investigations recently ordered by the Attorney-General's Department. Thirty-six have been served upon Ring, forty-seven upon Carroll and twelve upon Gurofsky.

It is alleged that in each case the insurance agents had taken out policies for companies not licensed to do business in Ontario, and without obtaining a permit from the Insurance Registrar for that purpose.

All these cases are in Toronto and it is said a lot more could be laid in other places, but they will not be touched until the court has reached some decision. South Porcupine, it is stated, suffered greatly in irregular policies during their recent fire.

The outside companies mentioned on the summonses as not entitled to do business in the city are: Western Union Fire Insurance Co., Colonial Assurance Co., National Protector Assurance Co., Continental Fire Insurance Co. of Winnipeg, Western Empire Insurance Co., Ohio Fire Insurance Co., National Fire Marine and Insurance Co., Spring Garden Insurance Co., American Assurance Co., North American Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and the British Crown and National Insurance Co. All these informations were laid by Provincial Detective William Greer.

OUTWITTING THE PIRATES OF CAVE-IN ROCK

On the Site of the Proposed Illinois State Park a Boy, Sole Survivor of a Massacred Crew, Avenged His Comrade's Death and Escaped

Copyright 1911 by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.

DOWN on the extreme southern point of Illinois, less than fifty miles below where the historic Wabash River empties into the Ohio, is the precipitous overhang of Cave in Rock, a cavern and recess in the cliffs that for a century and less ago was the scene of a series of piratical and murderous deeds unparalleled in the annals of American crime. So closely interwoven is Cave in Rock with Illinois history that there is now on foot a movement to establish a state park there.

The cavern, from which the town takes its name, is on the Illinois shore of the Ohio River, about one hundred yards east of the Kentucky shore. It is a great hole in a wall of limestone rock, perhaps a hundred feet high overhanging the bank of the Ohio River, and so smooth that scarcely a foothold is visible upon it, except the scraggly trees that grow along the top. The cave is near the lower end of the long wall, a short distance up from the water's edge, and is 40 feet wide at the entrance, 28 feet deep and open for 175 feet back to a point where the earth has fallen from the top. From the lower cavern there is said to be an opening leading to another cavern directly above.

It was here that a band of cutthroats and pilagers operated from 1800 to about 1825 under the most desperate river pirate of his day, Meason or Mason, as the name was more commonly spelled. The flatboat traffic of the Ohio was growing at a lively rate, and it was upon these that the robber-leader, a man of giant stature and intelligence worthy of a better cause, preyed, though few wayfarers or land caravans journeying that way escaped his murderous marauders.

With Meason were his two sons and other outlaws of the hardest character. The leaders, with a fluctuating band of twenty to forty men, were prepared to meet any resistance a flatboat outfit might make, hence a reign of terror existed in the wilderness in that part of the country. It is of one particular instance, and such as was rare indeed, in which the outlaws were outwitted and beaten, and that, too, by a boy, with which this tale has to do.

In 1803 a large flatboat of the type known as a broadhorn, from its breadth of build, was fitted out at Pittsburg for the journey to New Orleans with a cargo of provisions, salt and whiskey. The old captain was a shrewd man, who knew the dangers likely to beset his boat from Indians and pirates, and he carried an unusually large crew for such a boat, five white men, two negroes and one passenger, the latter being Claude Lavette, seventeen years old, the son of a wealthy New Orleans merchant and who was on his way home from the North. Each man was well armed.

Captain and Pilot Lost.

All went well until Louisville, Ky., was reached. There the captain became suddenly ill and in a few hours died with all the symptoms of poisoning. There was no proof, however, that he had been murdered, and so the journey proceeded with the pilot, a relative of the dead captain, in command. But within less than twenty four hours he became ill and died. That he had been poisoned there was no doubt, and panic spread among the crew, since it was plain the murderer was among them, and none could tell who would be his next victim.

A council was held, with each suspicious of the other. One boatman, named Bates, a surly, hard working man, who had applied to the captain for a job at Pittsburg for employment, openly declared the criminal was none other than the boy, Claude Lavette, who had slept in the little cabin occupied by the captain and mate and who, Bates pointed out, was the only one that had had opportunity to commit the murder. It was known the boy was not satisfied with his food and quarters and had engaged in frequent words with the captain. This convinced the others, and they decided to tie the youth and confine him in the hold pending some disposal of him for the other crimes.

There was no room for a prisoner, but one of the whiskey barrels was rolled out of the way, and the little dock at the prisoner was accomplished. Just after he had made a fierce protest, and with Bates the only backer, would have carried out their decision of killing him on the spot, several boats were sighted coming down the river.

The broadhorn was crowded to the outer edge of the Kentucky shore to escape the observation of the boatmen, who, as "Ohio pirates," were the terror of the Mississippi traders. Meason's cutthroats hailed. Bates replied, and had gone his orders two boatmen, leaving another man and a boy out of the way. The boat was now in the hands of one of the ordinary boatmen and poorly piloted. A short distance above the cave, through Bates' efforts or otherwise, it ran aground on a sandbar, and the boatmen decided to wait until morning before attempting to get it off. Then the crew, leaving no guard and without even loading their guns or perhaps Bates misled them, fell asleep.

A little before daybreak a party of Meason's pirates went aboard the craft and with broadswords and pistols slew all the occupants, with one exception, after but faint resistance. The boy prisoner was concealed by barrels, and in their haste the pirates passed him by. Bates, whose treachery was responsible for the easy taking of the boat, was dead among the others. At the first onslaught greetings between Bates and the pirates had shown his confederate with them, and one of the startled boatmen, jumping to full realization of the truth, had clubbed his gun over Bates' head and killed him almost instantly, then himself cut down the next moment.

With the coming of daylight the dead bodies were weighted with rocks and dumped into the river, and the boat was released from the bar and taken to a little anchorage at the cave where the pirates proceeded to unload the cargo. By night of the first day practically everything had been taken off except a few barrels, and, by strange chance, these were the ones which concealed Lavette, who had suffered from his confinement, cramps and hunger, but had food, but was seemingly resting [illegible] Providence. Darkness brought on the [illegible] whiskey barrels and a fearful [illegible] around a log fire near the mouth of the cave [illegible] fifty yards from the boat.

In spite of his hoydenishness [illegible] was a boy of nerve, well [illegible] somewhat experienced [illegible] determined not only to save [illegible] his companions, if possible, but [illegible] as well as he, were the victims of Bates. He set [illegible] by cutting the cords that [illegible] them in two over a rough [illegible] the ropes off his legs. It was [illegible] could [illegible] his numbed hands to work [illegible] next furnished for food and water [illegible] no time for that now. If he was [illegible] thing.

End of the Pirate Orgy.

[illegible] ammunition, for which he had [illegible] was primed and loaded, he placed [illegible] at the mouth of the [illegible] enough to make sure he [illegible] received, then sauntered out as he [illegible] a few minutes before going on [illegible] of the land." He judged there [illegible] hotel, and the most of them [illegible] the influence of the liquor [illegible] broadhorn. Those who did [illegible] were seated about the fire, apparently taking little note of the others, except to interfere when the brawls threatened to grow serious.

One man especially attracted Lavette's attention. He was a striking figure, a tall, [illegible] fellow, with swarthy face and hard, though intelligent, features. This man was Meason, himself. He took [illegible] of the liquor and seemed to be [illegible] though with apparent indifference, [illegible] never keeping his [illegible] going far enough [illegible] use any general fight [illegible] themselves. His chief lieutenants were one of his sons and a small, light complexioned man known as "Little Harpe," a Kentucky outlaw, with a desperate reputation.

Lavette's plan was to fire rapidly into the crowd with several guns he had collected on the broadhorn after first giving a yell, for he could not quite bring down with his warning of the long chance he was [illegible] Standing up in the [illegible] window [illegible] the unbarred door, leaving the freed [illegible] rushed into the cabin and [illegible] While they were battering and [illegible] the door he would take the canoe and pull [illegible] over in the darkness, then lay his [illegible] Kentucky bank of the river.

[illegible] was ripe. Standing four [illegible] a blood curdling [illegible] was on its feet, confused. [illegible] At the giant Meason, on the [illegible] Lavette took hurried aim and [illegible] his shoulder with one [illegible] with the others. Into the [illegible] other three guns [illegible] Then leaped for the [illegible] cabin.

There was a wild scene of confusion. Lavette had rolled off the waterward side of the vessel and climbed along into the canoe, where he felt he was for the time being fairly well hidden. He then carried out his ruse by reaching both hands through the window and firing two pistol shots through the barricaded cabin door. In an instant the husky forms on the other side of the door had thrown themselves against it, but the door withstood them, and shots, knife thrusts and finally axes were brought to bear. Lavette, firing his remaining pistols, drew back from the window and was about to seat himself in the canoe when a head appeared over the broadhorn's side where he had made his escape. He was discovered.

Lavette did the only thing that could have saved him. With one hand he grasped the side of the broadhorn and shot the canoe forward so quickly the astonished outlaw had no time to act, while with the other hand he drew his belt dirk and drove it to the hilt into the body of his discoverer, the force of the blow almost overbalancing him from the frail little boat. The victim sank without a sound and rolled into the water.

Escape of the Boy.

The boy was confident none other had seen him and, picking up the paddle, he straightened the gliding canoe and started straight across the river. So skilful was he with the paddle that he was able to hold almost true to the course in spite of the current, so that the broadhorn kept him concealed from the flare of any torches on shore. Not until he was well out on the broad river did the pirates find he was not in the cabin, and a few minutes later curses and shouts warned Lavette that the cutting loose of the small boats had been discovered.

Pulling almost to the Kentucky shore, the young traveller headed straight down the river and till daylight he paddled with all the energy he could muster, putting many miles between him and the pirates of Cave-in Rock. As long as he could see or hear them as he paddled away they had been swearing, yelling, firing shots across the water and flashing torches. They finally put the broadhorn out for a cruise around, but Lavette was far beyond their reach, and to the end of their days they never knew who was responsible for the terrible onslaught which had caused the death of five of their men and the wounding of three others, among them Meason himself, who had a bullet in his shoulder. Few of the boy's shots had missed a human mark, and that he had himself escaped in the hail of lead poured into the flatboat was little short of a miracle.

Travelling only by night to avoid Indians and living chiefly on fish, Lavette within a month in his canoe reached New Orleans and his father's house, the sole survivor of the boat's complement that had started from Pittsburg. He lived many years, but he never forgot the horrors of that day and night's slaughter which came over him after the excitement and the blood lust had worn off.

Meason, the greatest inland freebooter of that period, was murdered some years later in Mississippi by two men of his band, who hoped to gain a large reward, but who were recognized when they went to claim their reward and were tried and hanged for some of their crimes.

The great cavern in the wall of rock remains as one of the chief points of interest along the Ohio River, and many are the traditions and the legends that cluster about it, but its days of carnage and crime closed long ago.

THE FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

A Short Story

"Roderic, why don't you be reasonable? Do you forget that your father opposed our marriage, and that you went ahead?"

"I forget nothing, Harriet. The cases are not similar. You see well, you were you, but this silly boy of pretty nearly twenty-four is a man who'll start in life with very little from his father."

"But, Roderic, the girl comes of good stock, and she will grow into good sense."

"What's the use of wasting breath, Harriet? You know that when I make up my mind, I make it up and that nothing stops me."

Mrs. Chadwick smiled internally. She knew that her husband fancied himself a veritable Gibraltar for steadfastness, but that underneath a very thin veneer of brusqueness the old minister had a heart and a mine of sentimentality.

"Well, he's coming for your ultimatum this morning."

"And he'll get it. A wait of a year to get over his love for this pretty face or, if he persists in getting married his form will no longer darken my door."

Mrs. Chadwick laughed.

"At least, Roderic, grate him that Eric has a sense of humor."

Mr. Chadwick drummed on the study desk. "I don't see anything much at, Harriet. If you choose to be irresponsible, and take his engagement as a joke well and good. If not, forbid your second home at any rate for the present. Whichever place he may elect to make it, for me the affair is tragic."

There was a step on the front veranda, and Mrs. Chadwick said:

"Here he is. Let me see him first. You can have it out with him afterwards, but I do hope you will think it over with south and be reasonable."

A moment later Eric stood at the door of his father's study.

"Come in," said Mr. Chadwick, his heart beginning to beat rather.

"Good morning, father. Good morning, Mr. Chadwick," returned Eric, heartening for some bad news to follow. "What can I do for you, sir, this morning?"

Eric sat down in an armchair and threw his leg over the arm.

"Father, Eric and I have come to tell you that we have made up our mind."

"Yes."

"That we've made up our mind to get married."

"When a year from next June?"

"No, sir, to-day, and then we are going to go down to New York on our wedding trip. Eric has a week off."

Mr. Chadwick had a quick temper and he grew white with anger.

"Roderic Nugent Chadwick, you and he through his teeth, "you shall not marry that girl."

"Take care, father!"

"That little upstart who I only wish I can never again darken this door. I will not let you come into the house again. I will never have a penny you. The sooner you learn that you're made for yourself the better. Don't make up your mind to wait. A year will see you in your grave, and it will cost you not a penny."

"Now, father!" Eric had risen to his feet. "No one can be more truly than I do, and I don't propose to waste time. I intend to support Grace in fashion."

"Well, you have the matter in your own hands, and I can answer for your own good sense. You shall have it. I shall not interfere. Eric, go about your business. You will hear from Eric again very soon. You may as well take precious little with you when you come back. I shall be better fitted to [illegible] you were."

"Where?"

"Your mother?"

Don't try to work on my feelings. My mind is made up, my word is final."

"I won't work on your feelings. I'll bid her good-bye. I am sorry that you take it this way."

"You needn't trouble yourself."

Roderic [illegible] Eric, and Mr. Chadwick [illegible] nodded.

GUELPH'S BENEFITS.

Whitney Says City Only Got What Was Coming To It.

Guelph, Nov. 30—The Royal City extended a cordial welcome to Sir James Whitney last night. Four hundred members of the Borden Club, all carrying torches and headed by the G M S band, marched down to the station to greet the Premier on his arrival. The procession escorted the Premier, as he drove to the city to the opera house. Gaily decorated with flags and banners, the interior of the building looked very attractive, and the motto, "Schofield will win," adorned one of the boxes.

Major George J. Thorp of Guelph presided and the speakers were H C. Schofield, the Liberal-Conservative candidate in South Wellington, and A Kelly Evans.

"There had been a lot of discussion," said the Prime Minister, "as to what the Government had done for Guelph." He wanted it understood that he would say nothing in his speech as to what had been done for Guelph, nor would he say what would or would not be done in the future.

"Whatever the Government of Ontario has done for the city of Guelph was done because it was the duty of the Government to do it, and whatever it is the duty of the Government to do for Guelph in the future will be done, regardless of who is returned from this constituency to the Legislature.

"Whatever I may be or do I will never drop down to a plane where people might be influenced by the things they might or might not get."

Sir James ridiculted the published statement of N W. Rowell at North Bay, in which the Liberal leader said that Hon Dr. Pyne had insisted that the mother tongue of every teacher in the province must be English.

"Such a statement would be ridiculous," said the Premier, "for there are many school teachers in Ontario whose mother tongue is not English. I am authorized by Dr Pyne to deny that he ever said such a thing, and he has already telegraphed his denial to the people of North Bay."

Smuggler of Men Fined.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov 30.—That Canadian employers of foreign labor have smuggled laborers into Canada in violation of the immigration laws was admitted by Joseph Poultage, Hamilton, who was fined fifty dollars yesterday for assisting undesirable aliens to enter the country.

Poultage was arrested here late Tuesday night with five men he smuggled into Canada from Buffalo. The party crossed the river in a row boat above Chippewa, paying boatmen whose names are unknown, seven dollars each. Poultage's companion were fined five dollars each and deported.

"Lots of men come to Canada like we did. I came here with a contract six months ago and went to Welland to work. A friend of mine paid twelve dollars to be driven across the bridge," Poultage testified.

He claimed to be unable to give the names of the boatmen or contractors who obtain laborers in violation of the immigration laws.

More Trouble In Lisbon

Lisbon, Nov 30. The opinion generally prevails that the disorders which occurred here on Nov. 26 were only a preliminary to more serious events.

The riot, it is said, was started by monarchists, who recently arrived at Oporto and other places. It is declared that they were bribing the anarchistic element and preparing for an uprising in Lisbon to coincide with the crossing of the frontier by the Royalists.

The Philosopher.

There is a man in our town
And he was shrewdly taught.
He knew that sugar would go up
When the sugar trust was caught.
So the very day he read about
The scandal as to weights
He bought himself a lot of it,
And now he celebrates.
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Think of That.

"Why is it, doctor," groaned the victim, "that a tooth has to have a nerve?"

"My dear sir," soothingly answered the man with the forceps, "there wouldn't be a dental college in all this broad land if it wasn't for the nerves in teeth."—Chicago Tribune.

The Bird Men.

Soon the north winds will blow,
And we shall have snow.
What will the bird men do then, poor things?
They will sit by the fire
And live higher and higher
On the money they make with their wings.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Mrs. Emma Read, Laskay, Ont., writes:—I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Hightr—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—With black rust reported spreading in the northern portion of the Argentine, and with the harvest yields said to be only about 11 bushels per acre in two whole provinces, the wheat market to day had a brisk advance. The close was strong at prices varying from last night's figures to a gain of 5-8c. Other leading staples all showed a rise—Corn 1-4c and 3-8c to 3-8c, oats 3-8c and 1-2c to 1-2c and 5-8c, and hog products 71-2c to 20c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ½d lower than yesterday, and unchanged on corn. Paris wheat closed unchanged to ⅛c lower. Antwerp unchanged, Berlin ⅞c higher, and Buda Pest ¼d higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—There continues to be a good demand from the continent for Manitoba spring wheat, but the demand from the United Kingdom was much quieter. The volume of business transacted was small, owing to the scarcity of ocean freight room from St. John, N.B., and Portland for the winter season. Carlots of Manitoba feed wheat, all rail, sold on track, at 74c, and No. 3 American yellow corn, at 73½c to arrive. Demand for oats is fair. A good business is passing in flour for local account, but the export trade is quiet. Milfeed is active and firm. Demand for cheese is quiet, but butter is active, with a strong undertone. Eggs are in good demand.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 85c to 85½c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 48c to 48½c; do., No. 3, 47c to 47½c; extra No. 1 feed, 46¾c to 47c; No. 2 local white, 47½c; No. 3 local white, 46½c; No. 4 local white, 45½c.

Barley—Manitoba, feed, 64c; malting, 96c to $1.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 65c to 66c.

Flour—Man. spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.80; seconds, $5.30; strong bakers, $4.90; winter patents, choice, $4.75 to $5; straight rollers, $4.25 to $4.40; straight rollers, bags, $1.95 to $2.05.

Rolled oats, barrels, $5.25; bag, 90 lbs., $2.50.

Bran—$23.00; shorts, $25.00; middlings, $27 to $28; moullie, $27 to $34 per ton.

Hay—No. 2, per ton, car lots, $14.50 to $15.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 14¾c to 14¾c; finest easterns, 14c to 14⅜c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 30c to 30½c; seconds, 28c to 29c.

Eggs—Fresh, 45c to 45c; selected, 38c; No. 1 stock, 24½c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.15 to $1.20.

Dressed hogs—Abattoir killed, $8.75 to $9.25; do., country, $8 to $8.50.

Pork—Heavy Canada short mess, bbls., 35 to 45 pieces, $24; short cut back, bbls., 45 to 55 pieces, $24; clear, bbls., 30 to 35 pieces, $22.50.

Lard—Compound tierces, 875 lbs., 8¾c; wood pails, 20 lbs. net, 9¼c; pure, tierces, 375 lbs., $12; pure, wood pails, 20 lbs. net, 12½c.

Beef—Plate, barrels, 200 lbs., $14.00; tierces, 300 lbs., $21.50.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 25 were 3200 cattle, 3500 sheep and lambs, 2600 hogs, and 750 calves. The offerings on the market to-day were 950 cattle, 1400 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 250 calves. As the supply of cattle was much smaller, a steady feeling prevailed in the market and prices showed no important change. There were no really choice stock on the market, therefore the top prices paid were only for the best and do not indicate that the market was any lower. The demand was only fair, as buyers generally were well supplied with stock consequently the trade was rather slow, but at the close few were left over.

An easier feeling developed in the market for hogs and prices scored a further decline of 10c per cwt. At this reduction the demand was fair from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $6.40 to $6.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars. The demand for calves was good.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $5.70 to $6; medium, $5 to $5.25; common, $3.25 to $3.50; canners, $2.25 to $2.75; choice cows, $4 to $4.25; medium, $3.25 to $3.75; bulls, $2.25 to $4. Milkers, choice, each $75; common and medium, $30 to $40; springers, $30 to $40.

Sheep, Ewes, $3.75 to $4 per cwt.; bucks and culls, $2.25 to $3.50; lambs, $5.50 to $5.75.

Hogs—F.O.B., $6 to $6.50.

Calves—$4 to $10 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 29.—Cattle—Receipts, 200; active and steady.

HAD ROW IN RESTAURANT

Detective Newhall Has Tussle With Commercial Traveller and Table is Overturned in Mix-up

APPEARED IN COURT

A well-known "drummer" who travels for a Montreal firm, and with his headquarters in Toronto, was the victim of one of Detective Newhall's "triangle holds," in the Chinese restaurant on George street yesterday afternoon. He did not deny kicking up a racket in the Chinaman's in the Police Court this morning, but stated that he had turned too long at the wine and did not remember what happened. He was fined $2.00 and costs $5.75.

It appears that after he had had dinner he began to use bad language and make a general disturbance. Detective Newhall happened on the scene as usual, and proceeded to quiet him. This was no easy task, as the accused grabbed hold of the table and refused to get up. Without going further into details, suffice it to say, that the result of the scuffle was that the table was turned upside down on top of Mr. Drummer and he was later dragged out of the debris by the coat collar, and waltzed over to the cells, where he spent the night.

John A. Back Again.

John A. McDonald was charged with stealing $34.00 from M. Empryas, in the lobby of a local hotel last evening. Peter Johnson, charged with insanity, has been remanded for another week.

PHILADELPHIA, NOV. 30.—The University of Toronto delegation, consisting of H. G. Griffith, Dr. Arthur Wright, Captain Jack Maynard and Manager Timber Mulqueen, arrived here this morning as guests of the Toronto Star for the Pennsylvania-Cornell football match at Franklin fields.

The weather is fine and crisp and is a perfect day for rugby. The subject of a match in Toronto with Varsity next year was broached to both teams and created considerable interest. It is a matter of thought that will require considerable negotiation and diplomacy before anything is accomplished. The Toronto delegation were allotted fourth line seats by the Pennsylvania authorities.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES

Read What Those Who Have Proved It Say!

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I have used Zam-Buk for the benefit I received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief. So I continued it and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say that it completely cured me."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, of 184-185 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P.Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles. I have also found it most effective in curing a sore thumb with which my little son was suffering. The thumb had begun to fester, and later and had lost the nail. I discovered in the application of Zam-Buk and the sore is now entirely healed. Zam-Buk is indispensable as a household remedy."

Not only for piles, but for inflammations, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, boils, carbuncles, scalp sores, blood poisoning, bad heads, old wounds, cold sores, chapped hands, etc., Zam-Buk is without equal as a healer, and also for cuts, burns, stiffness, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c. box.

Zam-Buk Soap will be found a most excellent complement to Zam-Buk Balm, especially where the skin is unhealthy. Mothers should use it for baby's bath. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

THE CANADIAN MISSIONARIES ARE SAID TO BE SAFE

Although Reports Indicate That Missionaries Were in the Thick of the Fight in Which the Imperialists Won a Decisive Victory---Rebels Threaten Walls of Chengtu.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, NOV. 30.—From private correspondence received here today from the Canadian missionary headquarters at Chengtu, Sze Chuen, under date of Oct. 17th, it is evident that the Canadians were there in the thick of the fighting between the Imperialists and Rebels. The Viceroy at Chengtu has notified the Pekin authorities that he must have reinforcements immediately to hold the town. Rebels were threatening the outside walls and the letter said that the missionaries were thankful of the protection of the walls around Chengtu. Imperialists are quite friendly and protective to the missionaries, but the Rebels had threatened to turn the missionaries out of the Canadian Methodist mission rooms if they capture the town. It was evident that there was abundant cause for anxiety regarding the Canadians. This morning's cable from Pekin is reassuring.

PEKIN, NOV. 30.—Reports received here indicate that Imperialists inflicted decisive defeats on the Rebels in a pitched battle in the southern part of the province of Sze Chuen, where Canadian missionaries are stationed. The report adds that all missionaries are safe.

Premier Whitney Condemned In The House Of His Friends

The Ottawa Journal, the Hamilton Spectator and many other Conservative papers, condemn Sir James Whitney for his indifference to tax reform.

The Toronto Telegram condemns Sir James Whitney and Hon. Frank Cochrane for Rip-Van-Winkling six years among the agricultural possibilities of New Ontario's 15,000,000 acre clay belt.

The Toronto News has at times condemned Sir James Whitney and his Government as unfair, un-British and high handed.

The Toronto World condemns Sir James Whitney for his senseless opposition to Allan Studholme, the only labour representative in the Legislature.

Many Conservative newspapers and Conservative members of the Legislature condemn Sir James Whitney for his rash misstatements regarding bilingual schools. The Toronto World makes a cartoon of his blundering equivocations.

Thousands of Conservatives, rank and file, condemn Sir James Whitney for his blustering discourtesy to deputations, in fact to everybody who differs from his opinions.

Never was a prime minister of Ontario so berated in the house of his friends.

They single out Sir James Whitney, because he is the Government. Like Louis XIV he says "I am the state." Sir James Whitney is IT.

The way to make the Sir James Whitney Government behave is either to turn it out altogether or, give it a strong opposition that will teach it good manners and a willingness to listen to the people's demands for reform.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY

Chimes Played National Airs of Scotland To-day

Today being St. Andrew's Day, a special service was held in St. John's church at 10 o'clock this morning. At 12 o'clock national and popular airs of Scotland were played on the chimes as a compliment to the Scotchmen in general and as a fitting recognition of the day.

St. Andrew is Scotland's patron saint, just as St. Patrick is for Ireland, and St. George for England.

And on the 30th November, every year, natives of the land about the Tweed turn their thoughts to its celebration in usual manner, by having banquets and concerts. At tonight in Nova Scotia and among Gallants the world over the day will be observed in joyful fashion. Through some cause or another lack of enthusiasm prevails the order was minded of having a gathering on this occasion, but it was allowed to drop. We hope to have it observed this time next year, and it could be made as important as the Burns anniversary (25th January).

WE MUST KEEP LEVEL HEADS ON THE POWER QUESTION

The Hon. Adam Beck certainly underrates the intelligence of the citizens of Peterborough, and their knowledge of facts, when he makes overdrawn statements. Yesterday's issue of the Toronto News says:

"The water power at dams four and five, on the Canal system, will have a power developing capacity of between 20,000 and 25,000 horse power. The Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the commission, told the News this morning that the leases of dams Numbers 4 and 5, having been secured, the Government was in a position to assure the municipalities of the eastern and central sections of the Province a cheap power supply."

It is manifest, as stated, that the Hon. Adam Beck authorized this extraordinary statement to the Toronto News.

According to the Hydro Electric Power Commission's report, dated April 17th, 1906, issued by the Hon. Adam Beck himself, (see page 10), the total power that can be developed at Dam No. 5, is 1,280 horse power, and at Dam No. 4, 1,100 horse power, making a total of 2,280 horse power, yet now, at the time of an election, the Hon. Adam Beck informs the Toronto News that these dams have a power development capacity of between 20,000 and 25,000 horse power, and, moreover, that when this power is developed part of it is to be taken away from Peterborough and distributed to Eastern Ontario to the disadvantage and deprivation of the City of Peterborough.

Mr. Beck will have to produce some more feasible and well-founded scheme than this before he can hope to obtain the confidence of the citizens of Peterborough, who are wont to look at what they are buying.

Domestic lighting in the City of Peterborough is lower than the Hydro Electric Company is supplying to the City of Toronto. This is a point to be considered.

At the present time in the City of Peterborough there is a large amount of surplus electric power already developed and waiting for a market—2,000 horse power at the Auburn dam.

The Review said last evening:

"Now the arrangements with municipalities by which the latter shall get their power is that they shall make a contract for whatever quantity they think they can use. They need not take the whole quantity of power under the contract, but they are liable to pay for 75 per cent. of the quantity contracted for, whether used or not".

Suppose the City Council contracted for 1,000 horse power hydro-electric energy at, say, $125.00 per horse power. Under present conditions the City could not use this 1,000 horse power because there are no customers to use it, as every customer is supplied, and there is still a surplus of power on hand. There would be great chances, therefore, of this 1,000 horse power remaining idle on the hands of the city, and the city would have to pay for 75 per cent. of this power "whether used or not". That would involve a direct liability upon the taxpayers of Peterborough—they would have to pay for 750 unused horse-power, at $15.00 per horse power, which would amount to a charge of $11,250.00 per annum, for no advantage whatever. To increase the taxes of the ratepayers of Peterborough, $11,250 per year for no advantage whatever, except having 750 horse power in cold storage, would be "Peck and power at cost" with a vengeance.

The Hon. Adam Beck, and Mr. Peck, and the Review will have to bring forward a more feasible scheme to commend itself to the intelligence of the electors of West Peterborough.

We want power in Peterborough, and we want it at the cheapest possible rate—at a cheaper rate, if possible, than we are now getting, and can get, it. The whole question hinges on the best way to secure this power. We have no prejudiced objection to the Hydro-electric scheme, but it must be dealt with on its merits. We must not be stampeded with rosecate and over-estimated election-time appeals—made, too evidently, for purposes of party advantage.

Let the electors think it out, reason it out, figure it out, treat the subject as a business matter, and not be carried away by an election-time flurry of interest in power for Peterborough, after five years' utter neglect, while western Ontario has been flooded with power, at the general expense of the Province and given an unfair advantage over Eastern Ontario—in the capture of industries that might have come to, say, Peterborough. Why has the Hydro-Electric joined the sleep of the Whitney Government? Why has it delayed taking interest in Peterborough and district till most of the powers have been utilized by awake private enterprise, making the question of power assume a far greater cost? The people should inquire why this great interest in power is aroused just at election time.

This fact does not affect the merits of the Hydro-Electric scheme of the general election of 1911, but it suggests careful, deliberate and non-partizan study of its merits.

HOCKEY PLAYERS MEET AT EXAMINER THIS EVENING

Every Intermediate and Junior Player in the City is Expected to be on Hand in Order That Tickets for Training Course at the Y.M.C.A. May be Given Out---To-night's Executive Meeting.

All the hockey players of the city, junior and intermediate alike, are asked to be present at a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club to be held to-night at 7:30 o'clock in the Examiner office. Players must be on hand in order to secure tickets for the special training course at the Y.M.C.A. which begins to-morrow night at 7:30 o'clock. In order to secure tickets for other team players will have to take their preliminary training which will be under the direction of Mr. J. J. Thompson. The exercises will be of a nature to put the men in the best physical condition before they begin actual hockey practice. Mr. Thompson has arranged a schedule that will give a maximum of fun as well as of exercise, and the players should heartily enjoy the training.

Members of the executive are asked to be on hand to-night at 7:30 as there is important business for the management to take up.

MONTREAL, NOV. 30.—"May God have mercy on me and him too," moaned Robert Fitzsimmons, when he died on the operating table at the Royal Victoria Hospital at one o'clock this morning, from the effects of a bullet fired into his abdomen by Charles H. Ross of Ottawa. The tragedy took place in the coat room of the Orpheum Theatre, where Fitzsimmons was chief usher and Ross programme advertising solicitor for the theatre. They were engaged in a card game known as black jack, when a dispute took place and the shooting followed. There were several other men in the game. Ross is under arrest. It is stated that Ross is a victim of cocaine habit, is a sore loser and has a very violent temper.

REMEMBER THE POSTIE.

In another column is an appeal on behalf of the postmen. We should not only send our Christmas bundles for the post early, but should see that, when the over-burdened postman has brought us a lot of Christmas presents, he should carry away one or two for himself. He has served us well through the year and has brought to our doors good tidings—and even bad tidings, but that was not his fault—and when the season of the great "glad tidings" comes, we should not forget it, in the case of the postman. We can make his burden lighter by not concentrating the burden on two or three days. Christmas is builded on altruism, and the more consideration we show for others, the better we keep Christmas in spirit and in truth.

THE NEW MIRACLE.

Mr Bourassa has added another scalp to the Nationalist belt. Yesterday, Mr. P E Blondin, M P., a red, red Nationalist, who thinks and says "we have had enough of England and English," was nominated by Hon. British-connection Borden to be deputy-speaker of a loyal Canadian parliament to be deputy speaker an ultra-montane, Briton-hating, French Canadian Nationalist, running mate of Hon Dr Sproule, ex-Grand Master of the Orange order. And Mr Borden's fifty Ontario supporters in the House, elected on a British connection, loyalty and anti-French and anti-Catholic cry, swallowed the dose. Let no one tell us hereafter that oil and water will not mix. That's the new miracle.

A ONE-VOICED LEADER.

Mr N W Rowell, Liberal leader, does not share Sir James Whitney's dread of speaking out in the matter of bilingual schools. He takes no refuge in quibbles, and evasion like Sir James Whitney, but boldly recognizes the importance of so administering our elementary schools that every child can get the rudiments, at least, of a knowledge of the English language, in order to fit it for the best discharge of the duties of citizenship, both in its own interests, when it comes to adult life, and in the interests of the country's citizenship. He spoke in North Bay and Sturgeon Falls, where the bilingual question is acute, and where these schools exist, in an apologetic attitude towards Sir James Whitney, who says that there is "no such thing as a bilingual school in Ontario". In reference to this statement Mr Rowell asked:

Does any one believe, or does any one inside or outside this hall believe that he himself believes his statement when he made it? The strongest thing in Mr Rowell's speeches is the high favour with which his arguments for the English language for every child were received by his audiences, in both places largely comprised of French-speaking Canadians. They are in favour of effective opportunities for learning the English language. This shows that the agitation for the improvement of bilingual schools is not confined to extremists or bigots. Those people themselves, who are most deeply interested, the French Canadian people themselves, who are most deeply interested, the French Canadian people [illegible] that will put [illegible] for making their way, in an English-speaking province and country, with their English-speaking fellow citizens. They could well receive with applause the concluding sentences of Mr Rowell's straightforward address.

But I wish to say this to you, my French-Canadian friends. Does your boy have as good a chance if he doesn't have a good working knowledge of English? For English, we must remember, is the official language of the Legislature and of our courts, and it is the principal language of trade and commerce. He should have a fair chance to compete with my child, and with every child of English-speaking Canadian parentage. But I also say that the State has no right to say that these same children should grow up without further knowledge of the language which they first lisped at their mother's knee.

Therefore, I say to you, think of both sides. Ask yourself if Sir Wilfrid Laurier could have been the greatest figure from the overseas Dominion at the Coronation and on other occasions in Great Britain if he had not been able to speak the English language.

The bilingual school question is not a party question; it is not a religious question; it is a citizenship question, that concerns and involves educational fair play to every element of our population.

Mr. Rowell's view is the view of the statesmen—in the interests of the good and useful citizenship of the state. He has the courage of his convictions on the subject, and, in this respect, is in strong contrast with Sir James Whitney's pettifogging quibbling attitude—"no such thing as bilingual schools". Sir James has not dealt ingenuously with the subject. He has had seven years' opportunity. He has had the benefit of the four French-speaking inspectors of bilingual schools he has appointed—for schools that "do not exist". If they were qualified inspectors, if they had done, or had been required to do, their duty, Sir James could, and would have known, that many of the 300 bilingual schools in Ontario were not conducted according to his regulations. If he had had any real interest in educational administration, he would have known something about their defective management, and would not have needed acknowledge a guilty neglect or a desire to shelve a troublesome subject, by referring the matter to Dr. Merchant, to investigate, without the courage to make his report public; but, on the other hand, to be bold enough to be dishonest enough to withhold the report on bilingual schools from the public till after the elections. He thus deprives the people of a chance to intelligently and fairly pronounce on a subject that is, and has been made, a burning question, by even Sir James Whitney's staunchest party friends.—"Be bold enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Baron" Bavastro, who was one of the chief campaign orators for the Conservative party in Centre Toronto a couple of months ago, and who was strongly against reciprocity, has gone to the United States to join Beatie Nesbitt, the officers of the law being close on his heels with a warrant charging fraud. Curious, remarks the Globe, how these Conservative orators get ahead of the law when headed for a city of refuge.

Mr W M German, M.P., Welland, qualified to rank with the "noble eighteen" Liberals of Toronto, on the reciprocity matter, but his apostacy was not complete. He is still a Liberal, and says so in no uncertain terms. Speaking in the House in regard to a charge that he would be on the government side, no matter what party was in power, Mr. German said: "I have been a Liberal, and will remain a Liberal. I have enough bad habits, and do not want to add to them by becoming a Conservative."

"Seven years without a scandal," says the Toronto News. Why harrow your heart the whole seven years of administration of the Whitney Government, as far as really progressive legislation and developmental administration are concerned, has been a scandal, in a live, wealthy, wide-awake Province, like Ontario.

After seven years' administration "without a scandal" all the Toronto News can point to with pride is the matter of "prison reform", not an original idea, either, but merely in adaptation of a system tried out elsewhere, and experience has not shown who the real thing or an imitation.

FELL OFF WAGGON

An East city resident happened with an accident this afternoon at the corner of Queen and Simcoe streets, which might have had very serious results. He got up into a waggon and before he was aware, the horses gave a quick jump, being frightened at something, and he was thrown out of the waggon, alighting on his hands and knees. Fortunately he escaped without serious injury.

Leader Rowell's Speeches In French Speaking Districts

Mr. Rowell at North Bay:

Mr. Rowell made an immediate hit by apologizing in French for the fact that he was unable to speak at any length in that language.

After explaining the policy of the party in regard to good roads and liquor licenses, the leader took up the question of education.

"What are the conditions in this Province in regard to education?" he asked. "We have not properly qualified teachers for our schools, even in Old Ontario. There was a time when the sons and daughters of those without large means were able to attend the county model schools and so qualify themselves to teach, passing first for one certificate, then after earning a little money, going back for more instruction, and taking on higher certificates. But Sir James Whitney's Government abolished the county model schools. What is the result? It is that to-day there are between 800 and 1,200 teachers in the Province without certificates, who are teaching merely under permits. Of what use to you are cheap text books and fine buildings if you have not the teachers?

"Sir James Whitney then devises a scheme to keep the teachers. Here it is a typical Tory scheme. He would withhold certificates, and force the teachers to remain here for a year whether they want to or not. But I do not believe in conscript labour among teachers any more than I believe in conscription for the army or the navy.

THE BILINGUAL QUESTION

"The Liberals believe that on this education question they are wroking from a platform which is broad enough for every citizen to stand upon. It has been said that I have only one speech on this question, the same speech for Sturgon Falls that I have for Toronto and Ottawa. That is true. What I said in those places was that we have about 150,000 citizens of French-Canadian parentage in this Province, and they are increasing in number. Now the problem of the schools is not what will best please these good citizens, but what will be to the best interests of their children who have to use the schools of Ontario. (Great applause.)

"Then I said next there were two extreme views in regard to the teaching of these children. On the one hand there are those who say they should be taught in English, and in English only; on the other hand there is the view that the French language should be placed on an absolute equality with the English. I said, and I say again, that both these positions are wrong, because neither is in the interest of the children.

FOY HELPED HIM OUT

"Sir James Whitney says there are no bilingual schools. Does any one believe or does any one in or out of this hall believe that he himself believes this statement when he made it? No, he is trying to dodge the issue. When he found that he had got himself into difficulties he called on Mr. Foy to help him out and Mr. Foy declared that there could be no bilingual schools, because they were not legal. And then came Dr. Payne, who asserted that English should be the mother tongue of every teacher in the schools in Ontario.

I want to say that that is not fair. I have repeatedly asked Sir James Whitney to answer me one or two fair questions, but he has not yet done so. I asked him, are you satisfied with the condition which exists in the bilingual schools? If you are say so, and tell your followers to stop their agitation. If you are not satisfied, why have you done nothing in the past five years?

"But I wish to say this to you, my French-Canadian friends. Does your boy have as good a chance if he doesn't have a good working knowledge of English? For English, we must remember, is the official language of the Legislature and of our courts, and is the principal language of trade and commerce. He should have a fair chance to compete with my child, and with every child of English-speaking Canadian parentage. But I also say that the State has no right to say that these same children should grow up without further knowledge of the language which they first lisped at their mother's knee.

"Therefore I say to you, think of both sides. Ask yourself if Sir Wilfrid Laurier could have been the greatest figure from the overseas Dominion at the Coronation, and on other occasions in Great Britain, if he had not been able to speak the English language."

Death Of Mr. Fred. Chambers

The death occurred in the Ross Hospital, Wednesday, of Mr. Fred Chambers, of Toronto, who is well known in Lindsay, Peterborough and Omemee. The deceased young man, who was about 27 years of age, had been ailing for some time, and previous to entering the Ross Hospital was employed with the Toronto Globe. He was born in Omemee, where he resided until of late years, when he moved to Toronto. He was employed with Chambers drug store, Omemee, Mr. Lee Fay, Lindsay, and a year in Midland.

MACKENZIE KING HERE DEC 7TH

The biggest meeting in the local Provincial election campaign will be held in the Grand Opera House a week from to-night, on Thursday, December 7th, when Hon. Wm. Mackenzie King, the former Minister of Labour and president of the Ontario Reform Association, will address the electors of the riding in support of the candidature of Mr. Hall. Hon. Mr. King is one of the best known and most thought of, public men, in Canada, and his fame as an orator is wide-spread. In the present campaign he has added to his laurels by his scathing arraignment of the faults of the Whitney government, and his clean-cut, decisive criticism, will have their effect on December 11. The electors of Peterborough will welcome this opportunity of hearing the issues of the campaign discussed by Hon. Mr. Mackenzie King.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Peterborough Boy The Finest Quarter Who Ever Played Game

Critics From Different Sections of Canada United in Praising Pete Campbell for His Magnificent Work---Ben Simpson's Striking Tribute in the Hamilton Herald.

same, and they need to be to keep pace with him. Judging by his work all season and especially on Saturday, he is one of the best quarter-backs who ever played.—Ben Simpson in Hamilton Herald.

Varsity had a great advantage over the Oarsmen at quarter. O'Connor is a good man behind the scrimmage, but Pete Campbell stands head and shoulders above any man in this position on the field since before the days when "Thrift" Burnside introduced the snap back system and paved the way for the present style of play. With Campbell as the pivot, the Varsity backs worked together like a flash and were up and doing before the Argos knew the ball was in play. He started every run and was quick to take advantage of every opening and every slip made by his opponents on the line.—Toronto News.

Even when the plays failed this was apparent. In addition to the variety of methods employed in advancing the ball, the quickness and alertness with which they executed the various plays had a tendency to demoralize their opponents. Pete Campbell was, of course, the pivot, and to the Varsity quarter-back's fast work much of the success of the attack was due.—Toronto Star.

In Peter Campbell Varsity has the greatest quarter Canadian Rugby ever saw. He is smart as a steel trap and gets the ball away so fast his opponents can't keep track of it.—Dr. Thompson, president of Hamilton Tigers.

Pete Campbell was head and shoulders above O'Connor, and on his play can be considered pretty nearly the best quarter-back that ever stood on a Canadian field. He was a veritable shadow on his feet, and as elusive as a leaf in an autumn breeze. He found holes in most unexpected places, and no rat that ever existed had anything on him. Along with Maynard, he pulled off some great runs, and it is an open question whether he or his great partner deserve the greatest share of the credit for the victory.—Toronto News.

In Pete Campbell, Varsity has one of the grandest little quarter-backs who ever played in Canada. He never lost a second in getting the ball in play, and his passing was about as clean and accurate as possible.—Hamilton Times.

"JINX" IN THE WAKE OF CHAMPION JACK JOHNSON

LONDON, Nov. 28.—That Jack Johnson, the champion pugilist, is hoodooed and has been since his arrival here last summer, is the opinion of everyone who has anything to do with the big negro.

His motor car enthusiasm have been as tumultuous as in the States, and for the same reason. In passion for speeding Only yesterday he was fined $100 at Newcastle for driving to the public danger, and instead of turning up manfully in self-defence he sent a solicitor to plead that he was "too ill to appear," notwithstanding that he gave a show at Birmingham. Twice in a London court he will be called upon to defend a claim for $2,500 and $1,000, which he gave to James White, the unlucky would-be promoter of the Johnson-Wells contest for that amount. Johnson got at most $12,000 out of White, but the balance over the £10 Carnoutit was secured in case in the event that he decline to return the amount borrowed doe not make him good.

Cloe is Missing.

A team of jewelers who allowed Johnson to take away some diamonds on approval are asking pertinent questions as to whether he will return the precious stones or pay for them. And Hugh D. McIntosh threatens to come across from Sydney with his kick. Johnson signed a contract with McIntosh to go on a lecture tour through the east, give exhibitions and take part in two contests at Sydney, Australia. Johnson was to receive $30,000 for the eight months. The company hired McIntosh backed Jeffries for the Texan and his engagement also advanced the champion some money on account. He was to have sailed from the Orvieto, which left London Sept. 20, but when his bout with Wells was called off Johnson cancelled his retirement from the ring. But never yet has he returned to McIntosh any part of the advanced money. And to McIntosh Johnson owes in a great measure his present position, as it was the Sydney promoter who induced Burns to meet him.

Just Little Affairs.

Aside from these affairs, Johnson has been sued successfully by landladies for damages done to flats he occupied, he has been refused the lease of the Waverly market, Edinburgh, for a series of lectures, and has been the cause of an outcry against mixed boxing in England. A nice record for six months, isn't it not?

The stopping of the Wells-Johnson fight has brought on its train a host of miseries for boxers and promoters. Twenty round contests are legal in this country, but ever since the riots at Agricultural Hall and Astley twenty years ago, which were run by Frank Hind, police protection has been withdrawn from them. It was that circumstance which brought about the formation of the National Sporting Club. Now it seems that every chief constable, police commissioner is a law to himself and all over the United Kingdom the peace-heads are preventing the holding of contests. The Moran-Driscoll affair which was scheduled for Dec. 2 at Birmingham, is said to be called off and every other event outside of regularly organized clubs looks like being squelched.

Whites Still Battle.

Yesterday Bombardier Wells and Fred Storbeck, the South African champion, were matched to meet at the National Sporting Club on Dec. 18 for $1,250 a side and a purse of $6,000 of which $4,250 will go to the winner, and $1,750 to the loser. Each man will be allowed $125 toward training expenses. There will be no motor-bikes and white contests at the National Sporting Club, another heritage of the Johnson bonfire. The first important one was that in which Langford thrashed Jim Hall, then English champion in four rounds.

THOUGHT COLD WOULD TURN INTO CONSUMPTION

LEFT LUNG GOT VERY SORE, HEART DID NOT FEEL ANY TOO GOOD.

Mr. Robert McLarnon, Shawville, Que., writes:—I am writing to tell you my experience I had with a bad cold and a bottle of your valuable medicine I was up in the lumber camps teaming horses, and I caught a very bad cold. I thought it was going to turn into consumption, for my left lung got very sore and my heart did not feel any too good. I came home and tried some different remedies but they did me no good. A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I tried it, and when I had taken two bottles my cold was gone. I think it is a great remedy, and will advise any one with a cold to use it. I can't praise it enough.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, which combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies, makes it one of the greatest known preparations for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOCKEY

At Scouts Hockey Club meeting Tuesday night and decide to enter a team in the City League. Arthur Reynolds, of last year's Junior, was elected Captain and Assistant Manager E. B. Moffatt. The Club has secured a good bunch of hockey material together, and they are hoping to make a good showing in the City League.

Cornwall, Nov. 29.—Edward La[illegible] (Newsy) left here last night by way of Montreal for Vancouver, B.C., where he will play hockey this winter. Laboode says that, while he may come East again next spring, it is not at all unlikely that he will play again next summer with Cup Jones' Minto cuppers. He has been asked to play with the new Irish-Canadian Club of Montreal, but so far has not decided to accept Mr. Kennedy's offer yet.

ALL WANDERERS GO WEST.

Montreal, Nov. 29.—Harry Hyland and Jimmy Gardner, the two star forward men of the Wanderer hockey team last season, left for the coast last night to play on the Patrick's Big four Western combination. They were given a big sendoff by a host of enthusiasts. Bad Glass has announced that he will follow them at the end of the week.

Ernie Johnston left some time ago so that practically all the Wanderer old recruits will be out of Eastern hockey this season.

Art Bennett, the Kingston boy who played with Canadiens last year, has been signed by Wanderers.

SKENE RONAN A HOLD-OUT TOO

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Skene Ronan, the Ottawa boy who was awarded to the cupholders at a recent meeting of the National Hockey Association, will probably go to the Pacific Coast. Ronan received the offer through Jimmie Gardner and stated last night that he would go to the coast if Ottawa offered him as much. Ronan is a clever player and has been playing with Renfrew for the past few years. He was also with the Toronto team that were in the O'Brien protest case and has since been with the Hamilton and Renfrew teams.

PLAYERS FOR TECUMSEHS

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Frank Brown, of Toronto, and Ross Mulligan, of Quebec, are closed to play with the Tecumsehs of Toronto in the National Hockey Association.

"The Gospel of The Hereafter" by Rev. Paterson-Smyth, on sale at Trebilcock Bros., price $1.00.

LENDRUM'S STUDIO

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"Some time ago," writes one of my letter-friends, "you suggested that good pictures were safe and desirable wedding gifts because they were unlikely to be duplicated, and one seldom has too many of them. Now I often feel that I would like to give a picture not only for a wedding gift, but on other occasions, but I know very little about art and don't know just what pictures would be sure to be acceptable. Could you publish a list of some of the best pictures so that I would know what to ask for the next time I go picture shopping?"

Having heard this same feeling expressed by others, I am the more willing to comply with this request to the best of my ability. Art critics will please not read and scoff. This is intended for plain people.

In the first place, my correspondent will doubtless be interested in knowing what are called the twelve world famous pictures. I believe the list was made by a great art critic and has been generally accepted by the art world.

These are "The Night Watch," by Rembrandt; "The Elevation of the Cross" and "The Descent from the Cross," by Rubens; "The Immaculate Conception," by Murillo; "The Aurora," by Guido Rheni (called the finest decorative picture in the world); "La Notte," by Correggio; "The Last Judgment," by Michael Angelo; "The Transfiguration" and "The Sistine Madonna," by Raphael; "The Last Supper," by Leonardo di Vinci; "The Communion of St. Jerome," by Domenichino, and "The Descent from the Cross," by Daniele Da Volterra.

Any one of the great Madonnas is always an excellent gift. Besides Raphael's "Sistine Madonna," which is called the greatest of all the paintings of the Virgin, some of the finest Madonnas are Raphael's "Madonna of the Chair" and his "Madonna del Gran Duca," so called because the Grand Duke for whom it was painted carried it around with him everywhere he went and worshipped before it as a shrine and the "Virgin of the Rosary," by Murillo. The "Madonna of the Arbor," by Bouguereau, is a lovely modern Madonna that has been very popular recently.

Some of the other exceptionally beautiful religious pictures are Rubens' "Holy Family," Velasquez' "Joseph's Coat" and "St. Anthony of Padua and the Infant Jesus," Michael Angelo's "Holy Family," Andrea del Sarto's "St. John the Baptist," Leonardo di Vinci's "Study of the Head of Christ," and "The Assumption of the Virgin," by Titian.

If one desires an old master but not a religious subject there is Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa," just now so famous that it hardly needs to be recalled. Van Dyke's "Baby Stuart" and his "Children of Charles I," Rembrandt's "Portrait of an Old Man" and his "Portrait of His Wife," Velasquez's "Portrait of Infanta Marguerita," Titian's "La Donna Bella," Tintoretto's "Marriage of Ariadne and Bacchus" are other beautiful examples of the secular work of the greatest painters. For a musical friend one could hardly find a lovelier gift than Rafael's "St. Cecelia" to hang over her piano.

Perhaps the work of the more modern artists will make a greater appeal to many people. Almost everyone likes Greuze's work. "The Village Bride" and "The Broken Pitcher" are among his best known work. But any of his girls heads are sure to be desirable. If you prefer landscape, Corot's are almost universally admired. "The Willows" and "Spring" are considered among his best.

It would be difficult, indeed to find anyone who would not be pleased with a reproduction of some of Millet's wonderful paintings. Some of the best are "The Sower," "The Gleaners," "The Sheepfold by Night," "The Water Carrier" and "The Angelus."

Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Innocence" and "Love of his angels' heads," Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" and his "Portrait of Mrs. Siddons" make excellent prints. For one who is fond of animals, some of Landseer or Rosa Bonheur's work would probably be pleasing. Boutet's "Beati Beatrix" and "The Girlhood of the Virgin" are beautiful modern conceptions and almost anything of Burne Jones would probably please anyone who likes the modern school.

Of course, this is not by any means an exhaustive list. Merely a very few sketchy suggestions to the person who wants to buy good pictures and does not feel that he knows enough about art to select anything good at random.

HELP THE POSTMAN BY SENDING PARCELS EARLY

Men Complain That the Carrying of Bundles Constitute a Grievance Which is Aggravated Every Year---How the Public Can Minimize the Trouble.

The modern mail carrier is developing into a reincarnation of the original "Scrooge."

The Christmas rush in the postoffice has commenced, and if you care to question the letterman you will quickly learn that "Merry Christmas" means nothing to him.

"Every Christmas we have to work about twenty-four hours a day and the closer we get to the big holiday for the average man the more burdens me the job becomes," a mail man told the Advertiser this morning. "People never seem to think that it would be pens out a whole lot if these presents were sent through the mail a couple of weeks before Christmas, and as we make this appeal yearly without results, I guess they never will."

Wrapping of Parcels.

The mail carriers also take objection to the manner in which small parcels are wrapped. People seem to think that parcels can be more readily handled when done up in small squares, but if they would make them long, the same as newspapers, they would confer a lasting favour on the postmen. Small parcels cannot be strapped into a bundle and conveniently carried, while those of more oblong shape are easily handled.

Plum puddings, which come by mail to Canada in tons each year, particularly from the old country, constitute another grievance among these carriers, who cannot see why any man should care to place such a ugly substance under his belt.

A Warning.

The postoffice authorities have also issued a warning concerning the practice of placing letters in parcels, books or papers.

All such notes should be sent separately at the letter rate, and any person discovered committing offence against this rule is liable to a fine of from $10 to $40.

The mail clerks have authority to open any parcel suspected, and for that reason no one may below to [illegible] London Advertiser.

SIR EDWARD GREY CLEARS THE AIR

London Advertiser.

Sir Edward Grey has spoken, and Europe breathes more freely.

The theft of the Moroccan affair was staked out clearly. The scene of the Anglo-German crisis was neither Britain nor Germany, but France. By the treaty of Algeciras France bound herself not to attempt to exceed the power assigned to her in the treaty, but she exceedingly exceeded her pledge.

She bartered such financial evils around the Sultan that in the effort to collect taxes from his subjects to meet his obligations he provoked the cadet, which was plainly the object of French policy. Then a French expedition set Germany rocked for excuses of protecting Europeans there. It was so palpably an army of occupation that Germany asked for explanations to which she was entitled as a signatory of the Algeciras treaty. France rejected her representations and Germany replied late in June by sending the warships Panther to Agadir, the leading Atlantic port of Morocco.

Then the tie between Germany and Great Britain began at this point. The German ambassador at London informed Sir Edward Grey that the Panther was sent to protect imperial Germans interests in Southwestern Morocco and would withdraw when its mission had been accomplished, but he added that a return to the status quo was apparently impossible and that Germany contemplated definite occupation of the Moroccan coast by Germany, France and Spain. On July 4th Sir Edward Grey told the German ambassador that Great Britain could not be ignored in the negotiations over Morocco, having regard to her commercial interests and her obligations to France. We could not recognize any new arrangement that might become to [illegible] us," wrote Sir Edward. WILD TALE OF SEA

New York, Nov 30 — A wild tale of the sea, wherein iron nerves of hardy seamen broke and grizzled marines wept like children, was told when the battered French steamer, Sant' Anna, drew up off Quarantine to-day and reported the death of four sailors and the serious injury of a number of others.

How the liner, her engines stopped, wallowed in the trough of a swirling sea, while captain and crew watched three sailors swept from them on a life raft to death; how one sailor was rescued, how men risked their lives dozens of times to haul from the sea-swept decks their fellows who were injured—all this was told in simple terms by Capt. Pavey, the ship's commander.

HIT BY HUGE WAVE

The Sant' Anna left Marseilles on Nov. 10th, and Naples on Nov. 14th, bringing 21 first cabin, 126 second cabin and 882 steerage passengers. On Nov. 23rd she ran into a sou'wester, against which she fought all morning. Passengers were ordered below and the hatches battened down. At 10.40 there rose without warning a great sea, almost like a tidal wave. Wall-like, the officers say, it seemed to hover above the prow of the vessel and then fell upon the decks. Tons of water swept from bow to stern. Lifeboats were torn from their davits and smashed to splinters. Decks were swept bare. Upper cabins and saloons were flooded.

The ship was thrown off her course and dropped into the trough of the sea. Captain and sailors seized stanchions on which to hold when the next wave boarded her. But none came. The storm kept on in its fury, but not another great wave appeared.

The helmsman threw the vessel back into the teeth of the gale. Far astern, Durand, Sarto, Cabisto and Quarreli, four seamen, were swimming in the sea. Out on the deck Foixet and Roumen, seamen, and Pazetti, a ship's boy, were lying crushed and battered by the wave. Though other waves were expected, a score of sailors sprang across the slippery decks. Some reached the injured men while others hurled life buoys and life ratts astern.

ONE MAN RESCUED.

Capt Pavey ordered the engines stopped and the liner turned toward the four men in the vessel's wake. No life boat could live in these seas, but the four seamen had reached life ratts. Durand, Sarto and Cabisto were unable to retain their hold and they gave up the fight and were swept away.

Quarreli, though waves beat him away from the life ratt, fought his way back each time until the liner dropped him a life rope, which he tied about his waist and was hauled back to the deck.

Seaman Foixet's spine was broken by the buffeting he received from the wave, and he died two days later. The others are on the road to recovery. On Nov. 25th a terrific cyclone swept the vessel, but there were no further casualties.

HICKS' PREDICTIONS FOR DECEMBER

Following is Rev. Mr Hicks' weather prefictions for the month of December:

A regular storm period covers the 2nd to the 7th, having its centre on the 4th. The Mercury period is central on the 5th, with the full Moon in perigree. Earth's winter solstice, also, bears on this period. Moon being on the celestial equator on the 1st, the barometer will begin to fall, and other storm conditions will appear in this period. From Sunday the 3rd, to Thursday the 7th, look for general winter storms. Rain will turn to heavy sleet and snow, and fierce gales and blizards will sweep most parts of sea and land. Many seismic shakes will be reported between the 2nd and the 8th, central on the 4th, 5th and 6th. A great cold wave will rush from the northwest spreading south and east from the 5th to 10th.

A reactionary storm period is central at the magnetic and electric crisis of winter solstice, on the 11th, 12th and 13th. Look at this time for a spell of continued threatening, stormy weather. Navigation on the Atlantic ocean will be perilous, and inland storms will be bitter and prolonged. Volcanic unrest and outburst, with Earth currents and auroral illuminations, will be at maximum, causing seismic disturbance in many places, outside the limits of the regular seismic periods.

A regular storm period is central on the 15th, extending from the 13th to the 17th. Low barometer, sudden change to warmer, with possible lightning and thunder and rain, will appear to southward about the 14th, and on the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th general winter solstice storms will be natural over sea and land, covering most parts of the northern hemisphere. High barometer, sweeping gales and great cold will bring up the rear of storm areas.

A reactionary storm period will bring change to warmer, with renewed rain and snow, on and touching the 20th 21st and 22nd. The disturbances at this time will centre about the new Moon on the 20th, the being the centre of another seismic period, extending from the 18th to the 22nd. This period will add to the accumulations of snow and ice, resulting from previous solstice storms, and winter's cold will tighten its grip with the high barometer following the storms.

A regular storm period covers the last week of the year, being central on the 27th. Storms will bring rain and probable lightning and thunder on and touching the 28th, but snow and sleet will follow. High barometer, north-west gales and cold, fair weather will prevail in most parts of the country as we pass into 1912

APPOINTED RECTOR

Rev. E. B. Grobb, M.A. Curate of the Church of the Epiphany, of Toronto, has been appointed Rector of All Saints' Church, by Rev. Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto. Mr. Grobb is an honour graduate of the Toronto University of 1904, and graduated from Wycliffe College, 1906. He is a minister of sterling integrity, and a very forcible speaker. He was largely instrumental in building the new church of the Epiphany, Toronto. He won the scholarship for oratory in the Wycliffe College. He is a man of great ability and a splendid speaker, and All Saints congregation is very fortunate in securing such a prominent Rector and it is needless to say that the church has a great and prosperous future in store under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Grobb.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease

IN MEMORIAM WILLIAM HINCHLIFFE

William Hinchliffe! Good-bye to you! Even the word "good-bye" in its original primitive sense "God be with you." How few, when using this familiar expression, give even a passing thought to its real significance. Good-bye, friend!

For upwards of twelve months he who has just passed on lay "cheek by cheek" and I were "mates." We worked side by side. "Billy" Old Bill" as he was variously and familiarly called and I have often helped each other in our various duties. A good hearted, straightforward man, he had, at the "Edison," where we worked, endeared many friends, and I remember every Sunday night during the period he was ill, I used to go to sit with him for a short while after evensong, we over at St. John's church, where he had been to many years a regular worshipper. On the following Monday morning I had to hold before the seven o'clock whistle blew, quite a small levee of his fellow workers, each anxious to enquire after their old friend's welfare. For a second prize, Mr. F. J. Fowler, third prize, G. Miller, fourth prize, Jas. Fowler, 5th, Wm. Fowler; 6th, P. Nicholls, 7th, A. Payne, 8th, E. Blewett, 9th, E. Blewett, 10th, B. Bickell, 11th, P. Cullens.

Mr. George Cockburn shot for J. Fowler, and J. Gillespie for Wm. Fowler.

Stops a Deep-seated Cough in a Hurry

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded if it Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a 16-oz. bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains and other throat troubles, and unequaled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WEDDING BELLS

PETERS—PEARSON.

A very quiet wedding took place yesterday at the Charlotte Street Methodist church, when Rev. G. W. Henderson united in marriage Miss Isabel Pearson, daughter of Mr and Mrs. John Pearson, of 300 Pearl Ave., to Mr. Harry B. Peters, of Hastings. Mr. and Mrs. Peters left on the 1.38 train for a short trip to Toronto and Hamilton.

NICHOLLS—BRANCH.

The wedding was quietly solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Branch, Selwyn, last night of their daughter, Miss Maria, to Mr. Albert K. Nicholls. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Bonner, pastor of the Gilmour Memorial church. The young couple, who were unattended, will reside at Selwyn.

BILLINGS—PORTER.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon at Dovercourt Road Presbyterian Church, in the presence of their immediate friends, when Miss Lillian Victoria Porter, youngest daughter of Mr. John Porter, 377 Brock avenue, was united in marriage to Mr. Cresswell S. Billings, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Billings of Peterborough.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jas. Wilson, the young couple being unattended.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a travelling suit of gray and wore a black picture hat.

They were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, which testified to the esteem in which the young couple were held. Mr. and Mrs. Billings left on the 4.30 C. P. R. train for Niagara and Buffalo. They will reside in this city.

MAROIS—HAINES.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at 11 Cooper street, the home of the bride's sister, yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, when Miss Bertha L. Haines was united in matrimony to Mr. Henry Levi Marois, by Rev. H. E. Keith. The bride was attended by Miss Carlyn Mayo Abbott, while Mr. L. Walter Jamieson supported the groom. The happy young couple left for a short trip.

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of Knox church was held last night with a good attendance and the programme proved most interesting and helpful to all present. Mrs. McPherson, the president of the Knox church W.F.M.S., was in the chair.

Mrs. Walter Roger gave a very interesting address on "Korea," tracing the historical relationship of Korea and other countries and showing how it was finally opened to the gospel. She referred to the wonderful present interest in the gospel and its spread in Korea and illustrated the zeal and the wonderful liberality of the Koreans who have become Christians.

Mr. A. McKenzie addressed the meeting in a most interesting manner on the W.F.M.S., showing how the Society had originated and illustrating its work at home and abroad.

During the meeting Mrs. Munro sang in excellent voice "The Lord is Mindful of His Own" from "Elijah."

Great Reception

KINGSTON, ONT., NOV. 29 — A grand reception was tendered the archbishop-elect of Kingston, Rev. Michael J. Spratt, on his arrival here from Belleville this afternoon. When the new prelate who succeeds Archbishop Gauthier, of Ottawa, in the see of Kingston arrived, two thousand people were in the streets around the station. The archbishop was received by Vicar-General Masterson, administrator of the diocese, and a number of the clergy. A procession, including members of the Knights of Columbus, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Benevolent Association and members of St. Mary's Cathedral choir and the bands of the R.C.H.A. and 110 Regiment, was formed and proceeded up Johnson street to St. Mary's Cathedral, where a address was presented to Father Spratt by the congregation of the cathedral. To which a reply was made.

His Excellency Mgr. Sbaretti, papal delegate, will arrive this afternoon to assist at the consecration ceremony. St. Mary's cathedral this morning at Bishop Fallon's request, when [illegible] Archbishop-elect Spratt, of Kingston, Bishop Macdonell, of Alexandria, Ont., Bishop Latulipe, of Peterboro, [illegible] Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, Archbishop Gauthier, of Ottawa, Bishop Emard, of Valleyfield, St. Marie, Bishop Lorrain, of Pembroke, Bishop Laroque, of Haileybury, Bishop Pascal, of St. Albert, Dean Mahoney, of Hamilton, Rev. Kidd, administrator of Toronto diocese, Mgr. Aylward, London, Mgr. McCann and Dean Hand, Toronto.

OBITUARY

MR. WM. HINCHCLIFFE.

In the death of Mr. William Hinchcliffe of 420 Sherbrooke street, which occurred at 5 o'clock last evening, Peterborough lost a very well-known and highly respected citizen.

The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, and was in his 68th year. He came to Canada in, or about the year 1870, and, save for a short visit to the States, has resided in the city ever since. He has, at times, been engaged in various kinds of business. For some time he was employed in the store on his own account, but, for the past twelve years he has worked in the Canadian General Electric Co.'s works. He was an esteemed member of the Masons, Oddfellows and Foresters, and a constant attendant at St. John's Anglican church. His many estimable qualities earned him the high esteem of the community, and those who lament his demise are not a few. He had been ill since October last.

Mr. Hinchcliffe is survived by a sorrowing wife only. All the members of his family have predeceased him.

The funeral will take place to-morrow (Friday) afternoon. There will be a service at St. John's church at 2 o'clock, after which the funeral cortege will proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment. The Rev. Canon Davidson will officiate.

MRS. MAUD VALTRAINO.

On Sunday last Mrs. T. H. Darcy, the proprietress of the Burleigh Falls Hotel was called away to the sick bedside of her daughter, Maud, in Philadelphia. Since Mrs. Darcy left, a telegram has been received by Mr. Fred Darcy of Peterborough, to the effect that Mrs. Valtraino had passed away.

The deceased, who was in her 30th year, was born in Peterborough, where she lived the greater portion of her life. During recent years she has been engaged in the theatrical profession, and has travelled much. It is understood that the deceased lady had previously had severe attacks of pneumonia, and it is thought that one of these attacks was the cause of her demise. She was well known in Peterborough, where her passing is lamented by many.

Mrs. Valtraino is survived by a sorrowing mother and three brothers, Fred, Warren and Roland, her father having passed away two years since.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough for interment by the deceased's mother, and the funeral announcement will be given later.

MRS. MELVILLE L. WILSON.

Word was received in the city this morning of the very sudden death in the London Hospital, of Mrs. Melville L. Wilson, daughter of Mr. G. W. Byers, the C.P.R. freight agent, at Peterborough.

It was only on the 21st of December last that the deceased was married to Mr. Wilson, and went to live in London. Her illness was only of short duration, and the news of her death comes so suddenly, was a severe shock to the relatives. Death was due to appendicitis. The deceased lady, who was only twenty years of age, was well known in Peterborough, where a wide circle of friends lament her demise. In September last she paid a two weeks' visit to Peterborough, and it is said that her health was not good at that time.

In addition to a loving husband, Mrs. Wilson is survived by a sorrowing mother and father, and one sister, Margaret.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough to-morrow, and the funeral will take place at 2.30 on Saturday afternoon, from the residence of her parents, 217 Townsend street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

WRESTLER USES FEET

MONTREAL, NOV. 29.—Raymond Cazeaux, the French grappler, who has been cleaning up the other wrestlers at Sohmer Park, met defeat to-night at the hands of Jess Pedersen, who claims the championship of Europe. Cazeaux lost the first fall on a foul after thirty-two minutes, the referee, who had let a lot of rough work pass, refusing to overlook two straight kicks to the region of Pedersen's stomach. The second fall was also the result of a foul, Pedersen putting an effective crotch hold on his opponent, when the latter lost his equilibrium delivering another kick.

The match between Cumberdik, the giant Turk and Roy O'Moore, the claimant to the Irish championship, was a farce, the Turk taking two falls in four and two minutes respectively.

IS BEHIND THE TIMES

Ontario Backward in Her Telephone Policy

MR. ROWELL AT WATERFORD

Waterford, Ont., Dec. 1.—At his meeting held in the Town Hall here last evening, N. W. Rowell devoted the greater portion of a long speech to the discussion of the public ownership of telephones. Evidently he had selected a subject which appealed most intimately to the farmers of North Norfolk, for his remarks were received with continued applause.

This was a progressive proposal, he said, a proposal in line with the general trend of progress on this matter throughout the world. Ontario, which once led all the other provinces, could not afford to come up at the end of the procession on a matter of such importance. It was time for her to take her old place in the van, and not permit every province in the Dominion to move ahead of her.

Already Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan have proved the wisdom of such a policy. It is a policy which every European country of importance adopted long ago by taking over the trunk lines, and one which is giving the utmost satisfaction in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

"Let me give you some figures from the western provinces which enjoy the operation of telephones under Government control." He said, "In 1905 there were in Manitoba 5,600 telephones, all bell instruments, in 1911, under Government control and at lessened cost to the subscribers there were 35,000 in use; in 1905, when Alberta decided to take over the management of her telephones, there were 850 in operation in the province. Today there are 12,000. Saskatchewan had only 350 in 1905, and 3,500 in 1908 when the change was made there. By 1911 she had 15,000. There should be no cost to the Government and the people of Ontario should save the big profits now being made by the Bell Co."

RESENT GUILLOTINE.

Unionists Desert House of Commons In a Body.

London, Dec. 1.—There was a remarkable scene in the House of Commons last night, when the Government applied the guillotine to 470 amendments in the report stage of the insurance bill.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, heatedly accused the Ministers of acting in obedience to the Redmondites in thus flouting Parliament in order to clear the road for home rule for Ireland. David Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as hotly replied that the Government was only following the example set by Unionist Governments.

The excitement was intense and the members faced the prospect of a division on each amendment when, on the Speaker putting the first amendment, the entire Opposition rose and made a dramatic exit from the chamber pursued by derisive Ministerial cheering. Then in a dreary montone the Speaker began formally putting the amendments and when he became fatigued the Deputy Speaker relieved him. The entire 470 amendments were adopted and in only a single case was the division challenged by the Laborites.

This concluded part one of the bill. The remaining parts will be guillotined to-day.

AN IMPOSING CEREMONY

Cardinals Receive Final Mark of Their Elevation

GREAT CROWDS PRESENT

Rome, Dec. 1.—The concluding and most impressive ceremony connected with the creation of the eighteen new cardinals occurred yesterday morning at the great public consistory at the Vatican, when fourteen princes of the church were invested with the red hat indicating their rank. For four years no consistory has been held and for centuries not so many creations have occurred at one time.

Thousands of people also gathered on balconies and roofs and along the streets to witness the passng of the cardinals, the great clerical nobles, the ambassadors and the guests invited to attned the ceremony within the walls of the vatican.

The Hall of Beatification is an immense chamber over the portico of St. Peter's. Distant strains of vocal music and the low, approaching murmur of many voices, announced the arrival of the papal procession. First came a jeweled cross, held aloft by a white-robed figure. Following came a group of Swiss guards in uniforms of red, blue and yellow, designed by Michael Angelo, the men carrying halberds. Then came the Sistine choir, singing as they marched, and after them ecclesiasticals of all orders, priests in black, monks in brown and white, heads of religious congregations and members of the papal court dressed in quaint Elizabethan costumes.

Behind were the cardinals of Curia, about twenty in number. Then followed a detachments of noble guards.

Directly afterward came the venerable figure of Pius X, in full pontifical robes, blessing the kneeling multitude as he passed. The procession closed with another detachment of guards.

When all were seated the cardinals of Curia advanced to do homage to the Pope and then to introduce into the papal presence the new princes of the church, who, one by one, knelt before Pius X, kissing his hand and foot, and receiving the papal embrace. They were then led to the places set apart for them to the accompaniment of music by the Sistine choir.

The new cardinals then again advanced separately to the foot of the throne to receive their red hats, which were held over the head of each recipient by the master of ceremonies, while the pontiff repeated in melodious voice the usual Latin formula for such occasions, after which he tenderly embraced the suppliant kneeling before him.

Pius X. then bestowed the papal benediction on all present, and with drew with all the cardinals and all others who had formed the procession. After accompanying the pontiff to his apartments, the new cardinals proceeded to the Sistine chapel to return thanks for the honor accorded them.

After the public had dispersed all the cardinals joined the Pope in the hall of the consistory for a supplementary secret consistory, when the Pope placed the cardinal's ring on their fingers. The ring is a very simple one, consisting of a sapphire, without other stones, set solidly in gold in such a way as to allow the papal coat-of-arms to be engraved on the back. It is furnished by the congregation of the propaganda, which has had this privilege since the time of Pius VII.

Titular churches were assigned to the new cardinals for the purpose of providing them with clergy to carry out religious ceremonies while they are in Rome.

CHINA GETS LOAN.

Thirty Million Dollars Forthcoming at Once.

Pekin, Dec. 1.—The National Assembly convened in secret session yesterday at the request of Yuan Shi Kai, the Premier. The number of members present has not been ascertained, but it is believed to be small. Most of those in attendance were Imperialists. The Franco-Belgian loan of $30,000,000 which was negotiated by the Japanese Baron Cottu, was approved, as also was the contract, in conjunction with the loan, for a bridge across the Yangtse River between Hankow and Wuchang. The sum of 14,000,000 taels to be delivered to the Government through the Russian and Belgian banks here will be forthcoming immediately.

There has been a significant movement of troops in and out of Pekin. Manchus departing and Chinese taking their places. It is reliably reported that by reason of these changes, the garrison is now almost equally balanced in Manchu and Chinese troops.

The action of the Regent in permitting the departure of the Manchus is believed to indicate his reliance in the loyalty of Yuan Shi Kai, but it is said to be likely that the real reason for it was that Yuan Shi Kai feared an outbreak among the troops, which would augment his difficulties and possibly result in anti-foreign disorders. Prominent Manchus, however, distrust Yuan Shi Kai and believe that his object was solely to obtain complete power.

Reports are seriously circulated here that Yuan Shi Kai intends to assume the regency, if not the throne. Friends of the Premier, fearing his assassination by either Manchus or Chinese, recently solicited several of the foreign legations to take measures to protect him. The legations, through the dean of the diplomatic corps, intimated their willingness to acquiesce.

William J. Calhoun, the American Minister, is continuing his endeavors to induce Americans in the interior to come to places where foreign protection can be afforded them.

Most of the provinces have declined or ignored the Government's summons that they send representatives to Pekin to discuss the constitution, but it is said they are willing to meet delegates from the loyal provinces at Shanghai. Yuan Shi Kai has signified his willingness to accept the constitution if the provinces are agreeable to it.

OCTOPUS NO MORE.

Standard Oil Is Now a Group of Small Firms.

New York, Dec. 1.—The career of the "oil trust" officially came to an end yesterday. The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, some times called the father of the trusts, and perhaps the most celebrated corporation in the world, will no longer control the affairs, as the holding company, of more than thirty corporations in various branches of the oil business.

Beginning this morning, these subsidiaries, which under the decree of the United States Supreme Court must conduct independently the various enterprises, will assume entire management of their own affairs.

The task of effecting dissolution was made less difficult by the fact that the subsidiary companies never lost their identity. They have retained their separate officers and board of directors, and to a large extent have conducted their own affairs from their home offices in whatever states they were. These companies, however, have had representation at 26 Broadway, the home of the New Jersey corporation, which exercised general direction over all their affairs. It is this connection which will be severed. The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey will continue to exist as it owns several large plants.

To each stockholder will be forwarded to-day his proportionate share of stock in each of the subsidiaries, so that in place of one issue of stock, he will have more than thirty.

The subsidiaries will continue to exist as heretofore, except that in cases where the same men have acted as officers or directors of more than one company, changes will be made which will avoid such duplication.

SHUSTER TACTLESS.

London Papers Say Britain Must Aid Russia.

London, Dec. 1.—The morning papers in their editorials on the Persia crisis, display a tone of great anxiety. A majority of them agree that Mr. Shuster, the Persian Treasurer-General, lacked tact and that Great Britain must support Russia, but several papers express misgivings over the outcome of Russia's action and what they term the administrative anarchy that is likely to result from Mr. Shuster's dismissal. By some it is feared that the success of Russian diplomacy will leave Persia little real independence.

The Daily News makes a serious attack on Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, accusing him of constantly yielding to Russia in order to manoeuvre other powers against Germany. The paper asserts that Great Britain's support of Russia now will mean the annexation or partition of Persia entirely in Russian interests, leaving Russia and England with a long and bad conterminous frontier in Asia and committing England to the necessity of maintaining a costly army to guard it. Moreover, The Daily News adds, England's support of Russia is deadlier because it will probably prevent the United States moving in Mr. Shuster's behalf.

Waves Swept Queen's Cabin.

London, Dec. 1.—Reports reaching here from the steamship Medina, which is conveying King George and Queen Mary to the Indian Durbar, indicate that the distinguished passengers had an extremely rough passage through the Bay of Biscay.

The sea, which is usually rough in the bay, was uncommonly turbulent and a portion of the Queen's apartments was flooded. Queen Mary was forced to vacate hastily and take up her quarters in the special storm cabin with a swinging cot, but the King, who is a good sailor, continued to occupy his usual cabin.

The Medina, which proved herself a good sea vessel, suffered less than the convoying warships, which were severely buffeted by the gale. Several of them sustained damage to boats and railings and the King, appreciating the difficulties under which they were laboring, ordered them to steam ahead of the Medina.

Increasing Britain's Navy.

London, Dec. 1.—The probability of a big naval loan in the near future is revived by The Pall Mall Gazette, which anticipates that $150,000,000, and possibly more, will be raised supplemental to the usual naval estimates. It is argued that in view of the campaign in Germany in favor of an increased navy for that country, it is necessary for Great Britain to show that she is determined to preserve the "2 to 1" standard. The provision of adequate docks for the dreadnought battleships also necessitates heavy expenditures.

Westfield Man the Victim.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—The mangled remains found near the Canadian Pacific Railway track at Bordeaux, Tuesday, are thought to be those of Arthur Jones, Westbury, Ont. Lieut. Tetreault, who is investigating the case, found part of the victim's coat torn from the body, in the pocket of which was found a note. The note read: "My name is Arthur Jones. In case of accident, notify Mrs. Lena Jones 119 Franklin avenue, Westfield, Mass."

Support Commission Plan.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—At a meeting of Conservative members representing Farmers Bank ridings, held yesterday morning, it was unanimously decided to support the application of last week's delegation for the appointment of a royal commission, and for such relief as the findings of such a commission will warrant.

Hard Winter in United States.

New York, Dec. 1.—The national organization of the Salvation Army, which has been gathering reports from its charity relief officials in all parts of the United States, announces that the approaching winter will be a period of great suffering for the very poor people, especially of the larger cities.

FOR HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT

The Government Announces a Wholesale Policy

BULK OF ESTIMATES PASS

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—That the country should be prepared to face the expenditure of at least $100,000,000 for the development and improvement of national free ports on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts and the great lakes, was the statement made by Hon. F. D. Monk to the House in committee of supply last evening. The whole question, he declared, should be considered in the light of the admirable report of the transportation commission of 1903.

Hon. J. D. Hazen declared that the question of harbor improvement should be approached from a broad and national and not any local standpoint. The money spent, whether in Montreal, St. John or elsewhere, was, while incidentally a benefit to those ports, far more to the general benefit of the people of Canada.

Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of the Interior, declared that the Government would immediately inaugurate a vigorous immigration policy, which would be in the interests, not of one part, but of all parts of the country, and regardless of race, creed and nationality.

"We have reached a period in the development of this country," said Mr. Rogers, "in which it is necessary to have co-operation between the Dominion and the provinces," and in this regard he paid a tribute to the qualifications of Arthur Hawkes, one of whose chief duties it would be to make a report on this phase of the question.

The House made considerable progress in passing the balance of the estimates for the fiscal year ending 1912, there being little cause for dissension, as they were practically the unvoted remainder of the estimates brought down by the late Government.

When the committee rose and reported at 10.35 p.m., estimates, aggregating nearly $40,000,000 had been voted, at the record rate of about $20,000,000 an hour.

In response to a question by Hon. Charles Murphy, the Premier stated that thirty employes had been dismissed and twenty-four engaged by the authority of the Speaker and the sergeant-at-arms in their departments since Sept. 22.

The Postmaster-General informed Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux that the parcel post convention between France and Canada had been signed by the French Government.

G. H. Boivin (Shefford) had a Ne Temere trap laid for the Government. He asked: "Has the Dominion Government power to legalize or validate every marriage solemnized anywhere in Canada?"

Mr. Borden declined to bite. The jurisdiction of the Dominion, he stated, was laid down in the B.N.A. Act, section 91, sub-section 26, and of the provinces in the same act, sec. 92, sub-section 12.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "That's safe."

Hon. R. L. Borden: "Not only safe, but accurate."

The Minister of Marine informed A. Lachance (Quebec Centre) that J. B. Laberte, R. Larue and G. Tanguay had been removed from the Quebec harbor commission in the interests of the public service. There was no intention to close the yards and workshops of the Marine Department at Quebec.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Benj. Smith, harbormaster at Sambro, N.S., was drowned last evening.

Wm. J. Finn, aged four years, was trampled to death while sledding in Ottawa, and his brother, Albert H., aged six, is not likely to recover.

Edward McGowan, aged 38, was jammed while coupling cars on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway at Kingston, and died in the Hotel Dieu.

A salute of twenty-one guns was fired at noon to-day from Nepean Point, Ottawa, in honor of the birthday of the Queen Mother Alexandra.

An increase of more than a million and a quarter is shown in the statement of November customs receipts handed out by the Department yesterday.

Civil servants must not in future occupy civic offices which keep them away from their Government duties. They may become members of bodies which meet in the evenings.

John Robertson, the frontier's oldest locomotive engineer, died at Niagara Falls yesterday. He was eighty years old, and was the driver of the first engine to haul Canadian troops during the Fenian Raid.

While students of Stirling High School were passing their noon hour skating, the ice gave way and three of them went through, one, Stewart Haig, aged 14 years, and son of John Haig, meeting his death.

Divorce For Upton Sinclair.

New York, Dec. 1.—Upton Sinclair, the author and Socialist, will get his divorce from his wife, Meta F. Sinclair, if the court approves the recommendation made yesterday by Referee W. S. Kelley, who has been taking testimony in the case since October 23.

Want Right to Strike.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Railway conductors will ask Parliament to amend the industrial disputes act by removing what the men regard as oppressive provisions, notably the clause which deprives the men of the right to strike where an investigation is in prospect.

Sir William Grantham Dead.

London, Dec. 1.—Sir William Grantham, judge of the High Court of Justice, died yesterday of pneumonia. He was born in 1835, and after studying at King's College School, entered the legal profession. In 1874 he was returned to Parliament as Conservative member for the County of East Surrey which he represented until 1885. In the same year he was elected member for East Croydon, but was obliged to retire from political life in January, 1886, on his appointment as judge. He was then created a knight. Sir William visited Canada last year year and delivered public addresses in several cities including Toronto.

Opium Conference.

The Hague, Dec. 1.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Twelve nations will be represented by delegates at the international opium conference, which meets here to-day. These are the United States, Great Britain, China, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Russia and Siam.

Bishop Charles H. Brent of the Episcopal Church in the Philippine Islands will preside over the discussions.

The conference is an outcome of the opium commission which assembled at Shanghai in February, 1909.

QUALITY, SKILL, & CARE,
THE LADDER BY WHICH WE CLIMB
To Those Requiring Glasses

Eight years is a short time in the life of man, but it is a period of sufficient length, in business, to carry with it a guarantee of honest effort and satisfaction.

For this number of years I have carried on an Optical business in this city and I have fitted thousands of people with glasses. The fact that I have been successful leads me to believe that my methods are right and for that reason, I wish to give you the additional assurance that there will be no change in them in the future. I am in a position to give you the best of everything that means eye comfort.

It is barely possible that you are in need of new lenses, frame or an eyeglass and I would ask that you give me the privilege of giving your eyes a scientific examination and of providing the glasses for you if you need them.

I exercise the greatest care in the examination and fitting of the glasses. I do not overlook the feature of making glasses which will add greatly to the personal appearance of those who wear them. In other words, every detail will have my most careful consideration.

I carry the largest up-to-date Optical Stock in Peterboro, and grind all my own lenses. You will incur no obligation by calling and consulting with me.

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"I am very glad to hear you say so," Wrayson declared. "But the question is—if he is not on this business, what the devil is he doing here?"

"Have you the entree to the chateau?" Duncan asked abruptly.

"I am invited to dine there his evening," Wrayson answered.

"Then, if I were you," Duncan said, "I should make a point of ascertaining, if you can, the personality of this Madame de Melbain."

Wrayson nodded.

"I shall see her, of course," he said, "and I will do so."

"My own idea," Duncan said deliberately, "is that it is in connection with her presence here that the landlord of the inn, and the villagers, have received these injunctions about strangers. Try and find out what you can about her, and in the meantime I will look after the gentleman over there. He wants to be friendly—I will make a companion of him. When you come back to-night we will have another talk."

"It is awfully good of you," Wrayson said. "And now—I've one thing more to say."

Duncan nodded.

"Go on," he said.

"I have taken you into my confidence so far as was possible," Wrayson said slowly. "I am going to ask you a question now."

"I cannot promise to answer it," Duncan declared, taking up his pipe and carefully refilling it.

"Naturally! But I am going to ask it," Wrayson said. "An hour or so ago I was talking to the young lady in front of the inn, and you were watching us. I saw your face at the window as she was driving off."

"Well?"

The monosyllable was hard and dry.

"You are neither an inquisitive nor an emotional person," Wrayson said. "I a msure of that. I want an explanation."

"Of what?"

"Of your suddenly becoming both."

Duncan had lit his pipe now, and smoked for a few moments furiously.

"I will not bandy words with you," "I am sure of that. I want an explanation which I cannot give."

Wrayson looked as he felt, dissatisfied.

"Look here," he said, "I'm not asking you to explain why the sight of that young lady should be a matter of emotion to you. You know who she is, I am convinced. What else?"

Duncan shook his head.

"I'm sorry," he said. "You may trust me or not, as you like. All I can say about myself is this. I've been up against it hard—very hard. So far as regards the ordinary affairs of life I simply don't count. I'm a negation—a purely subjective personage. I may be able to help you a little here—I shall certainly never be in your way. My interest in the place—there, I will tell you that, is purely of a sentimental nature. My interest in life itsef is something of the same sort. Take my advice. Let it go at that."

"I will," Wrayson declared, with sudden heartiness.

Duncan nodded.

"I'll go and look after our little friend in the yellow boots," he said.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Punctually at half-past seven the carriage arrived to take Wrayson to the chateau. A few minutes' drive along a road fragrant with the perfume of hay, and with the pleasant sound of the reaping machines in his ears, and the carriage turned into the park through the great iron gates which opened this time without demur. By the side of the road was a clear trout stream, a little further away a herd of deer stood watching the carriage pass. The park was uncultivated but picturesque, becoming more wooded as they climbed the hill leading to the chateau. Wrayson smiled to himself as he remembered that this magnificent home and estate belonged to the woman who was his neighbour at Battersea, and whom he himself had been more than half inclined to put down as an adventuress.

A major-domo in quiet black clothes, who seemed to reflect in his tone and manner the subdued splendour of the place, received him at the door, passing him on at once to a footman in powdered hair and resplendent livery. Across a great hall, whose white stone floor, height, and stained-glass windows gave Wrayson the impression that he had found his way by mistake into the nave of a cathedral, he was ushered into a drawing-room, whose modernity and comparatively low ceiling were almost a relief. Here there were books and flowers and music, some exquisite water-colours upon the white walls, newspapers and magazines lying about, which gave the place a habitable air. A great semi-circular window commanded a wonderful view of the park, but Wrayson had little time to admire it. A door was opened at the further end of the room, and he heard the soft rustling of a woman's gown upon the carpet. It was Louise who came towards him.

She was dressed in white muslin, unrelieved by ornament or any suggestion of colour. Her cheeks were unusually pale, and the shadows under her eyes seemed to speak of trouble. Yet Wrayson thought that he had never seen her look more beautiful. She gave him her hand with a faint smile of welcome, and permitted him to raise it to his lips.

"This is very, very foolish," she said softly, "and I know that I ought to be ashamed of myself."

"On the contrary," he answered. "I think that it is very natural. But, seriously, I feel a little overpowered. You won't want to live always in a casle, will you, Louise?"

She sighed, and smiled, and sighed again.

"I am afraid that our castle, Herbert," she murmured, "will exist only in the air! But listen. I must speak to you before the others come in."

"I am all attention," he assured her.

"It is about Madame de Melbain," she began, a little hesitatingly.

He waited for her to continue. She seemed to be in some difficulty.

"I want you to watch and do just what we others do," she said, "and not to be surprised if some of our arrangements seem a little curious. For instance, although she is the elder, do not give her your arm for dinner. She will go in first alone, and you must take me."

"I can assure you," Wrayson said, smiling, "that I shall make no difficulty about that."

"And she doesn't like to be talked to very much," Louise continued.

"I will humour her in that also," Wrayson promised. "She is a good sort to let me come here at all."

"She is very kind and very considerate," Louise said, "and her life has been a very unhappy one."

Wrayson moved his chair a little nearer.

"Need we talk about her any more?" he asked. "There is so much I want to say to you about ourselves."

She looked at him for a moment, a little sadly, a little wistfully.

"Ah! don't," she murmured. "Don't talk about definite things at all. For to-night—to-night only, let us drift!"

He smiled at her reassuringly.

"Don't be afraid," he said. "I am not going to ask you any questions. I am not going to ask for any explanations. I think that we have passed all that. It is of the future I wanted to speak."

"Don't," she begged softly. "Of the past I dare not think, nor of the future. It is only the present which belongs to us."

"The present and the future," he answered firmly.

She rose suddenly to her feet, and Wrayson instinctively followed her example. They were no longer alone. Two women, who had entered by a door at the further end of the apartment, were slowly approaching them. The foremost was tall and dark, a little slim, perhaps, but with an elegant figure, and a carriage of singular dignity. Her face was youthful, and her brown eyes were soft and clear as the eyes of a girl, but her dark hair was plentifully streaked with grey, and there was about her whole appearance an air of repressed sadness.

"This is Mr. Wrayson, is it not?" she asked, in a very sweet voice, but with a strong foreign accent. "We have so few visitors that one can scarcely make a mistake. You are very welcome."

She did not offer to shake hands, and Wrayson contented himself with a low bow.

"You are very kind," he murmured.

"Monsieur le Baron," she remarked, turning to an elderly gentleman who had just entered, "will doubtless find your coming pleasant. The entertainment of three ladies must have seemed at times a little trying. Let me make you gentlemen known to one another. Monsieur Wrayson, Monsieur le Baron de Courcelles. And Ida," she added, turning to her companion, who had moved a few steps apart, "permit that I present to you, also, Mr. Wrayson—Mademoiselle de Courcelles."

The conversation for a moment or two followed the obvious lines. Madame de Melbain and Louise had drawn a little apart; a few remarks as to the beauty of the chateau and its situation passed between Wrayson and the Baron. The name of its owner was mentioned, and Wrayson indicated his acquaintance with her. At the sound of her name, Madame de Melbain turned somewhat abruptly round, and seemed to be listening, but at that moment the door was thrown open, and the major-domo of the household, who had received Wrayson, announced dinner. He directly addressed Madame de Melbain.

"Madame is served," he murmured respectfully.
